REDS ATTACK ON CENTRAL FRONT

Bus Plunges Off Bridge Ramp, 7 Die

'Loyal' Dockmen To Defy Pickets, Union Head Says

New York Port "Open," Ryan Tells Truman

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (AP) — Opposing union factions in the east coast's wildcat dock strike sent separate messages to President Truman today — and a top White House aide expressed belief that a break in the dispute was imminent.

But behind the talk was the threat of a renewal of the violence that has flared sporadically along New York's waterfront during the past two weeks.

Today's major developments in the strike were:

(1) Joseph P. Ryan, president of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association, told Mr. Truman in his telegram that back-to-work longshoremen tomorrow would "go through" and "over" any picket lines.

Ryan Says Port Open

Ryan said, too, that "the port of New York is open" and "thousands of loyal Americans have returned to work on piers in all sections of the port."

(2) John J. (Gene) Sampson, wildcat strike leader, told the chief executive in his telegram that he would urge an immediate end to the strike—if Mr. Truman would set up an "emergency impartial body" to review the strike issues.

(3) Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman said he had received word definitely indicating that the dockers would return to work tomorrow in response to Truman's plea.

Steelman's statement brought a sharp denial, however, from Sampson.

The insurgent union leader called Steelman's statement "applesauce" and said his position remained the same as he outlined in his wire to Truman.

Port At Standstill 14 Days

Sampson could not be reached for comment on Ryan's assertion that longshoremen would "go through" and "over" picket lines tomorrow.

Neither was there any confirmation of Ryan's statement that thousands of dock workers already had returned to their jobs.

The sprawling port has been nearly at a standstill for 14 days—but there have been some ship movements, particularly passenger vessels, and some work has been done on military cargoes.

Sunday usually is a relatively quiet day on the waterfront.

Although the port of Boston is tied up—like New York—Portland, Me., and Philadelphia dockworkers voted over the weekend to handle all but diverted cargoes.

Mrs. Rosenberg Explains Korea Rotation Policy

12,000 Due Home By End Of November

TOKYO, Monday, Oct. 29 (AP) — Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, assistant secretary of defense in charge of manpower, heads for home today, having assured that 12,000 to 15,000 U. S. combat troops will be brought out of Korea by the end of next month under a new point-rotation formula.

The rotation program calls for return to the United States of men in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force who have accumulated 37 points—if their replacements are on hand.

After a seven day tour of Japan and Korea, Mrs. Rosenberg in a press conference Sunday answered a long-standing question about the return of men from Korea before winter if they served there through last winter's tough campaign.

Applies To Combat Troops

She said this policy applied strictly to combat troops, not rear-echelon men. About 12,000 to 15,000 veteran frontline troops still remain to be rotated by the end of November.

The rotation program is based on two factors: 1. Length of service in the Far East and Korea. 2. Availability of trained replacements to insure that combat effectiveness of the American forces will not be cut down.

Mrs. Rosenberg explained that the 37-point rotation policy worked this way:

1. Four points monthly to men in the combat zone. This includes division headquarters.

2. Two points monthly to men "behind the lines" duty, including corps headquarters.

Wounded Get Full Credit

3. One and one-half points monthly to single men in Japan for each month since July 1950, and to all men—single or married— on Okinawa, Guam and in the Philippines.

4. One point per month is given a married man serving in Japan whose dependents are in Japan.

A man wounded in action in Korea, if he received the Purple Heart, is credited with the same time during hospitalization as if he remained with his unit.

A man who returns from confirmed prisoner-of-war or missing-in-action status receives the same four points monthly he would have received in combat during that time.

Israeli Alliance Ideas Requested

TEL AVIV, Israel, Oct. 28 (AP) — The United States, Britain, France and Turkey today invited Israel to submit her ideas on the projected Middle East defense command which Egypt has spurned, reliable sources reported.

The four powers thus moved into the most ticklish area of their movement to organize Middle East defense—the mutual suspicion and rivalry between Israel and her unreconciled Arab neighbors.

Informants said U. S. Ambassador Monnet B. Davis, British Minister Sir Knox Helm, French Minister Edouard Guyon and Turkish Minister Seyfullah Esin made an unusual Sunday call at the foreign ministry with notes from their governments. The Sunday calls were said to have been made because of the urgency of their mission.

Less than two weeks ago Egypt slapped the four powers in the face by bluntly rejecting their invitation to become a founding member of the Middle East alliance and establish an internationalized defense force for the Suez Canal.

Egypt took the attitude that the British must withdraw from the canal area and the Sudan before she could entertain the idea.

Vehicle Goes Out Of Control, Falls 40 Feet

22 Hurt; Concrete Chunk Is Blamed

OAKLAND, Calif., Oct. 28 (AP)—A big Greyhound bus plunged 40 feet off an approach ramp to the bay bridge today, killing seven persons and injuring the other 22 occupants pinned upside down in the pancaked wreckage.

The bus spun out of control after striking a chunk of concrete knocked into its path by the crash of a motorist minutes before.

The motorist, whose car had smashed into a traffic-dividing abutment on the cloverleaf bridge approach, also was injured seriously.

Twelve bus occupants were in critical condition in hospitals.

"Get me out, get me out," the bus survivors screamed during the hour and 46 minutes required to pry open the wreckage.

The bus, after hitting the concrete chunk, swerved across another traffic lane, crashed through a steel retaining fence bordering the ramp and fell upside down on a railroad right of way.

The accident occurred 300 yards short of the bay's waters while the bus, inbound from Salt Lake City, was circling in the cloverleaf traffic system on its way into the Oakland bus terminal.

The last bus occupant removed was an 11-year-old boy, James Pete Smith, Vallejo, Calif., who kept pleading:

"Where's my mother, where's my mother. Is she all right?"

She was among the injured.

Shortly before the bus hove into sight, a car driven by Orville Charles Russell, Jr., formerly of Independence, Kan., smashed into the concrete divider and overturned, pinning him in a pool of spilled gasoline. He was on his way to his new home in nearby Richmond.

Police Officer Art Dezotte said the car crash broke off a piece of concrete three feet long, 1½ feet wide and 1½ feet thick. It was thrown into the Oakland-bound lane just minutes before the bus appeared.

It caromed across the opposite lanes of traffic, ripped through 100 feet of the restraining fence and went the 40 feet with a crash that shook nearby homes.

One of the first to reach the bus was S. Q. Bryant, a negro construction worker. He and Dezotte smashed windows and removed four or five persons.

"At first," Bryant said, "everyone seemed to be unconscious. There were moans but no screaming that I can remember. Then, as we kept working, more and more seemed to regain consciousness. That's when the screaming and crying began."

Among the dead was the bus driver.

Liberals Pledge Aid To Churchill

LONDON, Oct. 28 (AP)—Winston Churchill tonight won a qualified pledge of support from the Liberal Party for his new Conservative government and its narrow majority in the House of Commons.

But Liberal Party headquarters announced that Clement Davies, the Liberal leader, had turned down an offer of a place in the government.

The Liberals pledged their six votes to the aid of the Conservatives' 18-seat majority in the House of Commons on "measures clearly conceived in the interest of the country as a whole."

Wearing his old "siren suit"—the zip-fronted overalls which he adopted in London's blitz — Churchill conferred with Davies for a second time today. He had called in the Liberal leader for the first time last night.

In offering Davies a place, Churchill was trying to fulfill a campaign proposal to create a "broad based" government to deal with Britain's deepening dilemma in economic and foreign affairs.

Truce Talk Site Balloon Explodes, Burning 13 Yanks

PANMUNJOM, Korea, Oct. 28 (AP) —One of four hydrogen-filled balloons over the armistice talk site exploded this afternoon, burning 13 American soldiers.

Some soldiers extinguished their flaming clothing by leaping into a nearby river.

The big yellow balloon had been lowered for refilling when it exploded.

The balloons are to warn aircraft away from the area.

Autopsy May Provide Clue To Cause Of Doctor's Death

LYNN, Mass., Oct. 28 (AP)—Investigators tonight awaited the outcome of an examination of the vital organs of Dr. Albert H. Covner for a clue to the cause of his death 16 days after three teen-aged baby sitters snatched $20,000 from his home.

The 51-year-old heart specialist's body was found Saturday in North Reading woods, about 20 miles from his Nahant home. His automobile was about 500 feet from the body.

Police said a small bottle of nitroglycerine, a heart stimulant, was found near the body and several types of pills were in his pockets.

Relatives and friends told investigators that he had been "terribly upset" since his baby-sitter, Roberta McCauley, 15, and two other girls disappeared with the contents of a strong box for a wild spree in New York.

Medical Examiner Thomas P. Devlin said the cause of death probably would not be known for 48 hours.

With hundreds attending, services for the highly respected physician were held today at a funeral home. Three hundred mourners packed into the chamber designed to accommodate 200 and 500 stood outside in the rain.

Blueprint Submitted For UMT Could Involve 800,000 Year

Leaving The Generals At A Distance

Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, assistant secretary of defense, talks with men of the 24th Division on the central front in Korea. Mrs. Rosenberg led the men up a hillside away from the generals accompanying her (small group in background) so she could get the GIs' point of view. She heads for home today, having assured that 12,000 to 15,000 U. S. combat troops will be brought out of Korea by the end of next month under a new point-rotation formula.

A-Bomb Detonated In Nevada Produces Zig-Zag After-Cloud

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Oct. 28 (AP) — A dazzling new weapon in America's atomic bag — a medium sized bomb with a lazy Z-shaped after-cloud — was dropped over the Nevada desert today.

The bomb, apparently dropped from an Air Force B-29, exploded with a high flash and afterglow, visible on Mt. Charleston, 50 miles away.

The ball of fire seared against a purple mountain background at 7:30 a. m., P. S. T., (10:20 a. m., E. S. T.) for several brief moments it put the bright morning sun to shame.

Odd Zig-Zag Cloud

The bomb burst at an elevation that appeared to be at least 1,000 feet above the floor of Yucca Flat. Its flash was considerably greater than that of the baby a-bomb, unveiled at the Atomic Energy Commission grounds last Monday. Observers agreed that it did not appear as bright as the blasts set off here last January and February.

Strangely, the detonation, for all its spectacular aspects, was not felt by observers on Charleston peak, or in Las Vegas, 75 miles away.

But the odd, zig-zagging cloud which stretched for miles across the desert before disintegrating was seen by hundreds of early Sunday morning risers.

This was America's 19th atomic explosion, unofficially. With Russia's known trio of blasts, it brought the world's total to 22.

Weather Is Perfect

The AEC declined to verify that the bomb was dropped from a plane, issuing only its routine announcement that there had been a nuclear explosion at the Nevada test site.

The experiment, the second nuclear burst in the current AEC series, was conducted in perfect weather. The three planes spent more than an hour hovering over the target before the detonation came.

Slight radiation was reported by the AEC radiological safety unit in the area between Beatty and Lathrop Wells, Nev., 35 miles southwest of the test site. But, said the AEC, the radiation was barely measurable and was in no way harmful to humans, animals, or crops.

Demos To Pick New Chairman Wednesday

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP)—The Democratic National Committee meets here Wednesday to pick a new chairman with Frank McKinney, Indianapolis banker, reported to be No. 1 man in the list of those who might get the nod from President Truman.

A committee official, who asked not to be quoted by name, told a reporter that unless Mr. Truman changes his mind in the meantime, he expects McKinney's name to be put forward.

The President himself has said about 30 names are under consideration in the hunt for a successor to William M. Boyle, Jr., who is resigning.

There are indications that John Carroll, former Colorado congressman and now a White House assistant, and Federal Judge James P. McGranery of Pennsylvania, also are high on the list

More Jobs, Higher Consumer Income Predicted In 1952

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP)—The Bureau of Agricultural Economics predicted today that 1952 will bring more jobs, higher consumer incomes and perhaps some additional price increases.

The bureau said the increase in income is likely to be limited to non-farmers. It said farmers are not expected to share in the prospective boost in economic activity because of rising production costs.

In an economic outlook report for the new year, the bureau said "non-agricultural income is currently at a record high and is expected to continue to rise in 1952."

Raid Turns Up Iran Red Plot

TEHRAN, Iran, Oct. 28 (AP) — A Communist plot to overthrow Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi was reported uncovered in a police raid last night on an underground headquarters of the outlawed Red Tudeh Party.

Authorities said the raid turned up the most important discovery in the last three years.

The party was declared illegal after the Shah was nicked by assassin's bullets in February, 1949, but it has continued operations covertly.

In last night's raid police reported seizure of documents and thousands of leaflets calling on Iranians to get rid of the Shah and found a "national government."

Police said they found "very important documents which may lead to further discoveries." The pamphlets attacked the Shah's character and morals. An undisclosed number of Tudeh Party members was arrested. The Tudeh party was officially blamed for tearing down street signs on Tehran's Avenue Churchill Friday after Winston Churchill's election victory in Britain. The Avenue was named during the historic Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin conference here in 1943.

55th Great Grandchild

DEEPWATER, Mo., Oct. 28 (AP) — Mrs. Betty Parscale greeted her fifty-fifth great grandchild at her home here today, and with trigger quick arithmetic figured she now has 98 living descendants.

No. 98 is Charles Edward Cook, four-week-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Cook of Clinton, Mo.

Egypt's State Council Backs Mobilization

CAIRO, Egypt, Oct. 28 (AP)—The Egyptian State Council today approved general mobilization of manpower and drafting of all Egyptians between 18 and 50 "in case of war or threat of war."

It also provided for setting up a high council of war headed by Prime Minister Mustapha El Nahas Pasha.

The state council has the status of a supreme court.

To become law, this preparedness move in the British-Egyptian dispute over the Suez and the Sudan needs only approval of the cabinet ministers. They drafted the mobilization bill.

When parliament is in recess, as it is now, the cabinet can issue decrees "if this is required by urgent circumstances."

Abdel Razak El Sanhoury Pasha, chairman of the state council, told reporters his judges have been studying the general mobilization since long before the Anglo-Egyptian crisis.

Sources close to the government said the cabinet would step up final approval of the bill "to be ready for any developments."

The government yesterday gave Britain formal notice of the actions taken two weeks ago to break old treaty rights giving the British a share in ruling the Suez Canal zone and the million-square-mile Sudan.

Britain in the past fortnight has poured thousands of troop reinforcements into the Canal zone and has military control of the canal in the face of Egyptian labor, food and water supply boycotts and mob demonstrations.

Soviet Press Curbs Attacks On Churchill

MOSCOW, Oct. 28 (AP) — A letup in Soviet press attacks on Winston Churchill led Western observers to express a belief today that Russia may be feeling for an opening to negotiate over East-West differences.

Most Western diplomats stationed here felt the Russians would welcome a direct approach by the new British prime minister to ease the tension.

First-Year Cost Is Set At More Than $4 Billion

Civilian Commission Gives Grim Warning

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP) — A blueprint for a universal military training system—a program that could involve 800,000 youths annually and cost more than $4 billion in the first year — was disclosed today by the new National Security Training Commission.

The commission prefaced its recommendations to Congress with some grim words about the world outlook and the need for UMT, among them these:

The clear prospect is that the present generation must live in danger for many years" and therefore should "learn to live with danger calmly and confidently."

Because today's military technology permits an enemy to strike directly at the United States by sea or air, "the American people must be prepared, like their forebears to pushed the frontier westward, to meet a savage and deadly attack at any moment."

"The return to frontier conditions demands a frontier response."

The frontier response, the commission argued, is to have every physically and mentally able youth taught in the "art of survival and self-defense."

The five-man civilian commission, headed by James W. Wadsworth, a former Republican member of Congress, was formed last June after Congress had approved the broad idea of UMT. But in doing that (as part of an amendment to the draft law) Congress left details on the form and operation of UMT for the commission to draft and submit to the lawmakers. It also left to some time in the uncertain future the date upon which a training program could be started.

Here are some of the points the commission's report made:

1. A fully operating program would mean that about 800,000 youths 18 years old would get six months of training, then for the next seven and a half years be in a reserve component (reserves of the Army, Navy, Marines or Air Force or the ground or air National Guard). A UMT program starting off on a limited scale might involve training about 60,000 men annually.

2. The cost of a full-scale program is estimated by the Defense Department for the first year at $4,187,983,600, with the annual cost later dropping to $2,158,746,200. The limited program cost estimate was $398,895,210 for the starting year, $179,291,680 thereafter.

3. The commission thought the military's estimate cost was too high, that it might be possible to reduce it. For one thing, the commission raised questions about the military belief that for each two trainees one more person would be needed in the system to support it through maintenance and other service.

4. Induction of trainees would be through the existing Selective Service system used for the drafting of men into the regular forces. The trainees, however, would not be members of the regular armed forces, although they would be trained for military duty and subject generally to the same military law governing the armed forces.

5. Actually the system could not be "universal" because there is a level of physical and mental standards below which it would be unprofitable, from a military standpoint, to go in the UMT program. But these unqualified youths could be mobilized and their civilian skills used in emergency.

Convicted Killer Reprieved As Woman Admits She Lied

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 28 (AP)—A convicted slayer, scheduled to die in the state prison's electric chair tomorrow night, today received a temporary reprieve after a scorned woman admitted she had lied at his trial.

Francis C. Smith, 26, was granted a reprieve until at least next Jan. 14 by Gov. John Lodge this afternoon in the latest development in the case which broke over the weekend.

Edith Springer, 23, Stamford, now serving time at the Wetumpka, Ala., state prison, a diminutive brunette, who admitted on Friday that she committed perjury at the trial, was a key witness against Smith and George Lowdon, 23.

Smith was sentenced to die in the electric chair at the state prison in nearby Kethersfield, and Lowden, who pleaded guilty to second degree murder, was sentenced to life.

Both were indicted in the slaying of an elderly night watchman during a burglarly at the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, Greenwich, July 23, 1949.

Miss Springer said she lied against Smith and Lowden because she wanted to get revenge against Lowden because he "was spreading lies about me."

U. N. Armored Unit Fights Out Of Enemy Trap

One MIG Downed In New Jet Battles

U. S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Monday, Oct. 29 (AP)—Chinese Reds hurled new assaults today at a hill mass southeast of strategic Kumsong, after the Allies had reported that Central Korean city "neutralized."

Some 1,000 screaming Reds attacked the hills in the predawn darkness. A pooled news dispatch did not report the outcome. An earlier assault in company strength was reported repulsed.

The fresh attacks underscored an Allied briefing officer's report Sunday that the Chinese had regrouped after being driven northward in the recent U. N. drives on the central front.

On the eastern front, officers said the Reds had built five bridges across the Pukhan River north of Yanggu and were rebuilding their forces in that area.

Heavy fighting raged Sunday north of Kumsong. An Allied armored task force ramming beyond the rubbled city fought out of a Communist artillery trap, but four 47-ton Patton tanks were crippled.

AP Correspondent Milo Farneti reported the Reds shelled the armored column two and a half hours at a road junction northwest of Kumsong. He said Allied casualties were light.

Three new jet battles raged Sunday high over "MIG Alley" in Northwest Korea.

The aerial encounters, fought at speeds of more than 600 miles an hour, pitted a total of 64 deadly U. S. Sabre jets against 160 or more swept-wing MIGs of Russian manufacture. It was the eighth straight day of jet combat.

The U. S. Fifth Air Force claimed one MIG destroyed and one damaged in the flashing action.

Headquarters said all Sabres returned safely from these encounters, but admitted the loss elsewhere of one jet shot down by ground fire. The pilot was rescued by helicopter.

Eight Japan-based B-29 Superforts bombed Communist bridge facilities at Songchon in Northwest Korea without opposition.

Subcommittees Again Tackle Buffer Issue

MUNSAN, Korea, Monday, Oct. 29 (AP) — Allied and Communist negotiators met at Panmunjom today for the fifth time in an effort to break the deadlock over a buffer zone — a necessary step toward ending the Korean war.

The meeting began as scheduled at 11 a.m. (9 p.m., EST, Sunday).

The Communists want a buffer zone five to 12 miles south of the present battle line. The Allies insist on the battle line, mostly well inside North Korea.

A United Nations command spokesman estimated the difference involved about 1,000 square miles.

There was no indication that any quick settlement was in prospect. However, Communist correspondents at Panmunjom expressed optimism.

"I feel certain a few miles are not going to hold up an agreement," one of them told Allied correspondents while the subcommittees of both sides were meeting Sunday.

Red Air Power Challenges U. N.

TOKYO, Monday, Oct. 29 (AP) — Communist air power today is hurling its most serious threat at Allied air supremacy since the Korean war began.

In the past eight days the Reds have pressed what the U. S. Far East Air Forces officially describe as "the most intensive and most prolonged aerial warfare" of the 16-months-old conflict.

Not counting Sunday's three battles, in which one Red jet was destroyed and one damaged, the Far East Air Forces gave this score for the previous week:

Enemy planes destroyed 14; probably destroyed, 6; heavily damaged, 29.

Allied planes destroyed, 14, including four B-29 bombers; and an undisclosed number damaged. These are the greatest one-week Allied losses of the war.

The Allies still control the Korean skies, and air commanders are confident they can continue to do so, but it is taking a growing toll of men and planes. Tactics may have to be revised.

25 Die In Plane Crash

GUATEMALA, Guatemala, Oct 28 (AP)— A toupe of Guatemalan stage and radio artists was all but wiped out yesterday in the crash of a Guatemalan army air force C-47 transport plane that killed 25 of 27 persons aboard.

It caromed across the opposite lanes of traffic, ripped through 100 feet of the restraining fence and went the 40 feet with a crash that shook nearby homes.

One of the first to reach the bus was S. Q. Bryant, a negro construction worker. He and Dezotte smashed windows and removed four or five persons.

"At first," Bryant said, "everyone seemed to be unconscious. There were moans but no screaming that I can remember. Then, as we kept working, more and more seemed to regain consciousness. That's when the screaming and crying began."

Truce Talk Site Balloon Explodes, Burning 13 Yanks

PANMUNJOM, Korea, Oct. 28 (AP) —One of four hydrogen-filled balloons over the armistice talk site exploded this afternoon, burning 13 American soldiers.

Some soldiers extinguished their flaming clothing by leaping into a nearby river.

The big yellow balloon had been lowered for refilling when it exploded.

The balloons are to warn aircraft away from the area.

Autopsy May Provide Clue To Cause Of Doctor's Death

LYNN, Mass., Oct. 28 (AP)—Investigators tonight awaited the outcome of an examination of the vital organs of Dr. Albert H. Covner for a clue to the cause of his death 10 days after three teen-aged baby sitters snatched $20,000 from his home.

The 51-year-old heart specialist's body was found Saturday in North Reading woods, about 20 miles from his Nahant home. His automobile was about 500 feet from the body.

Police said a small bottle of nitroglycerine, a heart stimulant, was found near the body and several types of pills were in his pockets.

Relatives and friends told investigators that he had been "terribly upset" since his baby-sitter, Roberta McCauley, 15, and two other girls disappeared with the contents of a strong box for a wild spree in New York.

Medical Examiner Thomas P. Devlin said the cause of death probably would not be known for 48 hours.

With hundreds attending, services for the highly respected physician were held today at a funeral home. Three hundred mourners packed into the chamber designed to accommodate 200 and 500 stood outside in the rain.

Blueprint Submitted For UMT Could Involve 800,000 Year

Leaving The Generals At A Distance

Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, assistant secretary of defense, talks with men of the 24th Division on the central front in Korea. Mrs. Rosenberg led the men up a hillside away from the generals accompanying her (small group in background) so she could get the GIs' point of view. She heads for home today, having assured that 12,000 to 15,000 U. S. combat troops will be brought out of Korea by the end of next month under a new point-rotation formula.

A-Bomb Detonated In Nevada Produces Zig-Zag After-Cloud

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Oct. 28 (AP) — A dazzling new weapon in America's atomic bag — a medium sized bomb with a lazy Z-shaped after-cloud — was dropped over the Nevada desert today.

The bomb, apparently dropped from an Air Force B-29, exploded with a high flash and afterglow, visible on Mt. Charleston, 50 miles away.

The ball of fire seared against a purple mountain background at 7:30 a. m., P. S. T., (10:20 a. m., E. S. T.) for several brief moments it put the bright morning sun to shame.

Odd Zig-Zag Cloud

The bomb burst at an elevation that appeared to be at least 1,000 feet above the floor of Yucca Flat. Its flash was considerably greater than that of the baby a-bomb, unveiled at the Atomic Energy Commission grounds last Monday. Observers agreed that it did not appear as bright as the blasts set off here last January and February.

Strangely, the detonation, for all its spectacular aspects, was not felt by observers on Charleston peak, or in Las Vegas, 75 miles away.

But the odd, zig-zagging cloud which stretched for miles across the desert before disintegrating was seen by hundreds of early Sunday morning risers.

This was America's 19th atomic explosion, unofficially. With Russia's known trio of blasts, it brought the world's total to 22.

Weather Is Perfect

The AEC declined to verify that the bomb was dropped from a plane, issuing only its routine announcement that there had been a nuclear explosion at the Nevada test site.

The experiment, the second nuclear burst in the current AEC series, was conducted in perfect weather. The three planes spent more than an hour hovering over the target before the detonation came.

Slight radiation was reported by the AEC radiological safety unit in the area between Beatty and Lathrop Wells, Nev., 35 miles southwest of the test site. But, said the AEC, the radiation was barely measurable and was in no way harmful to humans, animals, or crops.

Demos To Pick New Chairman Wednesday

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP)—The Democratic National Committee meets here Wednesday to pick a new chairman with Frank McKinney, Indianapolis banker, reported to be No. 1 man in the list of those who might get the nod from President Truman.

A committee official, who asked not to be quoted by name, told a reporter that unless Mr. Truman changes his mind in the meantime, he expects McKinney's name to be put forward.

The President himself has said about 30 names are under consideration in the hunt for a successor to William M. Boyle, Jr., who is resigning.

There are indications that John Carroll, former Colorado congressman and now a White House assistant, and Federal Judge James P. McGranery of Pennsylvania, also are high on the list

More Jobs, Higher Consumer Income Predicted In 1952

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP)—The Bureau of Agricultural Economics predicted today that 1952 will bring more jobs, higher consumer incomes and perhaps some additional price increases.

The bureau said the increase in income is likely to be limited to non-farmers. It said farmers are not expected to share in the prospective boost in economic activity because of rising production costs.

In an economic outlook report for the new year, the bureau said "non-agricultural income is currently at a record high and is expected to continue to rise in 1952."

Raid Turns Up Iran Red Plot

TEHRAN, Iran, Oct. 28 (AP) — A Communist plot to overthrow Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi was reported uncovered in a police raid last night on an underground headquarters of the outlawed Red Tudeh Party.

Authorities said the raid turned up the most important discovery in the last three years.

The party was declared illegal after the Shah was nicked by assassin's bullets in February, 1949, but it has continued operations covertly.

In last night's raid police reported seizure of documents and thousands of leaflets calling on Iranians to get rid of the Shah and found a "national government."

Police said they found "very important documents which may lead to further discoveries." The pamphlets attacked the Shah's character and morals. An undisclosed number of Tudeh Party members was arrested. The Tudeh party was officially blamed for tearing down street signs on Tehran's Avenue Churchill Friday after Winston Churchill's election victory in Britain. The Avenue was named during the historic Roosevelt-Churchill -Stalin conference here in 1943.

55th Great Grandchild

DEEPWATER, Mo., Oct. 28 (AP) — Mrs. Betty Parscale greeted her fifty-fifth great grandchild at her home here today, and with trigger quick arithmetic figured she now has 98 living descendants.

No. 98 is Charles Edward Cook, four-week-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Cook of Clinton, Mo.

Egypt's State Council Backs Mobilization

CAIRO, Egypt, Oct. 28 (AP)—The Egyptian State Council today approved general mobilization of manpower and drafting of all Egyptians between 18 and 50 "in case of war or threat of war."

It also provided for setting up a high council of war headed by Prime Minister Mustapha El Nahas Pasha.

The state council has the status of a supreme court.

To become law, this preparedness move in the British-Egyptian dispute over the Suez and the Sudan needs only approval of the cabinet ministers. They drafted the mobilization bill.

When parliament is in recess, as it is now, the cabinet can issue decrees "if this is required by urgent circumstances."

Abdel Razak El Sanhoury Pasha, chairman of the state council, told reporters his judges have been studying the general mobilization since long before the Anglo-Egyptian crisis.

Sources close to the government said the cabinet would step up final approval of the bill "to be ready for any developments."

The government yesterday gave Britain formal notice of the actions taken two weeks ago to break old treaty rights giving the British a share in ruling the Suez Canal zone and the million-square-mile Sudan.

Britain in the past fortnight has poured thousands of troop reinforcements into the Canal zone and has military control of the canal in the face of Egyptian labor, food and water supply boycotts and mob demonstrations.

Soviet Press Curbs Attacks On Churchill

MOSCOW, Oct. 28 (AP) — A letup in Soviet press attacks on Winston Churchill led Western observers to express a belief today that Russia may be feeling for an opening to negotiate over East-West differences.

First-Year Cost Is Set At More Than $4 Billion

Civilian Commission Gives Grim Warning

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP) — A blueprint for a universal military training system—a program that could involve 800,000 youths annually and cost more than $4 billion in the first year — was disclosed today by the new National Security Training Commission.

The commission prefaced its recommendations to Congress with some grim words about the world outlook and the need for UMT, among them these:

The clear prospect is that the present generation must live in danger for many years" and therefore should "learn to live with danger calmly and confidently."

Because today's military technology permits an enemy to strike directly at the United States by sea or air, "the American people must be prepared, like their forebears to pushed the frontier westward, to meet a savage and deadly attack at any moment."

The frontier response, the commission argued, is to have every physically and mentally able youth taught in the "art of survival and self-defense."

The five-man civilian commission, headed by James W. Wadsworth, a former Republican member of Congress, was formed last June after Congress had approved the broad idea of UMT. But in doing that (as part of an amendment to the draft law) Congress left details on the form and operation of UMT for the commission to draft and submit to the lawmakers. It also left to some time in the uncertain future the date upon which a training program could be started.

Here are some of the points the commission's report made:

1. A fully operating program would mean that about 800,000 youths 18 years old would get six months of training, then for the next seven and a half years be in a reserve component (reserves of the Army, Navy, Marines or Air Force or the ground or air National Guard). A UMT program starting off on a limited scale might involve training about 60,000 men annually.

2. The cost of a full-scale program is estimated by the Defense Department for the first year at $4,187,983,600, with the annual cost later dropping to $2,158,746,200. The limited program cost estimate was $398,895,210 for the starting year, $179,291,680 thereafter.

3. The commission thought the military's estimate cost was too high, that it might be possible to reduce it. For one thing, the commission raised questions about the military belief that for each two trainees one more person would be needed in the system to support it through maintenance and other service.

4. Induction of trainees would be through the existing Selective Service system used for the drafting of men into the regular forces. The trainees, however, would not be members of the regular armed forces, although they would be trained for military duty and subject generally to the same military law governing the armed forces.

5. Actually the system could not be "universal" because there is a level of physical and mental standards below which it would be unprofitable, from a military standpoint, to go in the UMT program. But these unqualified youths could be mobilized and their civilian skills used in emergency.

Convicted Killer Reprieved As Woman Admits She Lied

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 28 (AP)—A convicted slayer, scheduled to die in the state prison's electric chair tomorrow night, today received a temporary reprieve after a scorned woman admitted she had lied at his trial.

Francis C. Smith, 26, was granted a reprieve until at least next Jan. 14 by Gov. John Lodge this afternoon in the latest development in the case which broke over the weekend.

Edith Springer, 23, Stamford, now serving time at the Wetumpka, Ala., state prison, a diminutive brunette, who admitted on Friday that she committed perjury at the trial, was a key witness against Smith and George Lowdon, 23.

Smith was sentenced to die in the electric chair at the state prison in nearby Kethersfield, and Lowden, who pleaded guilty to second degree murder, was sentenced to life.

Both were indicted in the slaying of an elderly night watchman during a burglarly at the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, Greenwich, July 23, 1949.

Miss Springer said she lied against Smith and Lowden because she wanted to get revenge against Lowden because he "was spreading lies about me."

U. N. Armored Unit Fights Out Of Enemy Trap

One MIG Downed In New Jet Battles

U. S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Monday, Oct. 29 (AP)—Chinese Reds hurled new assaults today at a hill mass southeast of strategic Kumsong, after the Allies had reported that Central Korean city "neutralized."

Some 1,000 screaming Reds attacked the hills in the predawn darkness. A pooled news dispatch did not report the outcome. An earlier assault in company strength was reported repulsed.

The fresh attacks underscored an Allied briefing officer's report Sunday that the Chinese had regrouped after being driven northward in the recent U. N. drives on the central front.

On the eastern front, officers said the Reds had built five bridges across the Pukhan River north of Yanggu and were rebuilding their forces in that area.

Heavy fighting raged Sunday north of Kumsong. An Allied armored task force ramming beyond the rubbled city fought out of a Communist artillery trap, but four 47-ton Patton tanks were crippled.

AP Correspondent Milo Farneti reported the Reds shelled the armored column two and a half hours at a road junction northwest of Kumsong. He said Allied casualties were light.

Three new jet battles raged Sunday high over "MIG Alley" in Northwest Korea.

The aerial encounters, fought at speeds of more than 600 miles an hour, pitted a total of 64 deadly U. S. Sabre jets against 160 or more swept-wing MIGs of Russian manufacture. It was the eighth straight day of jet combat.

The U. S. Fifth Air Force claimed one MIG destroyed and one damaged in the flashing action.

Headquarters said all Sabres returned safely from these encounters, but admitted the loss elsewhere of one jet shot down by ground fire. The pilot was rescued by helicopter.

Eight Japan-based B-29 Superforts bombed Communist bridge facilities at Songchon in Northwest Korea without opposition.

Subcommittees Again Tackle Buffer Issue

MUNSAN, Korea, Monday, Oct. 29 (AP) — Allied and Communist negotiators met at Panmunjom today for the fifth time in an effort to break the deadlock over a buffer zone — a necessary step toward ending the Korean war.

The meeting began as scheduled at 11 a.m. (9 p.m., EST, Sunday).

The Communists want a buffer zone five to 12 miles south of the present battle line. The Allies insist on the battle line, mostly well inside North Korea.

A United Nations command spokesman estimated the difference involved about 1,000 square miles.

There was no indication that any quick settlement was in prospect. However, Communist correspondents at Panmunjom expressed optimism.

"I feel certain a few miles are not going to hold up an agreement," one of them told Allied correspondents while the subcommittees of both sides were meeting Sunday.

Red Air Power Challenges U. N.

TOKYO, Monday, Oct. 29 (AP) — Communist air power today is hurling its most serious threat at Allied air supremacy since the Korean war began.

In the past eight days the Reds have pressed what the U. S. Far East Air Forces officially describe as "the most intensive and most prolonged aerial warfare" of the 16-months-old conflict.

Not counting Sunday's three battles, in which one Red jet was destroyed and one damaged, the Far East Air Forces gave this score for the previous week:

Enemy planes destroyed 14; probably destroyed, 6; heavily damaged, 29.

Allied planes destroyed, 14, including four B-29 bombers; and an undisclosed number damaged. These are the greatest one-week Allied losses of the war.

The Allies still control the Korean skies, and air commanders are confident they can continue to do so, but it is taking a growing toll of men and planes. Tactics may have to be revised.

25 Die In Plane Crash

GUATEMALA, Guatemala, Oct 28 (AP)— A toupe of Guatemalan stage and radio artists was all but wiped out yesterday in the crash of a Guatemalan army air force C-47 transport plane that killed 25 of 27 persons aboard.

Noted Composer To Appear With Choral Society

Miss Shirley Weaver Listed As Soloist

Geoffrey O'Hara, composer of such classics as "One World," "There Is No Death" and "Give A Man A Horse He Can Ride," will give a piano-illustrated lecture at Allegany High School auditorium tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. with the Cumberland Choral Society. The entire program of the Chorus will be devoted to O'Hara compositions.

Although his serious compositions are admired by music lovers everywhere, the general public knows O'Hara best as the composer of the tremendously popular "K-K-K-Katy," a song that topped the hit parade a quarter century ago.

Opening Tuesday night's program, the Choral Society will sing "Sons and Daughters Of A Land Reborn" and "Forward To Christ." Harold Hanson and Kenneth McGregor will sing the solo parts.

Mr. O'Hara's musical lecture will follow and will show the audience how anyone may compose a tune.

The chorus will open the third and final phase of the program with "There Is No Death." Preceding a performance of "One World" by 200 singers (combining the Allegany and Fort Hill High School choruses with the Cumberland Choral Society) will be a dramatic prelude writen by Dr. Frances Andrews, associate professor of Music Education at Penn State College. Called "Bombs Or Brotherhood," this original sketch will lead up to the 200 member chorus singing O'Hara's inspiring "One World." Shirley Weaver will be soloist.

Jack E. Platt will conduct the choral part of the program and introduce Mr. O'Hara. No admission will be charged but an offering will be asked at one of the intermissions.

Early Ratification Seen

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP) — Senate ratification of the Japanese treaty early next year was forecast today by Chairman Connally (D-Tex) of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Demos May Gain Control Of Philly

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28 (AP) — The most persistent grip any political party has ever held on a major American city is in danger of being broken today as the Democrats challenge the Republicans for control of Philadelphia.

Even the most avid Republicans concede the Democrats a strong chance of grabbing control of this city, third largest in the nation, for the first time since 1880, the year before James A. Garfield won election to the White House.

The principal contest, for mayor, is between the Rev. Daniel A. Poling, Republican, and Joseph S. Clark, Jr., Democrat, but the key man to the November 6 election is Richardson Dilworth, running for district attorney on the Democratic ticket.

Dilworth, who already has proved himself to be the greatest Democratic vote getter in Philadelphia for many a year, has singled out municipal graft and fraud as the major election issue.

The 53-year-old ex-Marine promises to clean up "the stink and corruption in city hall once and for all because the Republicans will never, never do it."

A-Weapons To Force Military Revolution

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28 (AP)—Air Secretary Thomas Finletter said today that "the atomic weapons we soon will have" require a revolution in "our basic concepts of the use, composition and deployment of armies, navies and air forces."

He mentioned "great advances" this country is making in that field and said that unless their possibilities are taken into account America will be making the traditional mistake of planning for a war that is past.

Finletter expressed his views in an address delivered at St. Joseph's College here in connection with the award to him of a doctor of laws degree.

Fire At Cincinnati Leaves Four Dead

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 28 (AP) — One of three early morning fires in a tenement district left four persons dead today and 10 in hospitals.

Two victims were burned to death. A man and a woman were killed when they jumped from windows of the burning four story building.

One of those killed was Ruby Whitrock, owner of a tavern on the first floor of the brick building. She lived on an upper floor. Miss Whitrock missed a fire net when she jumped from her flat window.

Former FCC Member Dies At Philippi, W. Va.

PHILIPPI, W. Va., Oct. 28 (AP) — Judge Ira Ellsworth Robinson, 82, former member of the Federal Communications Commission, died unexpectedly at his home here early today.

Robinson, a Republican, was a former judge of the West Virginia State Supreme Court of Appeals. He was one of the first appointees to the old Federal Radio Commission, predecessor agency to the present FCC.

Robinson was the Republican nominee for governor in 1916. In recent years he had practiced law in association with Rupert A. Sinsel of Clarksburg.

Three Duck Hunters, Two Searchers Missing

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Oct. 28 (AP) — Two Coast Guardsmen who joined the search early today for three missing duck hunters were themselves reported missing.

The Wilmette Goast Guard station said it has not heard from the two searchers since 2 a. m. (EST) Sunday. They left the station two hours earlier in a radio-equipped 30-foot cabin boat.

Notice Master Masons

Members of Potomac Lodge No. 100, A. F. and A. M., and all Master Masons are requested to meet at Masonic Temple, Monday, October 29 at 1 p. m. for the purpose of attending the funeral of our late brother, James L. Pugh. Please bring cars.

EDWARD R. MESSMER, Worshipful Master.

WILLIAM A. DARKEY, Secretary.

"He brought my son safely home"

"Recently, my four-year-old boy wandered away from our home. One of your repairmen, driving along, noticed my son darting across the street. Realizing the danger my son was exposing himself to, your repairman stopped his truck, found out where the boy lived, and returned him to his mother. My wife and I are convinced that the thoughtful actions of your employee saved our son from possible serious injury."

The above is from a letter we received. It carries an important message for all of us, for it points the way to safety on the road. Be thoughtful . . . drive carefully.

Telephone drivers are thoughtful and careful. Last year, for instance, they covered 7,655,000 miles of streets and highways in Maryland—in all kinds of weather. More than 1,700 of them completed the year without a single accident. And 47% have safe driving records that range from five to thirty years.

This is good, of course, but our people will never stop trying to better these records in every way. With telephone drivers, it's safety first, last and all ways.

Noted Composer To Appear With Choral Society

Miss Shirley Weaver Listed As Soloist

Geoffrey O'Hara, composer of such classics as "One World," "There Is No Death" and "Give A Man A Horse He Can Ride," will give a piano-illustrated lecture at Allegany High School auditorium tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. with the Cumberland Choral Society. The entire program of the Chorus will be devoted to O'Hara compositions.

Although his serious compositions are admired by music lovers everywhere, the general public knows O'Hara best as the composer of the tremendously popular "K-K-K-Katy," a song that topped the hit parade a quarter century ago.

Opening Tuesday night's program, the Choral Society will sing "Sons and Daughters Of A Land Reborn" and "Forward To Christ." Harold Hanson and Kenneth McGregor will sing the solo parts.

Mr. O'Hara's musical lecture will follow and will show the audience how anyone may compose a tune.

The chorus will open the third and final phase of the program with "There Is No Death." Preceding a performance of "One World" by 200 singers (combining the Allegany and Fort Hill High School choruses with the Cumberland Choral Society) will be a dramatic prelude writen by Dr. Frances Andrews, associate professor of Music Education at Penn State College. Called "Bombs Or Brotherhood," this original sketch will lead up to the 200 member chorus singing O'Hara's inspiring "One World." Shirley Weaver will be soloist.

Jack E. Platt will conduct the choral part of the program and introduce Mr. O'Hara. No admission will be charged but an offering will be asked at one of the intermissions.

Possible Candidate

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 28 (AP)—W. Lee O'Daniel, former governor of Texas, said in an interview today he might become a Democratic candidate for president in the Oregon primary election next May.

Piece Of Bomber, No Bodies Found In River

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 28 (AP) — One piece of the Air Force B-25, carrying seven men, which yesterday crashed into the Missouri River here, was recovered today by the Army Corps of Engineers, but so far no bodies have been located.

Two men were rescued but the other five were believed to have lost their lives as the bomber split apart in hitting the water at a point between Municipal and Fairfax airports.

Early Ratification Seen

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP) — Senate ratification of the Japanese treaty early next year was forecast today by Chairman Connally (D-Tex) of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Demos May Gain Control Of Philly

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28 (AP) — The most persistent grip any political party has ever held on a major American city is in danger of being broken today as the Democrats challenge the Republicans for control of Philadelphia.

Even the most avid Republicans concede the Democrats a strong chance of grabbing control of this city, third largest in the nation, for the first time since 1880, the year before James A. Garfield won election to the White House.

The principal contest, for mayor, is between the Rev. Daniel A. Poling, Republican, and Joseph S. Clark, Jr., Democrat, but the key man to the November 6 election is Richardson Dilworth, running for district attorney on the Democratic ticket.

Dilworth, who already has proved himself to be the greatest Democratic vote getter in Philadelphia for many a year, has singled out municipal graft and fraud as the major election issue.

The 53-year-old ex-Marine promises to clean up "the stink and corruption in city hall once and for all because the Republicans will never, never do it."

A-Weapons To Force Military Revolution

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28 (AP)—Air Secretary Thomas Finletter said today that "the atomic weapons we soon will have" require a revolution in "our basic concepts of the use, composition and deployment of armies, navies and air forces."

He mentioned "great advances" this country is making in that field and said that unless their possibilities are taken into account America will be making the traditional mistake of planning for a war that is past.

Finletter expressed his views in an address delivered at St. Joseph's College here in connection with the award to him of a doctor of laws degree.

Fire At Cincinnati Leaves Four Dead

Two victims were burned to death. A man and a woman were killed when they jumped from windows of the burning four story building.

One of those killed was Ruby Whitrock, owner of a tavern on the first floor of the brick building. She lived on an upper floor. Miss Whitrock missed a fire net when she jumped from her flat window.

Former FCC Member Dies At Philippi, W. Va.

PHILIPPI, W. Va., Oct. 28 (AP) — Judge Ira Ellsworth Robinson, 82, former member of the Federal Communications Commission, died unexpectedly at his home here early today.

Robinson, a Republican, was a former judge of the West Virginia State Supreme Court of Appeals. He was one of the first appointees to the old Federal Radio Commission, predecessor agency to the present FCC.

Robinson was the Republican nominee for governor in 1916. In recent years he had practiced law in association with Rupert A. Sinsel of Clarksburg.

Three Duck Hunters, Two Searchers Missing

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Oct. 28 (AP) — Two Coast Guardsmen who joined the search early today for three missing duck hunters were themselves reported missing.

The Wilmette Goast Guard station said it has not heard from the two searchers since 2 a. m. (EST) Sunday. They left the station two hours earlier in a radio-equipped 30-foot cabin boat.

"He brought my son safely home"

"Recently, my four-year-old boy wandered away from our home. One of your repairmen, driving along, noticed my son darting across the street. Realizing the danger my son was exposing himself to, your repairman stopped his truck, found out where the boy lived, and returned him to his mother. My wife and I are convinced that the thoughtful actions of your employee saved our son from possible serious injury."

The above is from a letter we received. It carries an important message for all of us, for it points the way to safety on the road. Be thoughtful . . . drive carefully.

Telephone drivers are thoughtful and careful. Last year, for instance, they covered 7,655,000 miles of streets and highways in Maryland—in all kinds of weather. More than 1,700 of them completed the year without a single accident. And 47% have safe driving records that range from five to thirty years.

This is good, of course, but our people will never stop trying to better these records in every way. With telephone drivers, it's safety first, last and all ways.

Never Teach A Woman To Shoot

Never teach a woman to shoot unless she is an Annie Oakley who used to like to break glass balls in Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show.

John Wheeler

When this century was young, there was a musical show called Florodora that attracted all the young blades because in it was a famous sextette which danced flirtatiously and sang a song that started "Oh, tell me, pretty maiden, are there any more at home like you?" These girls became famous for their pulchritude, their costumes, and their charm, but not for their conduct. It seemed as if every time there was some kind of a scandal, the lady involved turned out to be one of the Florodora Sextette.

Actually this should add up to six, although you would gather from news reports there were more females in the act than there were passengers on the Mayflower, and she must have had elastic sides judging by the number who claim their ancestors came over on her. My grandmother used to tell me her parents were late getting to the dock and arrived just as they were pulling in the gangplank. I think she wanted to soothe my feelings.

"Caesar" Young was a rich bookmaker in New York before the days of the Kefauver investigation who was riding downtown in a hansom cab on June 4, 1904, with the idea of meeting his wife at the pier and sailing for Europe. This style vehicle was a high perpendicular affair with the driver sitting up topside and talking to his passengers by lifting a little trapdoor in the roof. It gave considerable privacy and was popular with lovers. Sitting beside the bookmaker was a young lady named Nan Patterson, one of the "original Florodora Sextette."

The cabman was startled by a shot and, looking down through his peephole, he saw the man's bloody head on his companion's lap. He promptly called the cops and set off one of New York's big murder cases which went through three trials trying to determine whether he killed himself at the prospect of leaving the girl and going abroad with his wife or she had pulled the trigger. Anyway he was dead. After the third try, there was a disagreement, and she was permitted to go free and was reported later to have married and moved to Seattle, Wash.

Then there was the neighbor of mine who wanted to go pheasant shooting with me, and I loaned her a shotgun and alerted her on certain points.

"The idea," I said before we started, "is to aim at birds and not to shoot any hunters or dogs."

She nodded her head. Soon the setter was on a point, and I urged her to keep abreast of me, but she lagged timidly. Suddenly a cock pheasant got up, and her gun went off in my ear, and just about blew my cap off. I knew she had another barrel left so I hit the dirt faster than Rizzuto sliding into second base. It was lucky I did. Bang she went again. The bird survived, too. That was her last hunting experience as far as I was concerned.

A dashing young former Yale quarterback and man-about-town, named Jack DeSaulles married a South American beauty. This was publicized as a great romance, but as often happens, they soon quarreled and were divorced. On their honeymoon he had given her a revolver and taught her how to shoot to protect herself during his absences. She was an apt pupil for she killed him one night when he came to return their child after a visit to him. She was acquitted and gave a big party to her lawyers, the district attorney and newspapermen who covered the trial to celebrate.

When I was at Camp Dix during the first World War we had a cottage at a place called Brown's Mills, a rather lonely spot in the pines, and my wife said one day,

"Why don't you get me a pistol and teach me how to shoot?"

I looked at her suspiciously and replied,

"I may get killed in the war anyway, but no revolver for you. Look what happened to Jack De Saulles."

County Treasurer Files Quarterly Report

The Allegany county treasurer's report for the quarter ending September 30 has been submitted to the Allegany County Board of Commissioners showing a bank balance as of September 30 of $1,785,061.73. Among the receipts listed is $12,000 interest on U. S. Treasury notes.

The report was prepared by Mrs. Johanna N. Sills, acting treasurer during the illness of Frederick C. Dreyer. Mr. Dreyer died before the report could be compiled. James W. Bishop is now the county treasurer and he will compile the next report.

Among receipts listed are $59,520.95 from state income taxes; $36,843.05 from motor vehicle and gasoline tax; $37,453.75 from auto taxes, and the $12,000 interest on U. S. Treasury notes. The treasury notes amounted to $400,000 and were purchased from school bond issues sold in 1948. The sum of $400,000 has since been turned over to the Board of Education.

The cash balance on hand on June 30, 1951 was $356,442.28 and added to various receipts listed the total was $3,202,064.61. This included well over a million and one half in taxes.

Disbursements listed the sum of $110,839.63 for highways (most of this was for three federal aid road projects), $407,092.30 for public schools, $46,251.15 for hospitals, $79,434.02 for public welfare, $11,458.54 for correctional institutions (jails and training institutions), and $15,675 for volunteer fire companies in the county.

Conservation Award To Be Given In State

The Maryland Conservation Federation said yesterday the names of 31 men now have been submitted for the state-wide award it plans to give at Thanksgiving time of outstanding achievement in conservation.

Anyone can make nominations, the Federation pointed out, emphasizing that women and youngsters also are eligible.

A silver medallion is to be presented to the individual who makes the most conspicuous contribution this year to soil, water, seafood, or wildlife resources.

400 Notre Dame Students To Go To Mass Here

A special train carrying 400 Notre Dame students to the Notre Dame-Navy football game will stop in Cumberland between 7 and 8 o'clock Thursday morning to enable the undergraduates to attend a special mass at St. Patrick's Catholic Church.

Thursday is All Saints' Day, a holy day of obligation for Catholics, and the Rev. Father Charles M. Carey, CSC, prefect of students and vice president of Notre Dame, has requested permission for the students to attend mass at St. Patrick's that morning. The special train will be side-tracked here at least an hour.

Very Rev. J. Lawrence Kilkenny, rural dean of Western Maryland and pastor of St. Patrick's, stated Saturday he has advised Father Carey that the local church will arrange to accommodate the students.

The Notre Dame football team will leave South Bend, Ind., by plane Friday and fly to Baltimore for the game against Navy on Saturday. Headquarters for the team in Baltimore will be the Emerson Hotel, according to the South Bend Tribune.

The University Band will also travel East and participate in the Saturday festivities.

Petersburg PTA Plans Carnival Wednesday

PETERSBURG, W. Va. — The Petersburg PTA will sponsor a carnival Wednesday evening.

A mummers parade will be organized at the Grade School at 6:30 and prizes will be given for the best couple or group, the most original, the prettiest and the ugliest with first and second prize for each class.

After the parade, which returns to the Grade School gymnasium for judging, there will be a carnival in the gym. Some of the events planned are cake walks, fish pond, auction sale of cakes and other foods, a presentation of turkeys and a door prize and several other events.

Fuller To Attend Md.-Missouri Game

Former City Commissioner Clifton E. Fuller, 624 Elm street, will be the guest of Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland at the Maryland - Missouri football game November 3 in Byrd Stadium, College Park. He will occupy a seat in President Byrd's box.

This year's eleven is the 60th football team at Maryland since Fuller was quarterback on the first team ever to represent the school, back in 1892.

Frown lines are a giveaway that petty irritations get the best of you. Conquer them this way!

SECRETS OF CHARM

By JOHN ROBERT POWERS

A serene brow is a mark of beauty always found among the charms of a gallant lady. Since it can only be attained through poise and self-control, no wonder it has such powerful attraction!

Real care and tremendous responsibility seldom mar the brow. Instead, the furrows are made by little irritations and puzzlements. When the muscles in the area of the eyebrows are allowed to display annoyance, petulance, impatience so frequently that they "freeze" in their active position, the brow becomes permanently marred — and makes us question its owner's ability, likeability, and stability.

Alerted For Frowns

Of course, wrinkling the brow is usually an unconscious act. But to avoid giving the wrong impression of your nature, it's worth a little conscious consideration to control what goes on between your eyebrows and above the bridge of your nose.

There is an aid to training which you can buy or make yourself that has been proved most effective. It's a plaster to place over your frown lines while they are pulled taut. Its virtue lies not in any therapeutic value but in the reminder, the gentle tug you will feel, everytime that you forget and permit yourself to frown. Wear the plaster whenever you expect to be alone for a while.

Softening established frown lines is a little more difficult than breaking the frown habit. Short of face lifting, frown lines cannot be eradicated entirely. But they can be made much less apparent, if you systematically massage them with a rich cream or oil.

"Wipe" Wrinkles Away

Every day or night apply your oil to your brow and with your finger pads "wipe" the lines away. For the vertical furrows between the eyebrows, use both hands, massaging from the center outward. For the horizontal lines across the brow, (still using both hands) begin at the top of the bridge of the nose and move upward to the hairline. Then, move your fingers a fraction of an inch apart and repeat the stroke. Continue until your fingers reach the temples on opposite sides.

Even one frown during the day will undo much of the good gained in any single treatment. If the patience you must exercise to show results seems irksome, just remember that impatience started the whole trouble!

Tomorrow: Ankle and foot appeal.

Speeding Motorists In City Will Be Checked By Radar

Cumberland's streets will soon be radar controlled.

This was revealed to members of the traffic bureau and others at a meeting called by John J. Long, commissioner of police and fire, Saturday in the City Hall.

Long announced the arrival of the most important part of the Electro Matic Speedmeter, a device that records the speed of a moving vehicle. The rest of the control setup is scheduled to arrive this week.

After the device is received, the Police Department will conduct an educational program on its use on various streets in the city where speeding has been a problem.

Long announced that three officers, one for each shift, have been selected to man the speedmeter.

Control Officers Named

Handling it on the first platoon, during the day shift will be Officer J. W. Brown. The second platoon, which works from 5 p.m. to 1 a.m. will have officer Richard E. Lashley, while on the third platoon, 1 a.m. to 9 a.m. will be Officer Charles E. Cubbage.

The commissioner said these men will be assisted by Cpl. Samuel Conrad, of the LaVale Barracks of Maryland State Police, who has had considerable experience with similar devices used by the State Police.

A team of two officers and two radio cars will be used in the first phase of the educational program.

Trial Period Explained

Long said the license number of a speeding car will be relayed from one cruiser to another located on the same street. The driver of the car will be stopped and given a safety talk together with information concerning the speedmeter. Large signs will designate the controlled street. he said.

During the second phase of the educational program, the license numbers of violators will be taken and the drivers given a written warning.

Long said after the enforcement date is set, violators apprehended by this device will be prosecuted just as speeders are now. The tape recording will be used as evidence, he said.

Also attending the orientation meeting on the use of the speedmeter yesterday were J. Walter Byer, president of the Western Maryland Motor Club; Lynn Walker, state inspector for the Maryland State Industrial Accident Commission, who is also an officer in the Western Maryland Safety Council, and Lt J. J. Johnston, head of the traffic bureau of the police department.

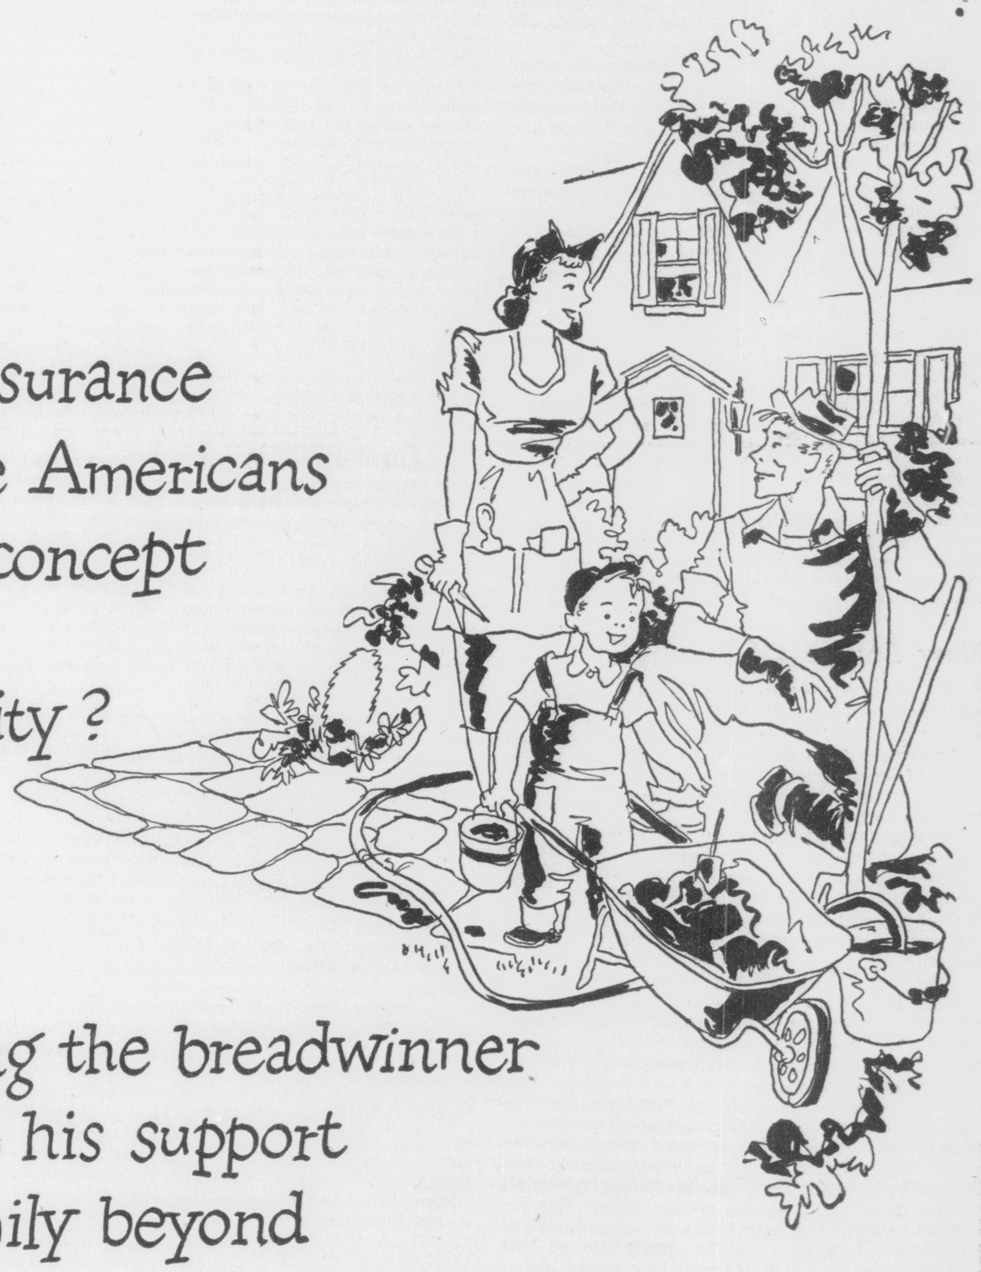
How has Life Insurance helped give Americans a broader concept of family responsibility?



By enabling the breadwinner to extend his support of the family beyond his lifetime

In millions of American homes today, the father is using life insurance to provide a regular income for his family beyond his lifetime.

The old concept of the breadwinner's responsibility to provide for his family for "as long as he shall live" is thus being broadened to "as long as they shall live" or at least for as long as they may need his support.

This broader concept is important both to America's families and to the economic life of the country which draws its strength from them. Its development has been aided by life insurance which is being used today to help replace the earnings of the breadwinners not only upon death but also upon retirement.

America's 83 million policyholders, through life insurance, are making America a better place to work in and to live in. They are providing for the future of their families and themselves. Their life insurance dollars are invested all over the country. And their healthy habit of thrift is one of the nation's strongest bulwarks against inflation.

Long said after the enforcement date is set, violators apprehended by this device will be prosecuted just as speeders are now. The tape recording will be used as evidence, he said.

Also attending the orientation meeting on the use of the speedmeter yesterday were J. Walter Byer, president of the Western Maryland Motor Club; Lynn Walker, state inspector for the Maryland State Industrial Accident Commission, who is also an officer in the Western Maryland Safety Council, and Lt J. J. Johnston, head of the traffic bureau of the police department.

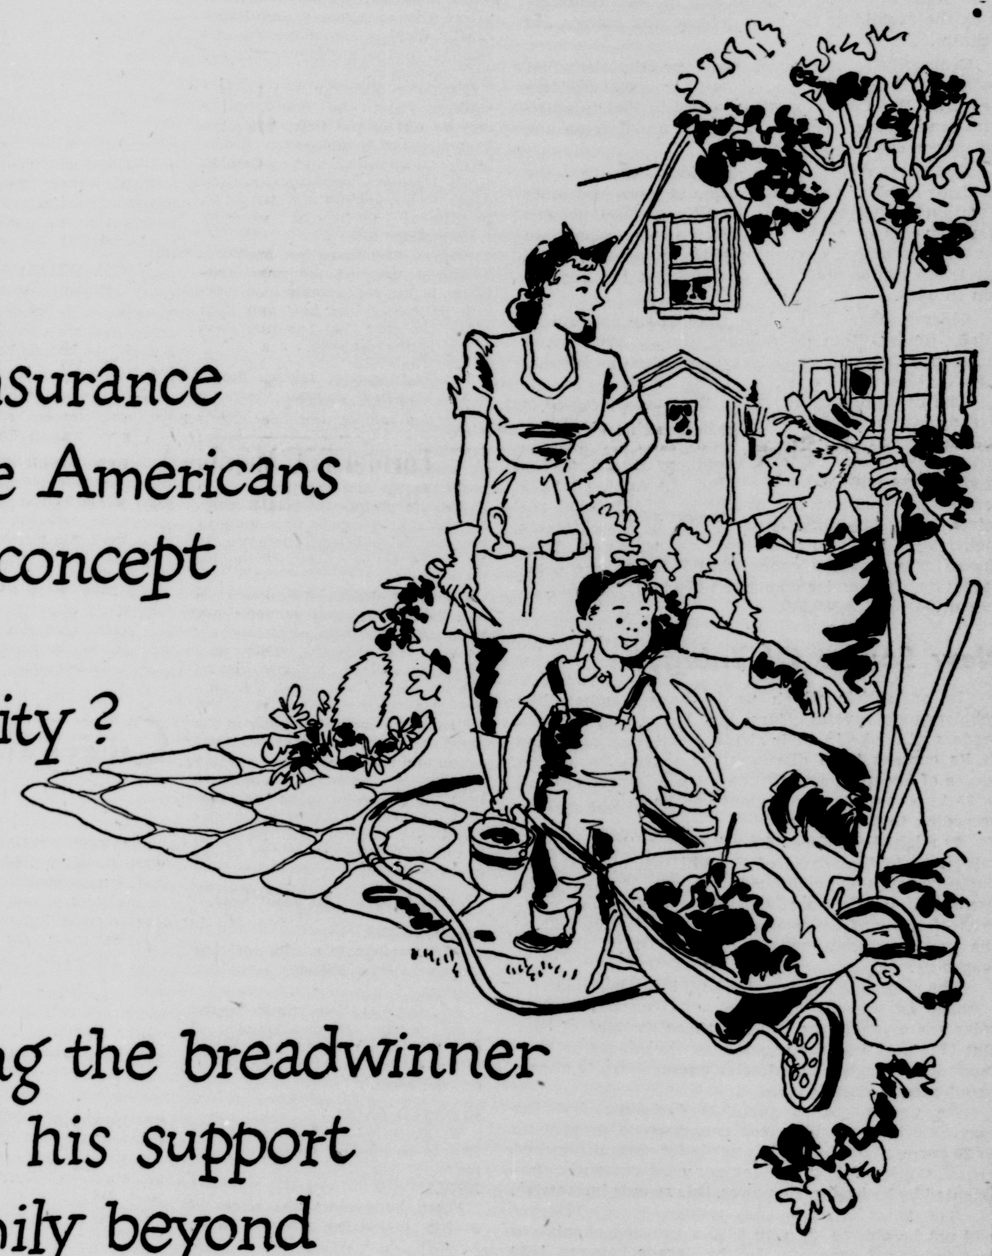
How has Life Insurance helped give Americans a broader concept of family responsibility?



By enabling the breadwinner to extend his support of the family beyond his lifetime

In millions of American homes today, the father is using life insurance to provide a regular income for his family beyond his lifetime.

The old concept of the breadwinner's responsibility to provide for his family for "as long as he shall live" is thus being broadened to "as long as they shall live" or at least for as long as they may need his support.

This broader concept is important both to America's families and to the economic life of the country which draws its strength from them. Its development has been aided by life insurance which is being used today to help replace the earnings of the breadwinners not only upon death but also upon retirement.

America's 83 million policyholders, through life insurance, are making America a better place to work in and to live in. They are providing for the future of their families and themselves. Their life insurance dollars are invested all over the country. And their healthy habit of thrift is one of the nation's strongest bulwarks against inflation.

Chronic Illness Economy

The economic aspects of prolonged or chronic illness will be discussed at a forum sponsored by the Research Council for Economic Security in Chicago on Tuesday. The principal speaker will be Senator Douglas (D., Ill.), one of 37 Democratic senators who voted for federal aid to the needy disabled in 1950 when the bill to expand the Social Security program was up for Senate consideration.

Aid to the needy who are permanently and totally disabled was rejected in the Senate by a 41 to 42 vote. The provision was restored to the bill, however, in conference, and was accepted by both Senate and House on final passage.

The House bill, as passed in 1949, had also provided for payment of annuities to persons covered by Social Security insurance who became totally and permanently disabled. These annuities were to be identical with those paid workers who retire at 65. Even this was somewhat less than the administration had asked for: a system of insurance against temporary as well as permanent disability.

The administration is expected to press for insurance or further aid for the ill or disabled at the next session of Congress which convenes in January. But whether the administration will be content merely to put its position on record or will exert pressure to have these measures adopted depends largely on other items in the federal budget.

Federal Security Administrator Ewing announced in June, 1951, that Congress would be asked to amend the Social Security Act to provide hospital benefits up to 60 days a year for insured persons over 65, their widows and dependents. But bills to authorize that program had not reached Congress by adjournment.

The new revenue act does allow taxpayers over 65 to deduct the full costs of medical care up to $2,500 each for the taxpayer, his wife, and each dependent. Reluctance of the administration to press for further aid to the chronically ill and the disabled is attributed to the boost in federal spending and in taxes demanded by the expanding national defense and foreign aid program.

Ordinarily, in an election year, the administration could be expected to go all-out for social welfare measures. But Congress will be asked in 1951 to authorize even greater spending for arms and foreign aid, and hence even higher taxes.

Statistical records and projections show that the problems of older people will demand more and more attention as the years pass. By the year 2000, persons over 45 years of age are expected to comprise from one third to perhaps nearly half the population. That age group represented only one-sixth of the population in 1900.

Older workers lose more time from disability—chiefly illness—than do younger adults. This is not so much because they are sick more often as because their illnesses last longer.

The new program of aid to the needy disabled is already catching up in volume with aid to the needy blind. Thus far this year federal and state governments have spent about $33 million on aid to the disabled, $36 million for the blind. In August 111,329 persons received aid for disability; 97,345 blind received aid. Disability costs would be considerably higher were it not for veterans' compensation. Pensions (for non-service connected disability) and compensation (for service connected disability) in August amounted to $128,880,585.

New Source Of Energy

In an article which would have sounded like gobblydegook several years ago, but which modern readers will take in their stride, Nucleonics magazine in its current issue discusses the search for a new source of cheap energy. Unless such a source is found in 25 to 50 years, the old globe will be in dire straits, according to the article.

As might be deduced from its name, the magazine subscribes to the school of thought which holds that nuclear energy will come to the rescue. It pooh-poohs the recent prediction of Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, that solar energy will be the new source. It will be no such thing, says the magazine.

The magazine points out, and it is no doubt correct—unless Dr. Conant is, that is—that overall costs of solar energy would be 10 to 50 times the cost of coal. But this may be only a guess, as the magazine contends less is known about solar energy than is known about atomic energy today.

No nuclear power plant is operating, but the magazine is hopeful nuclear energy could provide up to 20 per cent of the world's needs for several hundred years. Contrasted to the one per cent currently contributed by hydroelectric power, this sounds impressive.

The point is made that present energy reserves will not be able to keep up with a growing population and industrial economy. In the decade between 1940 and 1950, the United States used four billion billion heat units of energy. In the next 50 years 100 billion billion heat units of nuclear energy might be available at a favorable price, according to Nucleonics, which thus sets a formidable mark for the solar energy adherents to shoot at.

Corruption Compounded

The stories which a House subcommittee is now hearing from agents of the Department of Internal Revenue constitute just one more illustration of the corruption which the administration has tolerated and which, presumably, would still be going on except for the diligence of a few members of Congress.

Bribery, gifts to agents for outside services, pigeonholing of tax delinquencies in special cases—all these things and many more are being uncovered.

Here on the administration's very doorstep is a tax loophole which it could have closed without congressional action. All that was necessary was for the White House to order a complete investigation of the activities of those federal officials who were generally known to be defrauding the government.

Instead of acting on his own account, the President waited for committees of Congress to undertake the task. Even worse, he not infrequently went out of his way to defend men admittedly guilty of shady practices.

Highest taxes in the nation's history create a situation in which many taxpayers, squirming this way and that, fall easy prey to grafting politicians. Neither the opportunity for graft nor the temptation to succumb to it were present to the current extent before income taxes—which could be imposed only by changing the Constitution—were enacted.

After all that is now being revealed and promises to be further revealed, morality in government is certain to be an issue in the coming Presidential campaign.

How To Keep Well

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Fatigue And Weakness

Undue fatigability and lack of energy are not synonymous but refer to weakness and that tired sensation that comes from not feeling well. It is doubtful whether a day passes in the life of a busy physician when he is not consulted by a dozen patients who are bothered along this line. The modern medico takes the complaint seriously in contrast to the physicians at the turn of the century who ordered a tonic and let it go at that.

The individual who encounters fatigue for no obvious reason is likely to be emotionally upset. Instead of spending his energy in productive pursuits he is tiring himself out with worries, fears, hates, and dissatisfactions. These unhealthy attitudes sap his strength and lassitude is the natural consequences. Unless corrected, the sufferer may develop a neurosis. In this respect, lack of energy is a distress signal from a body that is laboring under unwelcome stress.

A physical ailment is suspected, however, when weakness is associater with other troublesome complaints such as fever, chills, weight loss, pain, cough, or shortness of breath. In some instances an obscure chronic infection is responsible. There are many possibilities in this category and the most likely are tuberculosis, rheumatic fever, kidney trouble, parsites, and brucellosis. Anemia also has been blamed but we now know that the blood count must be definitely abnormal before this symptom arises. Pallor usually coexists and numbness and tingling in the arms and legs are not uncommon.

Glandular disorders also produce weakness and the manifestation may be one of the first signs of a liver disorder. It also occurs in diabetes, alcoholism, and poisoning from bromides, barbiturates, and drugs such as opium and morphine. Nutritional deficiencies resulting from lopsided diets or intestinal disturbances also bring on lassitude. Tiredness may be the only complaint in the early stages of a vitamin deficiency and now and then offers the clew that the individual is not eating properly.

The fatigue that follows illness is well known. It generally clears up within a few weeks but may persist a month or two. Some of the worst cases follow influenza and other virus diseases. With exertion, the heart pounds and the person is so listless he prefers to take it easy. No one gains strength by staying in bed and it is better, therefore, to try to be active within reasonable limits.

Recurrent attacks of weakness are described as seizures of faintness, weak spells, dizziness, or momentary decrease in alertness. They may stem from epilepsy, a disturbance in the rhythm of the heart, nervousness, low blood pressure, or a decrease in the amount of sugar in the blood. The attacks are of brief duration and many are more terrifying than serious. Tests are available to help the physician make the diagnosis and such procedures are recommended because half the battle is won when the mystery as to the cause is solved.

COLD SORES

B. W. writes: Is a cold sore the same as a fever blister?

REPLY

Yes, there are two names for the same lesions. Herpus simplex is another term. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on cold sores.

BLOATED FACE

W. E. writes: What causes the face to be bloated looking on arising?

REPLY

When lying down the effect of gravity is not as great as when standing. As a result, fluid is more likely to accumulate in the tissues, especially the delicate areas around the eyes.

WEAK BACK

M. L. writes: Is a worn out back another name for osteoarthritis?

REPLY

Yes, as osteoarthritis of the spine is one of the causes. Muscular strain is another and some individuals, even refer to slipped disk as a worn out back.

CHEST PAIN IN DRINKER

C. D. writes: A 55 year old friend of mine has terrific chest pain after eating or walking. He drinks to excess. Do you think he would be helped by giving up liquor?

REPLY

Yes, but more must be done if chest pain represents heart trouble. Heavy drinkers also develop neuritis and heartburn. The man in question should be examined to find the cause of his symptoms.

SORE NECK GLANDS

J. W. writes: What causes the glands of the neck to feel sore?

REPLY

Infection is the most common cause. This usually stems from an inflamed throat or ear or an abcessed tooth.

SWIMMING AND BALDNESS

J. F. writes: Will swimming every day cause the hair to drop out?

REPLY

No, despite the number of baldies you see at the beach. Water has a drying effect, which may encourage dandruff in those with a dry scalp. This does not mean that they will become bald.

Vacation-Minded Congressmen Find "Business" In Faraway Places; South America More Popular; Not One Congressman Has Asked To Go To Korea

WASHINGTON.—With Congress taking the rest of the year off, vacation-minded congressmen have suddenly discovered "official business" in South America, the Pacific islands, the Mediterranean and other faraway places.

With winter approaching, the greatest congressional interest seems to be in South America, as compared with Alaska in the summer. More than two dozen congressmen have signed up for "surveys" of sunny South America in November and December. However, other tours are also planned through Europe, the Middle East and around the world.

While some of these trips are pure junkets, this columnist is of the opinion that some make worthwhile additions to a congressman's store of knowledge at a time when the American defense line extends from Korea to the Rhine. However, since the taxpayer pays for the air travel, the public is entitled to know the travel program and judge for itself. Here are the chief itineraries:

First to light out for a foreign vacation were Congressmen Monroe Redden, North Carolina Democrat, and Fred Crawford, Michigan Republican. They represent the House Interior Committee, chiefly concerned with domestic matters. However, the congressmen explained solemnly to the Air Force that they had to inspect the Pacific territories entrusted to us under the peace treaty and they then headed for the Pacific by way of Paris, Geneva, Cairo and Bangkok. This is quite a long way round. Crawford left word he hoped to be back in time to make another trip to the Virgin Islands in December.

Another expedition to the Pacific "trust" territories is scheduled in November by Congressmen Ben Jensen of Iowa, Carl Andersen of Minnesota, Lowell Stockman of Oregon, George Schwabe of Oklahoma and William Van Pelt of Wisconsin, all Republicans, of the House Appropriations Committee.

Popular Latinos

The first junket to South America has been scheduled November 7 by Congressman Abraham Multer, New York Democrat, who is lining up a 45-day tour for House Banking Committee members. Presumably, they will take a long-distance view of U. S. banking problems, as seen from South America.

House Commerce Chairman Robert Crosser of Ohio has also made reservations with the Air Force for 18 of his committee members to make a 30-day tour of South America, November 10 to December 10. They will be followed four days later by a delegation from the House Foreign Affairs Committee, headed by Chairman James Richards of South Carolina. South America is very popular.

Those who have signed up for this South American trip are Congressman Tom Morgan of Pennsylvania, Tom Gordon of Illinois and Omar Burleson of Texas, Democrats, with Robert Chiperfield of Illinois and Don Jackson of California, Republicans.

Another House Foreign Affairs group will leave for Europe at the same time. They will include Representatives Clement Zablocki of Wisconsin, A. S. Carnahan of Missouri and Edna Kelly of Brooklyn, N. Y., Democrats, and Jacob Javits of New York, Republican.

Around The World

Congressman Porter Hardy, Jr., Virginia Democrat, has scheduled a trip to Europe for the House Armed Services Committee November 7. A joint Senate-House group is also planning to tour Europe, North Africa and the Middle East, beginning November 6. This group includes Senators Theodore Green of Rhode Island, Brien McMahon of Connecticut, William Benton of Connecticut and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, Democrats; and Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin and Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa, Republicans. Most of the above are members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, so have a legitimate reason for taking the trip.

With them will also go Congressmen Gene Cox of Georgia, Howard Smith of Virginia, Frazier Reams of Ohio and Donald O'Toole of New York, Democrats; and Walter Judd of Minnesota, Harris Ellsworth of Oregon and Kenneth Keating of New York, Republicans.

Meanwhile, another congressional delegation has already taken off for a leisurely, two-month, round-the-world tour. They include Congressmen Herbert Bonner of North Carolina, Harold Donohue of Massachusetts, Sidney Fine of New York, John Shelley of California and William Lantaff of Florida, Democrats; together with Charles Brownson of Indiana, Thomas Curtis of Missouri, Cecil Harden of Indiana, Walt Horan of Washington and George Meader of Michigan. Their "official trip" is sponsored by the House Expenditures Committee which has no round-the-world business, but is supposed to keep an eye on federal expenses.

It is interesting to note that not a single congressman has asked to go to Korea, where the weather is growing bitter cold and accommodations aren't so comfortable.

Sparkman Vs. Lawyer

Sen. John Sparkman was mystified by a strange visit from an emissary of Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer just before the senator returned to Alabama.

The emissary, Assistant Secretary Thomas W. S. Davis, said, almost apologetically, "Secretary Sawyer is quite upset about your speech on the distribution of war contracts."

"What was the matter?" Sparkman asked.

"Well," Davis replied, "you said that 40 per cent of the war contracts are held by 10 companies, and the Secretary of Commerce feels you gave an erroneous impression. After all, much of the work on the prime contract is sublet. The Bendix Company, for example, has benefited widely from sub-contracts, and it is not one of the first 10."

Sparkman said this was most interesting, and that he would like the figures on Bendix.

Davis took out the list of defense contracts, then seemed even more embarrassed. For the figures revealed that Bendix was 15th in the list of prime contracts, receiving $265,000,000 worth.

NOTE — In a recent talk at Columbus, O., not cleared at the White House, Secretary Sawyer lambasted the federal budget as "wild and extravagant" and called the small plants corporation, just approved by Congress to help small business, as "ridiculous." As a result, rumors are current around Pennsylvania Avenue that Sawyer is anxious to exit from Washington.

Gravity Investments

By ROGER W. BABSON

GRAVITY VILLAGE, NEW BOSTON, N. H., Oct. 28—Readers know that I have always been interested in the force of gravity and its possibility for free power from which everyone could greatly benefit. Letters come to me asking if there are now any ways for investors to benefit from gravity. Yes, there are three.

Electric Power Developments

Every waterfall produces power due to gravity, plus, of course, the heat of the sun which takes the water from the oceans into the clouds. The clouds eventually turn into rain and supply the water which flows over these falls. In this connection, it must be realized that this gravity pull is the same in any part of the United States as it is at Niagara Falls. If any reader has never visited Niagara, he surely should do so. At that time he should realize that only a small portion of the power is now being used. The part of the waterfall which is being used cannot be seen; while the water going over the falls is "wasted," except for scenic beauty.

There are thousands of water powers now being used every day. Most of these are operating mills of various kinds; but they are gradually being converted to generate electricity which power can easily be transported. I, however, consider the Niagara Mohawk Power Company the prime electric power gravity development. This is the company which taps Niagara Falls and, supplemented by other falls and steam plants, supplies electric power to most of New York State, from Buffalo down to New York City. The stocks of this Company are listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The 3.90 per cent preferred pays $3.90 and sells at 96, thus yielding 4 per cent. The common pays $1.40 and sells at 25, thus yielding nearly 6 per cent. One cannot get rich quickly by buying these stocks, but if you put them away in your safety deposit box, they should gradually become more valuable and give you good dividends each year; all from gravity.

Railroad Companies

I certainly am not now bullish on most railroad stocks. They are handicapped by severe competition from trucks, automobiles and airplanes; their expenses are constantly increasing from wage demands and the cost of coal, oil, and equipment; while their rates are determined by political commissions, leaving little profit for stockholders. Transcontinental roads may do well for some time; also certain southwestern roads; but my favorites are the three gravity roads. These are the Virginia Railway, Norfolk & Western, and Chesapeake & Ohio. All of these let most of their heavy traffic coast downhill and have mostly only empty cars to pull uphill again!

I believe that the stocks of all three roads are safe investments; but I will quote only the stocks of the Virginian Railway which runs from the coal fields of West Virginia to Norfolk. (More details can freely be obtained from the company at 44 Wall Street, New York City.) The stocks are listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The Virginian Railway preferred pays $1.50 and sells for 28, while the common now pays $2.50 and sells for 33, thus yielding nearly 8 per cent.

Waterworks Securities

The most economically operated public utilities are gravity waterworks which supply householders with water. Why? The answer is that gravity does most of the work for them by causing the water inexpensively to run downhill through the pipes and up to your bathrooms without aid of costly power. In most water systems steam or electric power is needed first to pump the water up into a standpipe or reservoir. But, gravity systems have a natural reservoir, higher than any house in the city, and gravity performs all the work. If the water system in your community is operated by a private company, and the bonds or stocks are available, ascertain to what extent it is being operated by gravity. Based upon your findings, consider these securities as an investment.

Enthusiastic inventors who think they can use gravity for "perpetual motion" machines, should read "Wanted: War Inventions" in Readers Digest of October. The article entitled "Should You Buy Shares in America?" is good for everyone to read.

Matter Of Fact

By JOSEPH ALSOP

The Professionals Talk

WASHINGTON

The professional politicians in the Democratic party are just about as nervous, nowadays, as so many cats on hot bricks. The members of the real inner circle—the fathers of the party as it were—have thought for some time that they knew what was going to happen, and have been pleased with what they thought they knew.

In brief, they thought they knew that at some suitable moment before the new year, Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson would lay down his heavy burden, making a place at the State Department for Chief Justice Fred Vinson. This, they expected, would in turn be only the preliminary for the President to lay down his burden, passing the Democratic nomination to his old friend, the Chief Justice—Secretary of State.

This particular move in the game of political musical chairs has been discussed often enough before. It can now be stated, however, that some of those who have discussed it were not indulging in mere empty speculation.

Six months or so ago in fact, the President actually, signified his intention not to seek a third term, and declared his preference for the Chief Justice as his successor. He also indicated his intention to prepare the Chief Justice for the race by allowing him, so to speak, to use the State Department as a judicial disrobing room, where he could conveniently make the transition from the high formality of the supreme bench to the undress of rough and tumble politics.

Insiders Nervous

Because a group of Democratic insiders close to the President and the Chief Justice were aware that these signs and significations had been given, they believed that the Democratic party's future was fairly cut and dried. They thought the Chief Justice could beat any Republican candidate but Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. They thought he would make a good President. They were generally pleased with the prospect, as they understood it.

They are nervous now, for a very simple reason. The Chief Justice has also signified to his old political friends, that he will not leap from the supreme bench straight into party politics. Some sort of a disrobing room is essential for him. The State Department appears to be the only one available. For it is inconceivable that the President will replace Robert A. Lovett at the Defense Department, where the new Secretary is so brilliantly tackling his gigantic task; and it is equally inconceivably that the Chief Justice will leave the court to go back to the Treasury, where he was before his elevation.

Thus the Acheson-Vinson switch is regarded as being the inescapable prelude to the Truman-Vinson switch. And those who have been looking to see the Chief Justice as the Democratic candidate in 1952 are now beginning to fear that the whole project will die aborning, because there is nothing to suggest that the Acheson-Vinson switch is going to be made.

At least, if the Chief Justice is to replace the Secretary of State before the new year as anticipated, there are only two months left to arrange the matter. And the President, who indicated his intentions on this point a good many months ago, has more recently been notably silent about them.

More Uncertainties

Such is the background. Perhaps the professionals, in considering this background, have paid too little attention to the foreground, and especially to the peculiar relationship between the President and Dean Acheson. Those close to Acheson still appear to be convinced that he has no intention of leaving his office. Yet they also say that the failure of the Senate to confirm his friend, Philip Jessup, has been the worst blow that Acheson has received to date. And there is no doubt at all that if a truce is arranged in Korea, and Acheson comes back from his present journey to Paris and Rome in a position to claim successes abroad, a new situation will exist in which Acheson can retire gracefully, not "under fire."

This in turn may influence the President, who has been so determined to stand by Acheson to the last. In short, you pay your money and you take your choice, as to the best bet about this mysterious pattern, whose development is so unpredictable.

Perhaps one last set of factors should also be considered by the eager bettors. Within the White House itself, while Mrs. Truman continues to urge the President not to run again, the professional inhabitants of the executive woodwork are urging the President to take the opposite course. They do this naturally, because their livelihoods and their self-importances depend upon Truman. But here again, there is a balance of forces, between the cronies and the President's wife, so that here also there is uncertainty.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Does Nobody Care?

There have always been crooked men, wicked men, malicious men — and women, too — but that is no reason why the citizens of such a country as ours should condone corruption, subversion, betrayal. Nor should we permit ourselves to be governed by the gutter by default.

Day after day, reports appear of official misconduct, Internal Revenue official's dishonesty, of RFC corruption, of the secretary to the Vice President being involved in using influence, of police being associated with bookmakers — and what has been disclosed amounts to hardly anything. The story has not been told by half.

And there is more than that. Take these strikes — dockworkers' strikes, milk strikes, strikes in munition plants, strikes that in the present state of our country make no sense. Those 90,000 casualties in Korea did not strike.

There seems to be no use raising that argument. Strikers say that they are veterans too. Some say that they have sons in Korea. But still they strike. They tie up supplies to their own sons and to their neighbors' sons. And what they quarrel about ought to be, among civilized persons, adjustable not only in the private interests of individuals but in the national welfare. These men are not thinking clearly ;most of them are misled by extraordinarily selfish so-called leaders who project themselves into every troubled situation. For instance, the very serious New York dockers' strike began as part of a permanent feud between a man called Ryan and a man called Sampson, neither important to the needs of America.

There can be no reason why Harry Bridges should play any part in the affairs of this country. He is not one of us. He does not belong here. He has been ordered deported and somehow he and his lawyers and politicians connive to keep him in the United States. The Department of Justice has been delaying since August, 1950, to bring his case on appeal before the courts, they, not he, applying for the delays. Who is interested in keeping this man, who has done this country no good since some misery brought him to our shores, in this country?

The association of Harry Bridges with John L. Lewis, and the Communists, particularly in the automobile, electrical and dockworkers' industries, cannot be constructive for America in times like these. Since 1936, they have kept the relations between labor and management disturbed with such constancy that it is impossible not to wonder why they do it. The motive must be other than personal ambition; it must be deeper than that and more perilous.

It is difficult to understand why John L. Lewis, who hates Communists, can associate with them from time to time. He has never permitted Communists in the United Mine Workers but he brought them into the CIO and gave them high office. He knew that such men as Lee Pressman and Len de Caux were left-wingers. He knew that 11 of his CIO unions were being organized under the control of Communists. Yet he hated Communists. How is this to be explained?

When Lewis temporarily broke with the Communists, they were strong enough to have him thrown out of the CIO. Yet, he is now back at the old stand, making deals with them designed to weaken the position of Walter Reuther in the United Auto Workers, so that Communists, associated now with Lewis, can gain control of that crucial union and industry.

No one can accuse John L. Lewis of being a Communist. But who can explain his conduct?

Obviously, it is impossible to depend on our politicians. They deal not with fundamental principles or with the issues in a situation. They count the votes. They measure the strength of pressure groups. They fear the violence of organized elements who answer all questions with picket lines, legal or illegal, with threats and intimidations. The police are generally instructed to ignore unlawful picketing lest they offend prospective voters. Party politics are paramount.

It simply cannot continue to go on that way without the citizens sooner or later taking matters in their own hands as they have done before in this country. And that is no solution, for it can only mean more disorders, more confusion, more injustice and hatred.

Corruption breeds not only corruption but lawlessness. When those at the top of government are moral cowards, the worst elements in the population gain control. They risk greatly because they recognize the smallness of heart. The selfishness of those at the helm of government.

This country needs a moral revolution — and soon.

Chronic Illness Economy

The economic aspects of prolonged or chronic illness will be discussed at a forum sponsored by the Research Council for Economic Security in Chicago on Tuesday. The principal speaker will be Senator Douglas (D., Ill.), one of 37 Democratic senators who voted for federal aid to the needy disabled in 1950 when the bill to expand the Social Security program was up for Senate consideration.

Aid to the needy who are permanently and totally disabled was rejected in the Senate by a 41 to 42 vote. The provision was restored to the bill, however, in conference, and was accepted by both Senate and House on final passage.

The House bill, as passed in 1949, had also provided for payment of annuities to persons covered by Social Security insurance who became totally and permanently disabled. These annuities were to be identical with those paid workers who retire at 65. Even this was somewhat less than the administration had asked for: a system of insurance against temporary as well as permanent disability.

The administration is expected to press for insurance or further aid for the ill or disabled at the next session of Congress which convenes in January. But whether the administration will be content merely to put its position on record or will exert pressure to have these measures adopted depends largely on other items in the federal budget.

Federal Security Administrator Ewing announced in June, 1951, that Congress would be asked to amend the Social Security Act to provide hospital benefits up to 60 days a year for insured persons over 65, their widows and dependents. But bills to authorize that program had not reached Congress by adjournment.

The new revenue act does allow taxpayers over 65 to deduct the full costs of medical care up to $2,500 each for the taxpayer, his wife, and each dependent. Reluctance of the administration to press for further aid to the chronically ill and the disabled is attributed to the boost in federal spending and in taxes demanded by the expanding national defense and foreign aid program.

Ordinarily, in an election year, the administration could be expected to go all-out for social welfare measures. But Congress will be asked in 1951 to authorize even greater spending for arms and foreign aid, and hence even higher taxes.

Statistical records and projections show that the problems of older people will demand more and more attention as the years pass. By the year 2000, persons over 45 years of age are expected to comprise from one third to perhaps nearly half the population. That age group represented only one-sixth of the population in 1900.

Older workers lose more time from disability—chiefly illness—than do younger adults. This is not so much because they are sick more often as because their illnesses last longer.

The new program of aid to the needy disabled is already catching up in volume with aid to the needy blind. Thus far this year federal and state governments have spent about $33 million on aid to the disabled, $36 million for the blind. In August 111,329 persons received aid for disability; 97,345 blind received aid. Disability costs would be considerably higher were it not for veterans' compensation. Pensions (for non-service connected disability) and compensation (for service connected disability) in August amounted to $128,880,585.

New Source Of Energy

In an article which would have sounded like gobbledegook several years ago, but which modern readers will take in their stride, Nucleonics magazine in its current issue discusses the search for a new source of cheap energy. Unless such a source is found in 25 to 50 years, the old globe will be in dire straits, according to the article.

As might be deduced from its name, the magazine subscribes to the school of thought which holds that nuclear energy will come to the rescue. It pooh-poohs the recent prediction of Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, that solar energy will be the new source. It will be no such thing, says the magazine.

The magazine points out, and it is no doubt correct—unless Dr. Conant is, that is—that overall costs of solar energy would be 10 to 50 times the cost of coal. But this may be only a guess, as the magazine contends less is known about solar energy than is known about atomic energy today.

No nuclear power plant is operating, but the magazine is hopeful nuclear energy could provide up to 20 per cent of the world's needs for several hundred years. Contrasted to the one per cent currently contributed by hydroelectric power, this sounds impressive.

The point is made that present energy reserves will not be able to keep up with a growing population and industrial economy. In the decade between 1940 and 1950, the United States used four billion billion heat units of energy. In the next 50 years 100 billion billion heat units of nuclear energy might be available at a favorable price, according to Nucleonics, which thus sets a formidable mark for the solar energy adherents to shoot at.

Corruption Compounded

The stories which a House subcommittee is now hearing from agents of the Department of Internal Revenue constitute just one more illustration of the corruption which the administration has tolerated and which, presumably, would still be going on except for the diligence of a few members of Congress.

Bribery, gifts to agents for outside services, pigeonholing of tax delinquencies in special cases—all these things and many more are being uncovered.

Here on the administration's very doorstep is a tax loophole which it could have closed without congressional action. All that was necessary was for the White House to order a complete investigation of the activities of those federal officials who were generally known to be defrauding the government.

Instead of acting on his own account, the President waited for committees of Congress to undertake the task. Even worse, he not infrequently went out of his way to defend men admittedly guilty of shady practices.

Highest taxes in the nation's history create a situation in which many taxpayers, squirming this way and that, fall easy prey to grafting politicians. Neither the opportunity for graft nor the temptation to succumb to it were present to the current extent before income taxes—which could be imposed only by changing the Constitution—were enacted.

After all that is now being revealed and promises to be further revealed, morality in government is certain to be an issue in the coming Presidential campaign.

How To Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Fatigue And Weakness

Undue fatigability and lack of energy are not synonymous but refer to weakness and that tired sensation that comes from not feeling well. It is doubtful whether a day passes in the life of a busy physician when he is not consulted by a dozen patients who are bothered along this line. The modern medico takes the complaint seriously in contrast to the physicians at the turn of the century who ordered a tonic and let it go at that.

The individual who encounters fatigue for no obvious reason is likely to be emotionally upset. Instead of spending his energy in productive pursuits he is tiring himself out with worries, fears, hates, and dissatisfactions. These unhealthy attitudes sap his strength and lassitude is the natural consequences. Unless corrected, the sufferer may develop a neurosis. In this respect, lack of energy is a distress signal from a body that is laboring under unwelcome stress.

A physical ailment is suspected, however, when weakness is associater with other troublesome complaints such as fever, chills, weight loss, pain, cough, or shortness of breath. In some instances an obscure chronic infection is responsible. There are many possibilities in this category and the most likely are tuberculosis, rheumatic fever, kidney trouble, parsites, and brucellosis. Anemia also has been blamed but we now know that the blood count must be definitely abnormal before this symptom arises. Pallor usually coexists and numbness and tingling in the arms and legs are not uncommon.

Glandular disorders also produce weakness and the manifestation may be one of the first signs of a liver disorder. It also occurs in diabetes, alcoholism, and poisoning from bromides, barbiturates, and drugs such as opium and morphine. Nutritional deficiencies resulting from lopsided diets or intestinal disturbances also bring on lassitude. Tiredness may be the only complaint in the early stages of a vitamin deficiency and now and then offers the clew that the individual is not eating properly.

The fatigue that follows illness is well known. It generally clears up within a few weeks but may persist a month or two. Some of the worst cases follow influenza and other virus diseases. With exertion, the heart pounds and the person is so listless he prefers to take it easy. No one gains strength by staying in bed and it is better, therefore, to try to be active within reasonable limits.

Recurrent attacks of weakness are described as seizures of faintness, weak spells, dizziness, or momentary decrease in alertness. They may stem from epilepsy, a disturbance in the rhythm of the heart, nervousness, low blood pressure, or a decrease in the amount of sugar in the blood. The attacks are of brief duration and many are more terrifying than serious. Tests are available to help the physician make the diagnosis and such procedures are recommended because half the battle is won when the mystery as to the cause is solved.

COLD SORES

B. W. writes: Is a cold sore the same as a fever blister?

REPLY

Yes, there are two names for the same lesions. Herpus simplex is another term. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on cold sores.

BLOATED FACE

W. E. writes: What causes the face to be bloated looking on arising?

REPLY

When lying down the effect of gravity is not as great as when standing. As a result, fluid is more likely to accumulate in the tissues, especially the delicate areas around the eyes.

WEAK BACK

M. L. writes: Is a worn out back another name for osteoarthritis?

REPLY

Yes, as osteoarthritis of the spine is one of the causes. Muscular strain is another and some individuals, even refer to slipped disk as a worn out back.

CHEST PAIN IN DRINKER

C. D. writes: A 55 year old friend of mine has terrific chest pain after eating or walking. He drinks to excess. Do you think he would be helped by giving up liquor?

REPLY

Yes, but more must be done if chest pain represents heart trouble. Heavy drinkers also develop neuritis and heartburn. The man in question should be examined to find the cause of his symptoms.

SORE NECK GLANDS

J. W. writes: What causes the glands of the neck to feel sore?

REPLY

Infection is the most common cause. This usually stems from an inflamed throat or ear or an abcessed tooth.

SWIMMING AND BALDNESS

J. F. writes: Will swimming every day cause the hair to drop out?

REPLY

No, despite the number of baldies you see at the beach. Water has a drying effect, which may encourage dandruff in those with a dry scalp. This does not mean that they will become bald.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Vacation-Minded Congressmen Find "Business" In Faraway Places; South America More Popular; Not One Congressman Has Asked To Go To Korea

WASHINGTON.—With Congress taking the rest of the year off, vacation-minded congressmen have suddenly discovered "official business" in South America, the Pacific islands, the Mediterranean and other faraway places.

With winter approaching, the greatest congressional interest seems to be in South America, as compared with Alaska in the summer. More than two dozen congressmen have signed up for "surveys" of sunny South America in November and December. However, other tours are also planned through Europe, the Middle East and around the world.

While some of these trips are pure junkets, this columnist is of the opinion that some make worthwhile additions to a congressman's store of knowledge at a time when the American defense line extends from Korea to the Rhine. However, since the taxpayer pays for the air travel, the public is entitled to know the travel program and judge for itself. Here are the chief itineraries:

First to light out for a foreign vacation were Congressmen Monroe Redden, North Carolina Democrat, and Fred Crawford, Michigan Republican. They represent the House Interior Committee, chiefly concerned with domestic matters. However, the congressmen explained solemnly to the Air Force that they had to inspect the Pacific territories entrusted to us under the peace treaty and they then headed for the Pacific by way of Paris, Geneva, Cairo and Bangkok. This is quite a long way round. Crawford left word he hoped to be back in time to make another trip to the Virgin Islands in December.

Another expedition to the Pacific "trust" territories is scheduled in November by Congressmen Ben Jensen of Iowa, Carl Andersen of Minnesota, Lowell Stockman of Oregon, George Schwabe of Oklahoma and William Van Pelt of Wisconsin, all Republicans, of the House Appropriations Committee.

Popular Latinos

The first junket to South America has been scheduled November 7 by Congressman Abraham Multer, New York Democrat, who is lining up a 45-day tour for House Banking Committee members. Presumably, they will take a long-distance view of U. S. banking problems, as seen from South America.

House Commerce Chairman Robert Crosser of Ohio has also made reservations with the Air Force for 18 of his committee members to make a 30-day tour of South America, November 10 to December 10. They will be followed four days later by a delegation from the House Foreign Affairs Committee, headed by Chairman James Richards of South Carolina. South America is very popular.

Those who have signed up for this South American trip are Congressman Tom Morgan of Pennsylvania, Tom Gordon of Illinois and Omar Burleson of Texas, Democrats, with Robert Chiperfield of Illinois and Don Jackson of California, Republicans.

Another House Foreign Affairs group will leave for Europe at the same time. They will include Representatives Clement Zablocki of Wisconsin, A. S. Carnahan of Missouri and Edna Kelly of Brooklyn, N. Y., Democrats, and Jacob Javits of New York, Republican.

Around The World

Congressman Porter Hardy, Jr., Virginia Democrat, has scheduled a trip to Europe for the House Armed Services Committee November 7. A joint Senate-House group is also planning to tour Europe, North Africa and the Middle East, beginning November 6. This group includes Senators Theodore Green of Rhode Island, Brien McMahon of Connecticut, William Benton of Connecticut and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, Democrats; and Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin and Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa, Republicans. Most of the above are members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, so have a legitimate reason for taking the trip.

With them will also go Congressmen Gene Cox of Georgia, Howard Smith of Virginia, Frazier Reams of Ohio and Donald O'Toole of New York, Democrats; and Walter Judd of Minnesota, Harris Ellsworth of Oregon and Kenneth Keating of New York, Republicans.

Meanwhile, another congressional delegation has already taken off for a leisurely, two-month, round-the-world tour. They include Congressmen Herbert Bonner of North Carolina, Harold Donohue of Massachusetts, Sidney Fine of New York, John Shelley of California and William Lantaff of Florida, Democrats; together with Charles Brownson of Indiana, Thomas Curtis of Missouri, Cecil Harden of Indiana, Walt Horan of Washington and George Meader of Michigan. Their "official trip" is sponsored by the House Expenditures Committee which has no round-the-world business, but is supposed to keep an eye on federal expenses.

It is interesting to note that not a single congressman has asked to go to Korea, where the weather is growing bitter cold and accommodations aren't so comfortable.

Sparkman Vs. Lawyer

Sen. John Sparkman was mystified by a strange visit from an emissary of Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer just before the senator returned to Alabama.

The emissary, Assistant Secretary Thomas W. S. Davis, said, almost apologetically, "Secretary Sawyer is quite upset about your speech on the distribution of war contracts."

"What was the matter?" Sparkman asked.

"Well," Davis replied, "you said that 40 per cent of the war contracts are held by 10 companies, and the Secretary of Commerce feels you gave an erroneous impression. After all, much of the work on the prime contract is sublet. The Bendix Company, for example, has benefited widely from sub-contracts, and it is not one of the first 10."

Sparkman said this was most interesting, and that he would like the figures on Bendix.

Davis took out the list of defense contracts, then seemed even more embarrassed. For the figures revealed that Bendix was 15th in the list of prime contracts, receiving $265,000,000 worth.

NOTE — In a recent talk at Columbus, O., not cleared at the White House, Secretary Sawyer lambasted the federal budget as "wild and extravagant" and called the small plants corporation, just approved by Congress to help small business, as "ridiculous." As a result, rumors are current around Pennsylvania Avenue that Sawyer is anxious to exit from Washington.

Gravity Investments

By ROGER W. BABSON

GRAVITY VILLAGE, NEW BOSTON, N. H., Oct. 28—Readers know that I have always been interested in the force of gravity and its possibility for free power from which everyone could greatly benefit. Letters come to me asking if there are now any ways for investors to benefit from gravity. Yes, there are three.

Electric Power Developments

Every waterfall produces power due to gravity, plus, of course, the heat of the sun which takes the water from the oceans into the clouds. The clouds eventually turn into rain and supply the water which flows over these falls. In this connection, it must be realized that this gravity pull is the same in any part of the United States as it is at Niagara Falls. If any reader has never visited Niagara, he surely should do so. At that time he should realize that only a small portion of the power is now being used. The part of the waterfall which is being used cannot be seen; while the water going over the falls is "wasted," except for scenic beauty.

There are thousands of water powers now being used every day. Most of these are operating mills of various kinds; but they are gradually being converted to generate electricity which power can easily be transported. I, however, consider the Niagara Mohawk Power Company the prime electric power gravity development. This is the company which taps Niagara Falls and, supplemented by other falls and steam plants, supplies electric power to most of New York State, from Buffalo down to New York City. The stocks of this Company are listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The 3.90 per cent preferred pays $3.90 and sells at 96, thus yielding 4 per cent. The common pays $1.40 and sells at 25, thus yielding nearly 6 per cent. One cannot get rich quickly by buying these stocks, but if you put them away in your safety deposit box, they should gradually become more valuable and give you good dividends each year; all from gravity.

Railroad Companies

I certainly am not now bullish on most railroad stocks. They are handicapped by severe competition from trucks, automobiles and airplanes; their expenses are constantly increasing from wage demands and the cost of coal, oil, and equipment; while their rates are determined by political commissions, leaving little profit for stockholders. Transcontinental roads may do well for some time; also certain southwestern roads; but my favorites are the three gravity roads. These are the Virginia Railway, Norfolk & Western, and Chesapeake & Ohio. All of these let most of their heavy traffic coast downhill and have mostly only empty cars to pull uphill again!

I believe that the stocks of all three roads are safe investments; but I will quote only the stocks of the Virginian Railway which runs from the coal fields of West Virginia to Norfolk. (More details can freely be obtained from the company at 44 Wall Street, New York City.) The stocks are listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The Virginian Railway preferred pays $1.50 and sells for 28, while the common now pays $2.50 and sells for 33, thus yielding nearly 8 per cent.

Waterworks Securities

The most economically operated public utilities are gravity waterworks which supply householders with water. Why? The answer is that gravity does most of the work for them by causing the water inexpensively to run downhill through the pipes and up to your bathrooms without aid of costly power. In most water systems steam or electric power is needed first to pump the water up into a standpipe or reservoir. But, gravity systems have a natural reservoir, higher than any house in the city, and gravity performs all the work. If the water system in your community is operated by a private company, and the bonds or stocks are available, ascertain to what extent it is being operated by gravity. Based upon your findings, consider these securities as an investment.

Enthusiastic inventors who think they can use gravity for "perpetual motion" machines, should read "Wanted: War Inventions" in Readers Digest of October. The article entitled "Should You Buy Shares in America?" is good for everyone to read.

Matter Of Fact

By JOSEPH ALSOP

The Professionals Talk

WASHINGTON

The professional politicians in the Democratic party are just about as nervous, nowadays, as so many cats on hot bricks. The members of the real inner circle—the fathers of the party as it were—have thought for some time that they knew what was going to happen, and have been pleased with what they thought they knew.

In brief, they thought they knew that at some suitable moment before the new year, Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson would lay down his heavy burden, making a place at the State Department for Chief Justice Fred Vinson. This, they expected, would in turn be only the preliminary for the President to lay down his burden, passing the Democratic nomination to his old friend, the Chief Justice—Secretary of State.

This particular move in the game of political musical chairs has been discussed often enough before. It can now be stated, however, that some of those who have discussed it were not indulging in mere empty speculation.

Six months or so ago in fact, the President actually, signified his intention not to seek a third term, and declared his preference for the Chief Justice as his successor. He also indicated his intention to prepare the Chief Justice for the race by allowing him, so to speak, to use the State Department as a judicial disrobing room, where he could conveniently make the transition from the high formality of the supreme bench to the undress of rough and tumble politics.

Insiders Nervous

Because a group of Democratic insiders close to the President and the Chief Justice were aware that these signs and significations had been given, they believed that the Democratic party's future was fairly cut and dried. They thought the Chief Justice could beat any Republican candidate but Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. They thought he would make a good President. They were generally pleased with the prospect, as they understood it.

They are nervous now, for a very simple reason. The Chief Justice has also signified to his old political friends, that he will not leap from the supreme bench straight into party politics. Some sort of a disrobing room is essential for him. The State Department appears to be the only one available. For it is inconceivable that the President will replace Robert A. Lovett at the Defense Department, where the new Secretary is so brilliantly tackling his gigantic task; and it is equally inconceivably that the Chief Justice will leave the court to go back to the Treasury, where he was before his elevation.

Thus the Acheson-Vinson switch is regarded as being the inescapable prelude to the Truman-Vinson switch. And those who have been looking to see the Chief Justice as the Democratic candidate in 1952 are now beginning to fear that the whole project will die aborning, because there is nothing to suggest that the Acheson-Vinson switch is going to be made.

At least, if the Chief Justice is to replace the Secretary of State before the new year as anticipated, there are only two months left to arrange the matter. And the President, who indicated his intentions on this point a good many months ago, has more recently been notably silent about them.

More Uncertainties

Such is the background. Perhaps the professionals, in considering this background, have paid too little attention to the foreground, and especially to the peculiar relationship between the President and Dean Acheson. Those close to Acheson still appear to be convinced that he has no intention of leaving his office. Yet they also say that the failure of the Senate to confirm his friend, Philip Jessup, has been the worst blow that Acheson has received to date. And there is no doubt at all that if a truce is arranged in Korea, and Acheson comes back from his present journey to Paris and Rome in a position to claim successes abroad, a new situation will exist in which Acheson can retire gracefully, not "under fire."

This in turn may influence the President, who has been so determined to stand by Acheson to the last. In short, you pay your money and you take your choice, as to the best bet about this mysterious pattern, whose development is so unpredictable.

Perhaps one last set of factors should also be considered by the eager bettors. Within the White House itself, while Mrs. Truman continues to urge the President not to run again, the professional inhabitants of the executive woodwork are urging the President to take the opposite course. They do this naturally, because their livelihoods and their self-importances depend upon Truman. But here again, there is a balance of forces, between the cronies and the President's wife, so that here also there is uncertainty.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Does Nobody Care?

There have always been crooked men, wicked men, malicious men — and women, too — but that is no reason why the citizens of such a country as ours should condone corruption, subversion, betrayal. Nor should we permit ourselves to be governed by the gutter by default.

Day after day, reports appear of official misconduct, Internal Revenue official's dishonesty, of RFC corruption, of the secretary to the Vice President being involved in using influence, of police being associated with bookmakers — and what has been disclosed amounts to hardly anything. The story has not been told by half.

And there is more than that. Take these strikes — dockworkers' strikes, milk strikes, strikes in munition plants, strikes that in the present state of our country make no sense. Those 90,000 casualties in Korea did not strike.

There seems to be no use raising that argument. Strikers say that they are veterans too. Some say that they have sons in Korea. But still they strike. They tie up supplies to their own sons and to their neighbors' sons. And what they quarrel about ought to be, among civilized persons, adjustable not only in the private interests of individuals but in the national welfare. These men are not thinking clearly ;most of them are misled by extraordinarily selfish so-called leaders who project themselves into every troubled situation. For instance, the very serious New York dockers' strike began as part of a permanent feud between a man called Ryan and a man called Sampson, neither important to the needs of America.

There can be no reason why Harry Bridges should play any part in the affairs of this country. He is not one of us. He does not belong here. He has been ordered deported and somehow he and his lawyers and politicians connive to keep him in the United States. The Department of Justice has been delaying since August, 1950, to bring his case on appeal before the courts, they, not he, applying for the delays. Who is interested in keeping this man, who has done this country no good since some misery brought him to our shores, in this country?

The association of Harry Bridges with John L. Lewis, and the Communists, particularly in the automobile, electrical and dockworkers' industries, cannot be constructive for America in times like these. Since 1936, they have kept the relations between labor and management disturbed with such constancy that it is impossible not to wonder why they do it. The motive must be other than personal ambition; it must be deeper than that and more perilous.

It is difficult to understand why John L. Lewis, who hates Communists, can associate with them from time to time. He has never permitted Communists in the United Mine Workers but he brought them into the CIO and gave them high office. He knew that such men as Lee Pressman and Len de Caux were left-wingers. He knew that 11 of his CIO unions were being organized under the control of Communists. Yet he hated Communists. How is this to be explained?

When Lewis temporarily broke with the Communists, they were strong enough to have him thrown out of the CIO. Yet, he is now back at the old stand, making deals with them designed to weaken the position of Walter Reuther in the United Auto Workers, so that Communists, associated now with Lewis, can gain control of that crucial union and industry.

No one can accuse John L. Lewis of being a Communist. But who can explain his conduct?

Obviously, it is impossible to depend on our politicians. They deal not with fundamental principles or with the issues in a situation. They count the votes. They measure the strength of pressure groups. They fear the violence of organized elements who answer all questions with picket lines, legal or illegal, with threats and intimidations. The police are generally instructed to ignore unlawful picketing lest they offend prospective voters. Party politics are paramount.

It simply cannot continue to go on that way without the citizens sooner or later taking matters in their own hands as they have done before in this country. And that is no solution, for it can only mean more disorders, more confusion, more injustice and hatred.

Corruption breeds not only corruption but lawlessness. When those at the top of government are moral cowards, the worst elements in the population gain control. They risk greatly because they recognize the smallness of heart. The selfishness of those at the helm of government.

This country needs a moral revolution — and soon.

Keyser-McCoole Bridge Nearly Ready For Use

Travel Over Span Likely This Week

KEYSER, W. Va. — The Keyser-McCoole Bridge spanning the Potomac River, between the two communities, will be completed and ready for travel probably the end of the week.

It may even be completed before that time. There remains only the completion of the rails on either side of the structure on the Maryland or north end of the structure. The foreman in charge of the finishing work said this is a matter of only a few days. Then there is the painting of the metal rails in the uncompleted part and the under steel structure, and work on this is being done now.

The work is being done by P. N. Spanos & Company, Wheeling, a firm specializing in bridge structural steel painting. This work was begun on the Keyser end of the structure on Friday and is progressing well, and it is understood this can be completed before the end of the week.

This is one type of work that the "sidewalk superintendents" of Keyser and vicinity have not observed. The work is being done with little fanfare and the customary crowds that have gathered to watch other groups of workmen in the more than two years of operation, have not begun to realize that here is a job that has its interesting points, too.

Keyser and McCoole citizens say the bridge will never be completely finished until the state roads commissions of Maryland and West Virginia get together on a plan to provide lighting for the structure. As it is now, the bridge is exclusively for vehicle traffic, night and day, as few persons, if any, will face the dangers of walking over the long span in night hours, with dangers facing them that will not be present in the light hours of day.

Keyser Women Named To Office

KEYSER, W. Va.—Several local women were elected to district officers at the 41st bi-annual Rebekah District Convention held last week at Blaine at which Mrs. Edith Workman presided as District Deputy President.

Among those elected for the ensuing term were May Arnold, Blaine, vice-president; Lena Johnson, Parsons, secretary; Hazel Pyles, treasurer, Blaine, and the following appointive officers were named: Evelyn Shrader, Thomas, warden; Kathleen Harshman, Parsons, conductor; Stella Lazier, color bearer, Blackwater; Mira Cooper, Thomas, chaplain; Evelyn Hanlin, Elk Garden, inside guardian; Beulah Nester, Parsons, Musician.

The following local area persons were appointed to standing committees: Evelyn Shrader, Thomas; Esta Brae, Elk Garden, and Janette Fream, Davis, to resolution committee; June Parrish, Elk Garden; Curenia Rice, Keyser and Mamie Drury, Davis, to courtesy committee; Faye Edwards, Keyser, publicity committee.

Mt. Olive Lodge, Keyser, carried off attendance honors at the convention with Blaine being second.

Hampshire Countians Enlist For Navy Service

KEYSER, W. Va., Oct 28—Two Hampshire County youths recently enlisted in the Navy, according to Chief Teddy M. Beckham, local recruiter.

James Eugene Shingleton, 19, son of Eugene Shingleton, Romney, enlisted for four years as seaman recruit. He graduated from Romney High School. Charles Dailey Loar, 18, son of Floyd Lee Lear, Romney, and Mr. Mildred Pauline Lear, Cumberland, enlisted for four years as a seaman recruit. Both men are taking their basic training at Bainbridge, Md. Naval Training Center.

Chief Beckham announced that the date for closing the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps to applicants for 1952 classes, has been set as November 17. Young men who will graduate from high schools in 1952 may take advantage of this opportunity to become eligible for the college aptitude test which will be given December 8.

Piedmont WSCS Plans Pre-Christmas Bazaar

PIEDMONT, W. Va. — The pre-Christmas Bazaar of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Trinity Methodist Church of Piedmont will be held Thursday, November 8, beginning at 4 p. m.

MISS BETSY McCAIN

Frederick Girl Serving As Maryland Apple Queen

The Maryland Apple Queen who is joining in the observance this week of National Apple Week is Miss Betsy McCain, daughter of Russell H. McCain, of Frederick, chairman of the State Roads Commission.

Miss McCain, and apple queens from West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Virginia will visit Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to carry the apple message to prominent citizens of these cities.

Family In Industry

The Maryland queen also is a granddaughter of Dr. Joseph Apple, founder and its first president of Hood College in Frederick. Her family is prominently associated with the apple industry.

Miss McCain, who received her regal honors from the Maryland Horticultural Society, attended Northfield School for Girls in East Northfield, Mass., where she was graduated in 1947.

Later, she attended Hood College, taking part in athletics, serving as an officer of her class and the campus YWCA for several years.

Literary Editor

She was literary editor of the Hood yearbook, Touchstone, and was May Day chairman in 1950. In the same year she also held the honorary position as "White Blazer Girl" for her contribution toward the advancement of the college. She also was given the title "Prince Hood" in 1951 as the senior who best exemplified the Hood Spirit.

For the past five years Miss McCain has served as councilor at Camp Marlyn, Andover, N. H. She is currently the alumnae representative for the Class of 1951 and is employed by Hood College as an assistant field director.

Other queens who will journey with Miss McCain on the promotional tour are Miss Maxine Twigg, Romney, W. Va.; Miss Pat Alexander, daughter of Mrs. J. M. Alexander, Fairfield, Va., and Miss Carolyn Snyder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Snyder of Gardners, Pa., each representing her home state.

This program is being sponsored by the Appalachian Apple Service, a grower-sponsored promotional agency for apples produced in the four states. Growers in this four-state area are completing the harvest of a crop totaling some 24-million bushels, about one-fifth of the nation's apple crop.

Keyser-McCoole Bridge Nearly Ready For Use

Travel Over Span Likely This Week

KEYSER, W. Va. — The Keyser-McCoole Bridge spanning the Potomac River, between the two communities, will be completed and ready for travel probably the end of the week.

It may even be completed before that time. There remains only the completion of the rails on either side of the structure on the Maryland or north end of the structure. The foreman in charge of the finishing work said this is a matter of only a few days. Then there is the painting of the metal rails in the uncompleted part and the under steel structure, and work on this is being done now.

The work is being done by P. N. Spanos & Company, Wheeling, a firm specializing in bridge structural steel painting. This work was begun on the Keyser end of the structure on Friday and is progressing well, and it is understood this can be completed before the end of the week.

This is one type of work that the "sidewalk superintendents" of Keyser and vicinity have not observed. The work is being done with little fanfare and the customary crowds that have gathered to watch other groups of workmen in the more than two years of operation, have not begun to realize that here is a job that has its interesting points, too.

Keyser and McCoole citizens say the bridge will never be completely finished until the state roads commissions of Maryland and West Virginia get together on a plan to provide lighting for the structure. As it is now, the bridge is exclusively for vehicle traffic, night and day, as few persons, if any, will face the dangers of walking over the long span in night hours, with dangers facing them that will not be present in the light hours of day.

Keyser Women Named To Office

KEYSER, W. Va.—Several local women were elected to district officers at the 41st bi-annual Rebekah District Convention held last week at Blaine at which Mrs. Edith Workman presided as District Deputy President.

Among those elected for the ensuing term were May Arnold, Blaine, vice-president; Lena Johnson, Parsons, secretary; Hazel Pyles, treasurer, Blaine, and the following appointive officers were named: Evelyn Shrader, Thomas, warden; Kathleen Harshman, Parsons, conductor; Stella Lazier, color bearer, Blackwater; Mira Cooper, Thomas, chaplain; Evelyn Hanlin, Elk Garden, inside guardian; Beulah Nester, Parsons, Musician.

The following local area persons were appointed to standing committees: Evelyn Shrader, Thomas; Esta Brae, Elk Garden, and Janette Fream, Davis, to resolution committee; June Parrish, Elk Garden; Curenia Rice, Keyser and Mamie Drury, Davis, to courtesy committee; Faye Edwards, Keyser, publicity committee.

Mt. Olive Lodge, Keyser, carried off attendance honors at the convention with Blaine being second.

Hampshire Countians Enlist For Navy Service

KEYSER, W. Va., Oct 28—Two Hampshire County youths recently enlisted in the Navy, according to Chief Teddy M. Beckham, local recruiter.

James Eugene Shingleton, 19, son of Eugene Shingleton, Romney, enlisted for four years as seaman recruit. He graduated from Romney High School. Charles Dailey Loar, 18, son of Floyd Lee Lear, Romney, and Mr. Mildred Pauline Lear, Cumberland, enlisted for four years as a seaman recruit. Both men are taking their basic training at Bainbridge, Md. Naval Training Center.

Chief Beckham announced that the date for closing the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps to applicants for 1952 classes, has been set as November 17. Young men who will graduate from high schools in 1952 may take advantage of this opportunity to become eligible for the college aptitude test which will be given December 8.

MISS BETSY McCAIN

Frederick Girl Serving As Maryland Apple Queen

The Maryland Apple Queen who is joining in the observance this week of National Apple Week is Miss Betsy McCain, daughter of Russell H. McCain, of Frederick, chairman of the State Roads Commission.

Miss McCain, and apple queens from West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Virginia will visit Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to carry the apple message to prominent citizens of these cities.

Family In Industry

The Maryland queen also is a granddaughter of Dr. Joseph Apple, founder and its first president of Hood College in Frederick. Her family is prominently associated with the apple industry.

Miss McCain, who received her regal honors from the Maryland Horticultural Society, attended Northfield School for Girls in East Northfield, Mass., where she was graduated in 1947.

Later, she attended Hood College, taking part in athletics, serving as an officer of her class and the campus YWCA for several years.

Literary Editor

She was literary editor of the Hood yearbook, Touchstone, and was May Day chairman in 1950. In the same year she also held the honorary position as "White Blazer Girl" for her contribution toward the advancement of the college. She also was given the title "Prince Hood" in 1951 as the senior who best exemplified the Hood Spirit.

For the past five years Miss McCain has served as councilor at Camp Marlyn, Andover, N. H. She is currently the alumnae representative for the Class of 1951 and is employed by Hood College as an assistant field director.

Other queens who will journey with Miss McCain on the promotional tour are Miss Maxine Twigg, Romney, W. Va.; Miss Pat Alexander, daughter of Mrs. J. M. Alexander, Fairfield, Va., and Miss Carolyn Snyder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Snyder of Gardners, Pa., each representing her home state.

This program is being sponsored by the Appalachian Apple Service, a grower-sponsored promotional agency for apples produced in the four states. Growers in this four-state area are completing the harvest of a crop totaling some 24-million bushels, about one-fifth of the nation's apple crop.

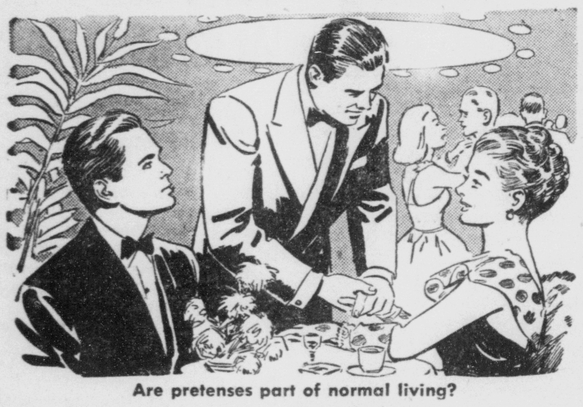
Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist



Are pretenses part of normal living?

Answer: Yes, especially the kind that really deceive no one. There are aspects of reality which it does no good to dwell on and which civilized people tacitly agree to ignore so as to make life pleasanter for everybody — above all, the feelings of annoyance or indifference which most of us have in certain moods. "Putting on an act" of friendliness when you "feel like biting someone's head off" is not really being insincere — it is saving others from the same sort of unpleasantness from which you prefer to have them save you. A world in which everybody always acted as he felt would be unbearable to live in.

Do brain changes make old people "difficult"?

Answer: No, says Drs. D. A. Boyd and F. J. Braceland in Medical Clinics of North America. What makes some old people cranky and hard to get on with is not mainly the organic changes taking place in their brains — all these really do is to slow down their thinking and make it hard for them to grasp new ideas. It is the sense of failing powers plus the feeling of not being wanted that creates the emotional insecurity which makes them irritable. Psychotherapy with aging people consists mainly in attempting to restore their sense of security and personal dignity — to make them feel "wanted" again.

Are our young folks pessimistic?

Answer: One might be tempted to think so by the novels turned out by some of our most gifted younger writers — James Jones and now, William Styron, for example. But perhaps the truth is that it is the morbidly unhappy members of each generation who are most apt to become writers. For creative writing is essentially a means of sublimating repressed feelings, and one of the strongest of these in neurotic young men and young women is self-pity. In telling a story of frustration and despair the author can say indirectly — and unconsciously: "See how terribly the cruel world has treated poor me!"

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

G D A A T E Y E N N P X W D ? E D G D A
A T E Y R G H W, X E V V E K G K I B E B Y-
S G D ? — H T G O W H B W G D W.

Coal Mine Operators Given Special Priority By NPA

WASHINGTON (AP)—The National Production Authority gave special priority help to coal miners and coke producers in obtaining materials for repair, maintenance and operation.

The new order also permits the country's 9,000 coal and coke producers to obtain materials for minor additions to plant and equipment without obtaining special allotments from NPA.

The agency said the priority action will help the industry expand the output of fuel for defense plants and essential civilian industries.

Coal mines and processing plants, coke plants and coal chemical and petroleum coke calcining operations are eligible for the automatic priority assistance. They need merely certify on their purchase orders for materials that the order is within the limits fixed by the new regulation.

Each producer may use this "self-rating" to obtain a quantity of materials based on monthly average purchases in the last nine months of 1950. The first three months were excluded because many mines were closed by strikes in the period.

For minor plant and equipment additions, each producer may (1) buy in any quarter materials not exceeding 10 per cent of his quarterly quota for maintenance and repaid materials or (2) spend $2,000 on capital additions, whichever is greater.

KEEPING UP WITH

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 28 (INS)—Jean Simmons gets herself the role of Pilate's wife on a long term contract with RKO. This is really a surprise since everyone thought Jean was going to join her husband, Stewart Granger, at MGM, but Howard Hughes signed her in an unexpected move. However, she will do "Young Bess" at MGM with Granger.

Jean will be built up as one of RKO's top stars. "Pilate's Wife" has been one of the most discussed roles of the year, and it's a great feather in the Simmons girl's cap to be able to land it. Even Jennifer Jones lost out.

I don't know just how long the contract is for, but I understand it's for a long time.

There is no grande passion in the feeling Montgomery Clift has for Elizabeth Taylor, despite reports. True, he took her to his pet Italian restaurant and to Birdland, the hep-cat heaven, but he thinks of Liz as a young sister.

More interesting than Clift's feeling for Liz is George Stevens' plans to star Monty in "The Dipper." It's a Stevens original and is highly dramatic. The hero (Clift) gets his foot caught in a railroad switch, and his girl, who is trying to free him, has to make up her mind whether to die with him or jump and save herself.

George plans a "Lady And The Tiger" ending, so audiences will be left wondering.

Dorothy Lamour has one of the most novel jobs in the business. C. B. De Mille has hired Dottie as super-deluxe public relations woman for advance promotion on "The Greatest Show On Earth."

Dottie will spend the entire month of February visiting the key cities coast to coast, promoting the opening of the picture which the public will see for the first time in March.

This all came about because of the fine compo job Dorothy did. The New England exhibitors wrote Frank Freeman a rave letter, and at the Movietime, USA dinner, Bill Grady, of MGM, paid her a tribute such as I've seldom heard any actress receive.

I feel very sentimental over the news that the beautiful daughter of the Edwin Knopfs, Mrs. Leon Cooper, is expecting a baby, because I was the first to announce that a daughter named Wendy had been born to Mildred and Eddie Knopf.

So, it only seems right that I should be the first to announce that Wendy is expecting a baby. She is married to the son of the Harry Coopers, and it's difficult to say whether Mildred and Eddie, or the Harry Coopers are the most excited.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

If Margaret Truman can break a professional engagement she'll be with Robert Merrill at the opening of the Met. Merrill will be there and he has invited the President's daughter.

Barbara Hutton is due in the USA any day. She'll join her son, Lance, in Arizona. The boy is not well and must again spend the winter there.

Almost as soon as he landed in Hollywood, Howland Sargeant, Myrna Loy's bridegroom, was whisked off to Ensenada for a fishing trip.

Tom Neal's ex-wife, Vicki Lane, is wearing an engagement ring put on her finger by Fred Til'inghast, wealthy New Yorker. But Vicki denies the rumors they are married.

Frances Marion certainly has a charmed life. She had a head-on collision with a car which was hidden by a fire truck. She was in the hospital for several days but is now recuperating at home.

Hedy Lamarr was at the preview of "The Well" with Writer Fred Schiller No husband in evidence—maybe he's gone back to Mexico.

Ann Rutherford is not marrying Bill Dozier for the simple reason that she and David may have never untied the knot, and have no plans to do so now

Gene Nelson's wife, who is expecting a baby, has been ordered to stay in bed and take life easy.

Why was Denise Darcel putting on such a coy act at the Army Auxiliary Corps cocktail party? How these girls do change!

The Movietime, USA dinner was a splendiferous success, and gave those of us who attended an idea of what such a tour means both to the public and to the theatre owners. It will be even bigger and better next year.

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Are pretenses part of normal living?

Answer: Yes, especially the kind that really deceive no one. There are aspects of reality which it does no good to dwell on and which civilized people tacitly agree to ignore so as to make life pleasanter for everybody — above all, the feelings of annoyance or indifference which most of us have in certain moods. "Putting on an act" of friendliness when you "feel like biting someone's head off" is not really being insincere — it is saving others from the same sort of unpleasantness from which you prefer to have them save you. A world in which everybody always acted as he felt would be unbearable to live in.

Do brain changes make old people "difficult"?

Answer: No, says Drs. D. A. Boyd and F. J. Braceland in Medical Clinics of North America. What makes some old people cranky and hard to get on with is not mainly the organic changes taking place in their brains — all these really do is to slow down their thinking and make it hard for them to grasp new ideas. It is the sense of failing powers plus the feeling of not being wanted that creates the emotional insecurity which makes them irritable. Psychotherapy with aging people consists mainly in attempting to restore their sense of security and personal dignity — to make them feel "wanted" again.

Are our young folks pessimistic?

Answer: One might be tempted to think so by the novels turned out by some of our most gifted younger writers — James Jones and now, William Styron, for example. But perhaps the truth is that it is the morbidly unhappy members of each generation who are most apt to become writers. For creative writing is essentially a means of sublimating repressed feelings, and one of the strongest of these in neurotic young men and young women is self-pity. In telling a story of frustration and despair the author can say indirectly — and unconsciously: "See how terribly the cruel world has treated poor me!"

Saturday's Answer

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

G D A A T E Y E N N P X W D ? E D G D A
A T E Y R G H W, X E V V E K G K I B E B Y-
S G D ? — H T G O W H B W G D W.

Saturday's Cryptoquote: BUT MISERY STILL DELIGHTS TO TRACE ITS SEMBLANCE IN ANOTHER'S CASE—COWPER.

Coal Mine Operators Given Special Priority By NPA

WASHINGTON (AP)—The National Production Authority gave special priority help to coal miners and coke producers in obtaining materials for repair, maintenance and operation.

The new order also permits the country's 9,000 coal and coke producers to obtain materials for minor additions to plant and equipment without obtaining special allotments from NPA.

The agency said the priority action will help the industry expand the output of fuel for defense plants and essential civilian industries.

Coal mines and processing plants, coke plants and coal chemical and petroleum coke calcining operations are eligible for the automatic priority assistance. They need merely certify on their purchase orders for materials that the order is within the limits fixed by the new regulation.

Each producer may use this "self-rating" to obtain a quantity of materials based on monthly average purchases in the last nine months of 1950. The first three months were excluded because many mines were closed by strikes in the period.

For minor plant and equipment additions, each producer may (1) buy in any quarter materials not exceeding 10 per cent of his quarterly quota for maintenance and repaid materials or (2) spend $2,000 on capital additions, whichever is greater.

KEEPING UP WITH
By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 28 (INS)—Jean Simmons gets herself the role of Pilate's wife on a long term contract with RKO. This is really a surprise since everyone thought Jean was going to join her husband, Stewart Granger, at MGM, but Howard Hughes signed her in an unexpected move. However, she will do "Young Bess" at MGM with Granger.

Jean will be built up as one of RKO's top stars. "Pilate's Wife" has been one of the most discussed roles of the year, and it's a great feather in the Simmons girl's cap to be able to land it. Even Jennifer Jones lost out.

I don't know just how long the contract is for, but I understand it's for a long time.

There is no grande passion in the feeling Montgomery Clift has for Elizabeth Taylor, despite reports. True, he took her to his pet Italian restaurant and to Birdland, the hep-cat heaven, but he thinks of Liz as a young sister.

More interesting than Clift's feeling for Liz is George Stevens' plans to star Monty in "The Dipper." It's a Stevens original and is highly dramatic. The hero (Clift) gets his foot caught in a railroad switch, and his girl, who is trying to free him, has to make up her mind whether to die with him or jump and save herself.

George plans a "Lady And The Tiger" ending, so audiences will be left wondering.

Dorothy Lamour has one of the most novel jobs in the business. C. B. De Mille has hired Dottie as super-deluxe public relations woman for advance promotion on "The Greatest Show On Earth."

Dottie will spend the entire month of February visiting the key cities coast to coast, promoting the opening of the picture which the public will see for the first time in March.

This all came about because of the fine compo job Dorothy did. The New England exhibitors wrote Frank Freeman a rave letter, and at the Movietime, USA dinner, Bill Grady, of MGM, paid her a tribute such as I've seldom heard any actress receive.

I feel very sentimental over the news that the beautiful daughter of the Edwin Knopfs, Mrs. Leon Cooper, is expecting a baby, because I was the first to announce that a daughter named Wendy had been born to Mildred and Eddie Knopf.

So, it only seems right that I should be the first to announce that Wendy is expecting a baby. She is married to the son of the Harry Coopers, and it's difficult to say whether Mildred and Eddie, or the Harry Coopers are the most excited.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

If Margaret Truman can break a professional engagement she'll be with Robert Merrill at the opening of the Met. Merrill will be there and he has invited the President's daughter.

Barbara Hutton is due in the USA any day. She'll join her son, Lance, in Arizona. The boy is not well and must again spend the winter there.

Almost as soon as he landed in Hollywood, Howland Sargeant, Myrna Loy's bridegroom, was whisked off to Ensenada for a fishing trip.

Tom Neal's ex-wife, Vicki Lane, is wearing an engagement ring put on her finger by Fred Till'inghast, wealthy New Yorker. But Vicki denies the rumors they are married.

Frances Marion certainly has a charmed life. She had a head-on collision with a car which was hidden by a fire truck. She was in the hospital for several days but is now recuperating at home.

Hedy Lamarr was at the preview of "The Well" with Writer Fred Schiller. No husband in evidence—maybe he's gone back to Mexico.

Ann Rutherford is not marrying Bill Dozier for the simple reason that she and David may have never untied the knot, and have no plans to do so now.

Gene Nelson's wife, who is expecting a baby, has been ordered to stay in bed and take life easy.

Why was Denise Darcel putting on such a coy act at the Army Auxiliary Corps cocktail party? How these girls do change!

The Movietime, USA dinner was a splendiferous success, and gave those of us who attended an idea of what such a tour means both to the public and to the theatre owners. It will be even bigger and better next year.

Radio And Television

By JOHN CROSBY

The Righteousness Of A Reformed Sinner

Raymond Rubicam, one of the giants of the advertising rack—uh—business, founded Young & Rubicam, now one of the largest advertising agencies in the world, retired in 1948 and now basks in the warm sun of Arizona where apparently he has done a certain amount of brooding about the sins of his youth. At any rate, he recently wrote a letter to Sen. William Benton who read it on the Senate floor where it attracted absolutely no attention at all.

John Crosby

It's a forceful letter and, while most of the complaints in it have been made before, they are particularly pertinent and especially damning because they come from a man who did more than his share in committing the sins he now deplores. "Radio broadcasting," Mr. Rubicam wrote, "has come nowhere near serving the American people as well as it ought to have served them. I am convinced that a large part of the reason lies in the domination of radio by the advertiser. Since I am no longer in the advertising business these views will be called by many of my former associates, the newly acquired righteousness of a reformed sinner, but the fact remains that even when I was most active in advertising and in radio I held the same views and would have welcomed a reduction of the percentage of radio time available to advertisers and an enlargement of the public's opportunity to hear programs which have little worth for the advertiser but great worth for the public. . ."

• — • — •

"What I am opposed to," Mr. Rubicam continued, "is what amounts practically to a monopoly of radio and television by advertisers to the point where the public's freedom of choice in programs is more of a theory than a fact and to the point where public service of the two media is only a shadow of what it could be. . . Radio programming in the United States has been comparable to a school system in which everything stopped at the elementary grades . . . and which consequently had no colleges, universities or post-graduate schools to serve the rest of the population.

"In the field of print, people have a lot better chance of escaping the worst than they have in radio. There are printed publications specializing in almost every field of human interest, inquiry, thought, activity. Even those newspapers and magazines which typically take the low road to popularity often do more to serve minority interests than radio does.

"The infinite variety permitted by printed publication has helped bring men a long way in civilization. We, nevertheless, face an age in which a higher and higher percentage of what our minds take in will be taken in through radio and television. Their danger is that if mis-

"The Authority on Authorities"

SOME GUESSES GHASTLY

SOME of the discarding problems posed to the defenders when the declarer runs a long suit are ghastly. When the big suit is used early enough, before his opponents can read just what he holds or what he is trying for, it may be next to impossible to figure out the correct tosses. Sometimes, all that a poor defender can do is make the best guess he can, while knowing it is only a guess. And unless he is fortunate enough to guess just right, he hands the declarer one or more tricks, perhaps his contract.

He is so much in the dark, however, that he has an unearthly job to figure out what discard will prove the best and which worst, when it comes to the last of a series of difficult choices.

Not liking to lead from his own honors, West chose the spade 9 for his lead and the K forced the A. East switched to the heart 9 in the hope of limiting club ruffs in the dummy. South won that with the A, scored the club A and ruffed the club 5 with the heart 4. Then he ran the rest of his hearts, putting the pressure on. East discarded his spade 8, club K and diamond 9, and then was in trouble. He had left the spade J-10, diamond A-10 and club 9. West tossed off one spade, then all clubs, retaining the diamond Q-J-7 and the club Q-10.

As the last heart was laid down, West followed his blue study by discarding the club 10. East then discarded the diamond 10. South then put East in with the diamond 2 to the A. With only clubs, East returned the 9 to the Q, and West couldn't help leading the diamond Q to the K, the spade Q then taking the final trick. If West had discarded a diamond on his last toss and retained two each in the minors, he could have beaten the contract. But, when he cut himself down to one club, his cause was hopeless.

By JOHN CROSBY

The Righteousness Of A Reformed Sinner

Raymond Rubicam, one of the giants of the advertising rack—uh—business, founded Young & Rubicam, now one of the largest advertising agencies in the world, retired in 1948 and now basks in the warm sun of Arizona where apparently he has done a certain amount of brooding about the sins of his youth. At any rate, he recently wrote a letter to Sen. William Benton who read it on the Senate floor where it attracted absolutely no attention at all.

John Crosby

It's a forceful letter and, while most of the complaints in it have been made before, they are particularly pertinent and especially damning because they come from a man who did more than his share in committing the sins he now deplores. "Radio broadcasting," Mr. Rubicam wrote, "has come nowhere near serving the American people as well as it ought to have served them. I am convinced that a large part of the reason lies in the domination of radio by the advertiser. Since I am no longer in the advertising business these views will be called by many of my former associates, the newly acquired righteousness of a reformed sinner, but the fact remains that even when I was most active in advertising and in radio I held the same views and would have welcomed a reduction of the percentage of radio time available to advertisers and an enlargement of the public's opportunity to hear programs which have little worth for the advertiser but great worth for the public. . ."

• — • — •

"What I am opposed to," Mr. Rubicam continued, "is what amounts practically to a monopoly of radio and television by advertisers to the point where the public's freedom of choice in programs is more of a theory than a fact and to the point where public service of the two media is only a shadow of what it could be. . . Radio programming in the United States has been comparable to a school system in which everything stopped at the elementary grades . . . and which consequently had no colleges, universities or post-graduate schools to serve the rest of the population.

"In the field of print, people have a lot better chance of escaping the worst than they have in radio. There are printed publications specializing in almost every field of human interest, inquiry, thought, activity. Even those newspapers and magazines which typically take the low road to popularity often do more to serve minority interests than radio does.

"The infinite variety permitted by printed publication has helped bring men a long way in civilization. We, nevertheless, face an age in which a higher and higher percentage of what our minds take in will be taken in through radio and television. Their danger is that if mis-

New Boy Scout Executive Will Assume Duties

Robert E. Metger, 33 Frost Avenue, Frostburg, a veteran in area scouting circles, has been named the new field scout executive of Potomac Council, Boy Scouts of America.

The announcement of his appointment was made by Dr. E. E. Church, council president, and Willis V. Smith, council Scout executive.

The new field worker has had 15 years active participation with Boy Scouting. He became a Tenderfoot Scout in November, 1932, and before entering the armed forces at the outbreak of World War II, he was made an Eagle Scout. At that time he was assistant scoutmaster of Frostburg Troop No. 26, sponsored by Farrady Post, American Legion.

During World War II he served with the Corps of Engineers, seeing combat in the European and Pacific theatres. After the war he spent three years as a staff engineer with the Army of Occupation in Japan. His total Army service covers eight years, having been released from active duty in July, 1949.

Since that time, Metger has been engaged in surveying and engineering work through this section.

Effective November 1 Metger will take over his new duties working out of council headquarters in the County Building, Union Street. At present he is attending the 45-day scout executive training school at Mendham, N. J.

Since leaving the Army and returning to Boy Scout work he has served as scoutmaster of Troop No. 48, sponsored by St. John's Episcopal Church, Frostburg, and lately as district commissioner of Mountain District, which covers the Frostburg area.

He was also an assistant scoutmaster of the National Jamboree troop which went to Valley Forge, Pa., summer before last from Potomac Council.

This summer he was a member of the staff at Camp Potomac, the council's new camp near Oldtown.

Smith said Metger's work will be with the South Branch, New Creek and Tri-Towns districts mainly, plus any other functional assignments.

Metger is married to the former Mary Virginia Walker and the couple has two children, Bobby, 4, and Carroll, 2.

ON THE LINE

By BOB CONSIDINE

LAS VEGAS, Nev., (INS) — The exact weight of the explosive heart of an a-bomb is never divulged, except by the likes of Dr. Klaus Fuchs. But the belief on the fringes of Operation Desert Rock is that it takes about as much of the stuff to make a so-called baby a-bomb as it does to prime one of those Eniwetok jobs.

An atomic explosion is not caused by any means heretofore employed in making explosive matter go bang. The a-bomb has no fuse, no firing pin, in the accepted sense of the term. Uranium-235 or plutonium explodes when sufficient amounts of the stuff are assembled, or flung together briskly, to form a larger and heavier bulk. In other words the a-bomb explodes when its material reaches the right size.

Let us guess that a 20-pound hunk of the stuff is not big enough in itself to achieve detonation. You could bite it, shoot a bullet through it, or drop it out of the Empire State Building and it would not explode. It must be joined, perhaps by mechanical devices within the bombing casing, by another 20-pound piece. Then nothing could stop the 40-pound mass from going off instantly.

• — • — •

What the atomic wizards seem to have achieved recently is a method whereby those two hunks, or a series of smaller chunks amounting to the weight of the two hunks, can be brought almost together or in an uncertain sort of melding.

This creates a detonation which while probably beyond the power of a large conventional bomb or shell, is still tiny compared even to the Model T atomic bomb which knocked Japan out of the war and the so-called midget can be much more safely handled with troops in the vicinity.

As Washington hinted last week it is now possible to achieve an atomic bomb which would not explode at all, in the sense of a loud report, a blasting shock wave and a spread of shrapnel. But this silent "explosion" probably would spread death-dealing radiation about the immediate vicinity where it landed and for some time afterwards. An effect of this sort might be achieved by "teasing" the sub-critical masses inside the bomb or shell, never permitting them actually to get together but letting them get close enough to produce great invisible waves of radioactivity — a terrifying psychological block to any enemy.

Inasmuch as a specific amount of U-235 or plutonium is needed either to produce an Eniwetok holocaust or a poof as modest as the midget born at Las Vegas at the start of these tests, it does not seem likely that there can ever be an atomic bullet.

• — • — •

It seems also that if there is created artillery with atomic shells, the shells will have to be quite large and launched by guns of a design considerably different than big howitzers now banging away at the enemy in Korea.

A-bombs have now been detonated amid targets ranging all the way from battleships to mice. But one has never been tested against the target foremost in the American's mind—his type of home and the type of building in which he works.

Such a test is scheduled for next week in Nevada, during which time what amounts to an American housing community must be built, in order to be destroyed.

The AEC will reach two goals in that test. It will open the experiment to the eyes and ears of the press, radio and television, at the closest possible range, thus satisfying increasing demand for a good look at the world's foremost military tool. Secondly, the test will prove whether or not our cities might be completely leveled by an a-bomb, as was the flimsily-constructed center of Hiroshima. Right now there is considerable speculation in civilian defense circles as to whether the cellar of the standard American home, for instance, is the safest place to hide during an a-bomb attack.

In the meantime, the AEC and Army have more pressing matters at hand. Their joint Operation Desert Rock has run into a series of embarrassing delays which have thrown the timetable out of kilter. Weather and a fine respect for the safety of people on whom radioactive clouds or desert dust might settle have been the chief causes of delays whose cost in dollars must now be slightly titanic.

Compared to Premium-Priced Gasolines, High-test Blue Sunoco also gives you

MOST MILES PER GALLON

Official surveys show that Blue Sunoco has a "higher specific gravity" (weighs more) than practically all premium-priced gasolines. And, as automotive engineers know...this extra weight means extra energy...more mileage. Careful road tests showed that, due to this extra weight and energy, the mileage from High-test Blue Sunoco was unsurpassed by any premium-priced gas.

2¢ SAVING PER GALLON

High-test Blue Sunoco sells at regular gas price, which is usually 2 cents a gallon below premium-priced gasolines. In spite of its low price, Blue Sunoco gives you more value because of its outstanding balance of such qualities as anti-rust, quick-starting, anti-stalling, clean-burning, long mileage and high-test action.

Let us guess that a 20-pound hunk of the stuff is not big enough in itself to achieve detonation. You could bite it, shoot a bullet through it, or drop it out of the Empire State Building and it would not explode. It must be joined, perhaps by mechanical devices within the bombing casing, by another 20-pound piece. Then nothing could stop the 40-pound mass from going off instantly.

• — • — •

What the atomic wizards seem to have achieved recently is a method whereby those two hunks, or a series of smaller chunks amounting to the weight of the two hunks, can be brought almost together or in an uncertain sort of melding.

This creates a detonation which while probably beyond the power of a large conventional bomb or shell, is still tiny compared even to the Model T atomic bomb which knocked Japan out of the war and the so-called midget can be much more safely handled with troops in the vicinity.

As Washington hinted last week it is now possible to achieve an atomic bomb which would not explode at all, in the sense of a loud report, a blasting shock wave and a spread of shrapnel. But this silent "explosion" probably would spread death-dealing radiation about the immediate vicinity where it landed and for some time afterwards. An effect of this sort might be achieved by "teasing" the sub-critical masses inside the bomb or shell, never permitting them actually to get together but letting them get close enough to produce great invisible waves of radioactivity — a terrifying psychological block to any enemy.

Inasmuch as a specific amount of U-235 or plutonium is needed either to produce an Eniwetok holocaust or a poof as modest as the midget born at Las Vegas at the start of these tests, it does not seem likely that there can ever be an atomic bullet.

• — • — •

It seems also that if there is created artillery with atomic shells, the shells will have to be quite large and launched by guns of a design considerably different than big howitzers now banging away at the enemy in Korea.

A-bombs have now been detonated amid targets ranging all the way from battleships to mice. But one has never been tested against the target foremost in the American's mind—his type of home and the type of building in which he works.

Such a test is scheduled for next week in Nevada, during which time what amounts to an American housing community must be built, in order to be destroyed.

The AEC will reach two goals in that test. It will open the experiment to the eyes and ears of the press, radio and television, at the closest possible range, thus satisfying increasing demand for a good look at the world's foremost military tool. Secondly, the test will prove whether or not our cities might be completely leveled by an a-bomb, as was the flimsily-constructed center of Hiroshima. Right now there is considerable speculation in civilian defense circles as to whether the cellar of the standard American home, for instance, is the safest place to hide during an a-bomb attack.

In the meantime, the AEC and Army have more pressing matters at hand. Their joint Operation Desert Rock has run into a series of embarrassing delays which have thrown the timetable out of kilter. Weather and a fine respect for the safety of people on whom radioactive clouds or desert dust might settle have been the chief causes of delays whose cost in dollars must now be slightly titanic.

Hagerstown Is Sentinels' Foe In Initial Game

Locals To Play West Fairmont; Cavanaugh At Helm 24th Season

Fort Hill High will open its 1951-52 basketball season December 11 when Hagerstown's Maroon and Gray will visit here, Coach Bobby Cavanaugh announced last night.

Only one change in the 21-game slate from last season will be made Cavanaugh said as he prepares for his 24th year at the helm of the Sentinel-Penn Avenue cagers.

To Play Polar Bears

Davis High, perennial foe of Fort Hill, will be replaced this year by West Fairmont's Polar Bears. The Bears are being added this season in conjunction with a policy of Fort Hill to play schools in basketball that are being met on the football field. The single meeting between the teams is set for December 14 in the West Virginia city.

The remainder of the slate will be composed of home and home tilts with Western Maryland Interscholastic League opponents and Ridgeley, LaSalle, Martinsburg, Allegany and Hagerstown. Single frays will be played with Moorefield here and an Alumni aggregation. The Sentinels WMI season will get underway January 11, with Central. Other WMI opponents are Bruce, Barton, and Beall.

One Regular Returns

Cavanaugh indicated he will open cage practice some time in the middle of November. Only one regular, George McGregor, will return from last season's WMI and City championship five. Reserve holdovers include John Shore, Dave Ritter and John Poling.

Around this nucleus Cavanaugh will attempt to build a team replacing such stars as "Creepy" Wilson, Lynn Beightol, Ronnie Cage, Eddie Landis, Gerald Null, Carroll Andrews, Donald Brake, Jackie Rice and Schley Lyons who were graduated in June. The schedule follows:

Dec. 11—Hagerstown, home
Dec. 14—West Fairmont, away
Dec. 18—Moorefield, home
Dec. 21—Ridgeley, home
Dec. 27—Alumni, home
Jan. 4—Martinsburg, home

Forty Niners Trounce Rams

Soltau Tops Scorers In 44 To 17 Victory

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 28 (INS)—Gordon Soltau, veteran San Francisco 49er end, scored 26 points this afternoon to lead the 49ers to a 44-17 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

A crowd of 51,987 saw the wild-scoring game between the two rival west coast professional football teams which meet in a return engagement next week in Los Angeles.

Soltau opened the scoring after three minutes of play in the first period with a 23-yard field goal.

The Rams tied it up at 3-3 a few minutes later when Bob Waterfield booted a 26-yard field goal.

Just as the first quarter was ending, 49er halfback Pete Schbarum scored the first 49er touchdown from the two-yard line, capping an 80-yard drive.

Then Soltau, early in the second period, took a 10-yard TD pass from Quarterback Frankie Albert.

Van Brocklin passed a crowd-thriller 39-yard pitch to Elroy Hirsch who made the catch on the San Francisco 40 and went from there for the first Ram touchdown midway in the second period.

The Rams moved 80 yards in 15 plays at the outset of the third period for their second and final touchdown of the game. It was scored by Fullback Dick Hoerner on a 12-yard romp around left end.

Western Maryland Has Close Call

[By The Associated Press]

Western Maryland will welcome a couple of weeks' breather from Mason-Dixon Conference competition after its close call with Hampden-Sydney's football team.

Coming from an underdog role, Hampden-Sydney almost made its homecoming a success before bowing to the league-leading Marylanders Saturday, 20-15.

The Western Maryland gridders were stopped on the ground by a hard-charging Hampden-Sydney line, and only hit pay dirt when they took to the air. Held to only 67 yards by rushing, the winners' passing game clicked for 133.

Two Hampden-Sydney fumbles proved the Tigers' downfall. Western Maryland turned both into touchdowns.

In another conference game, Randolph-Macon was an expected winner over Bridgewater, 40-13.

In non-conference play, winless Johns Hopkins was dumped again as Gettysburg rolled up a 27-7 victory. Gettysburg outrushed Hopkins only 115 to 98, but its passing game clicked better. Each team tried 26 passes and Gettysburg's 110 yardage outdistanced the Jays by 38.

Next Saturday all Virginia teams will see conference action again. Bridgewater, with a 1-1 record, will be underdog at Hampden-Sydney, seeking its first Mason-Dixon victory. Gallaudet will entertain a favored Randalph-Macon squad at Washington.

Meanwhile, Western Maryland will risk its five-game streak against Drexel at Westminster, Md., and Johns Hopkins will go against Swarthmore on the Pennsylvanians' field.

Stranahan Is Victor

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 28 (INS) — Frank Stranahan of Toledo, O., won the Mexican Amateur Golf Championship today when he defeated U. S. amateur King Billy Maxwell of Odessa, Tex., 3 and 2 in their 36-hole final.

Stranahan was ahead of the North Texas State star throughout the match. The strongman sparkplug heir held a three-up lead at the end of the first 18 holes, aided by Maxwell's poor putting game.

Chicago Blocks Punt To Defeat Detroit, 28-23

Wightkin's Recovery In End Zone Decides

DETROIT, Oct. 28 (AP) — End Ed Sprinkle blocked a fourth period punt and Bill Wightkin recovered the ball in the end zone for a deadlock-breaking touchdown that gave the Chicago Bears a 28-23 victory over the Detroit Lions before 36,950 fans today.

Rookie fullback John Dottley crashed over for two second period Bear touchdowns and George Gulyanics battered across in the third period as the Bears remained in first place of the Western Division of the National Professional Football League.

Quarterback Bobby Layne unleashed a long-gain passing attack that kept the Lions in the game all the way, throwing touchdown passes to ends Leon Hart, Jim Doran, and Dorne Dibble.

Sprinkle crashed through as the Lions were trying to punt on fourth down with the ball on the Detroit 14. The ball bounded on the turf and Wightkin grabbed it on the goal line, stepping over.

Just 99 seconds earlier Gulyanics drove four yards for a Chicago touchdown that tied the score 21-21.

The Lions added two points on a safety minutes after Wightkin's score when Ed Berrang tackled Quarterback Steve Romnik in the Bears' end zone. Score by periods:

Packers Edge Yanks

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (AP)—Quarterback Bob Thomason threw three touchdown passes and Fullback Fred Cone booted a field goal in a ferocious fourth period attack which gave the Green Bay Packers an uphill 29-27 triumph over the winless New York Yanks today in a thrill-packed National Football League game.

Cone's winning three-pointer, a 16-yard kick, came with only 11 second remaining and snatched victory from almost certain defeat. It was the Packers' third victory against two defeats and the Yanks' fourth loss in five starts. The Yanks tied the Detroit Lions last week. Score by periods:

Piedmont Circuit May Add Two Clubs

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 28 (AP)—The Piedmont League's directors today paved the way for the Class B circuit to return to its former eight-team lineup.

The directors, at a four-hour session here, voted to consider the admission of two new clubs.

League President Frank Summers declined to disclose the clubs that would be considered for membership. But a reliable source, with close contact to the situation, admitted the two cities are Bluefield, W. Va., and Charleston, W. Va.

Bluefield is currently a member of the Class D Appalachian League and Charleston is in the spread-out Class A. Central League, which extends into Michigan.

The source, who declined to be named, said he didn't think Bluefield and Charleston had applied officially for Piedmont membership.

"But they're definitely interested," he added.

The Piedmont has operated with only six teams since 1942, when the league was composed of five North Carolina cities and three Virginia clubs

Pitt's Homecoming

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 28 — The University of Pittsburgh has announced that the football game with Ohio State here, Saturday, November 10, has been set aside as the Homecoming Day attraction.

Pitt was the Homecoming Day Game attraction for Michigan State at East Lansing on November 27.

Browns Beat Giants, 14-13 In Cleveland

56,942 Persons See New York Lose Lead On Missed Place Kick

CLEVELAND, Oct. 28 (AP) — The champion Cleveland Browns struck for two lightning-fast touchdowns in the opening period today to defeat the New York Giants, 14-13, before 56,942 customers in the wind-swept Lakefront Stadium.

The victory pushed the New Yorkers out of the top spot in the American Division of the pro loop as the Browns took over the leadership.

A missed place kick after the Giants' second touchdown provided the margin of victory. The miss was a heartbreaker for Ray Poole, Giant end who had kicked 13 in a row this year before missing today's vital one. Poole also missed a 33-yard place kick in the final minute as the Giants tried to pull the game out of the fire.

The Browns struck for a touchdown on the opening play when Otto Graham passed to Dub Jones on an aerial play that covered 64 yards. The tally went up on the scoreboard in the first 49 seconds.

The Giants, who surrendered only one touchdown to the Browns in three games last year—and that on a fluke—tied the count at the 10-minute mark when Fullback Tom Landry intercepted a pass and dashed 19 yards into the end zone.

The Browns banged out front late in the first session when Emien Tunnell muffed one of Horace Gillom's punts on the Giant 28 and Hal Herring recovered for the Browns. A line play gained two and then Graham hit Dante Lavelli in the end zone with a scoring pass, Lavelli making a great catch off his shoe tops while on a dead run.

Bill Dudley Stars In 27-23 Conquest

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28 (INS)—Bullet Bill Dudley booted two second half field goals and scored a touchdown today to pace the Washington Redskins to a 27 to 23 upset win over the Philadelphia Eagles before 20,437 fans at Shibe Park.

Dudley led the 'Skins to their second National Football League victory by scoring all their points in the last half. The veteran NFL star, who made all Washington's conversions, accounted for fifteen points in the game.

With the 'Skins trailing 17-14 Dudley tied the game in the third period with a 14-yard boot. He added three points in the fourth period from 20 yards out and later skirted around end for a nine-yard touchdown.

Washington's two other touchdowns came on a one-yard plunge by Rob Goode and a 53-yard pass play in which Sammy Baugh pitched to Bob Thomas.

Tigers Belt Cornell, Baylor Is Held Even

By ED CORRIGAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (AP)—When they start giving out plaques and awards for top coaching jobs this year, Charlie Caldwell of Princeton should haul down enough to float a battleship.

Caldwell, the master of the single-wing, and his Tigers were riding high atop an 18-game winning streak today. The longest of any major college team in the nation. But even more important, Princeton faces clear sailing in its quest for a second straight Ivy League title.

After its stunning 53-15 pasting of Cornell yesterday, the Tigers need to whip only Brown, Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth, all Ivy League foes and all patsies.

Rare is the year when an Ivy League team is near the top, but the Tigers were rated No. 8 in last week's Associated Press poll, and this week probably will gain some. Cornell was the favorite for the Ivy championship and there were few observers who thought the Tigers would win, much less massacre the Big Red.

Dick Kazmaier Stars

But as usual, it was Dick Kazmaier, one of the really great backs of the year, who engineered the victory. He scored two touchdowns and passed for three others. But his fine work would have gone for naught if his mates hadn't contained Cornell's aces, Rosco Calvo and Stu Mertz.

It was a rather calm Saturday nationally. The only thing approaching an upset came—naturally—in the Southwest Conference where it usually is an upset if the favorite wins.

Baylor, the seventh ranking team in the country, was tied by Texas A and M 21-21. After last week's drubbing by Texas Christian, the Aggies were being counted out of it, and Baylor was beginning to try on the crown for size. But Baylor still has to face T.C.U., Texas,

Important PVC Grid Game Is Set For Stayman Field

Win Would Net Keyser Title; AHS And LaSalle In 23rd Game Friday

Keyser High School's important game with the West Virginia School for the Deaf will be played at Stayman Field, Keyser, on Thursday at 1:30 p. m., instead of Friday as originally scheduled, Coach Frederick "Tack" Clark of Keyser announced last night.

"The "Golden Tornado" from Mineral County, fresh from a 6-0 upset victory over Moorefield, can sew up the P.V.C. title with a victory over Coach Glenn Hawkins' high-flying Silents who are on a four-game winning streak. Keyser is undefeated in the P.V.C., having won three games and played one tie. West Virginia Deaf School has won its lone start in the PVC and can't qualify for the championship because it's playing only two contests in the 10-team circuit. The Keyserites have shut out four opponents while scoring 44 points in the conference race.

Silents On Warpath

West Virginia Deaf School trounced the New Jersey Silents, 57-0, at Trenton on Saturday and now is the top scoring high school team in the tri-state district with 201 points to its credit.

At Trenton, the West Virginia Silents made eight touchdowns. Jack Riggleman scored thrice, Charles Tackett and Hugh Boyd had two each and Max Pyles scored once. Boyd made three conversions and Tackett and Pyles once apiece. Two safeties also were credited to the Romney team.

Jackets At Berkeley

Sharing interest with the Keyser-Deaf School game is Moorefield High's engagement with Herb Yost's Indians at Berkeley Springs. A Keyser defeat coupled with a Moorefield win would put the Hardy Countians back in first place in the P.V.C. race. The Yellow Jackets of Coach Johnny Paugh have a 4-1 record in the conference.

In another PVC tilt on tap for Friday, Franklin plays at Circleville.

Hagerstown Is Sentinels' Foe In Initial Game

Locals To Play West Fairmont; Cavanaugh At Helm 24th Season

Fort Hill High will open its 1951-52 basketball season December 11 when Hagerstown's Maroon and Gray will visit here, Coach Bobby Cavanaugh announced last night.

Only one change in the 21-game slate from last season will be made Cavanaugh said as he prepares for his 24th year at the helm of the Sentinel-Penn Avenue cagers.

To Play Polar Bears

Davis High, perennial foe of Fort Hill, will be replaced this year by West Fairmont's Polar Bears. The Bears are being added this season in conjunction with a policy of Fort Hill to play schools in basketball that are being met on the football field. The single meeting between the teams is set for December 14 in the West Virginia city.

The remainder of the slate will be composed of home and home tilts with Western Maryland Interscholastic League opponents and Ridgeley, LaSalle, Martinsburg, Allegany and Hagerstown. Single frays will be played with Moorefield here and an Alumni aggregation. The Sentinels WMI season will get underway January 11, with Central. Other WMI opponents are Bruce, Barton, and Beall.

One Regular Returns

Cavanaugh indicated he will open cage practice some time in the middle of November. Only one regular, George McGregor, will return from last season's WMI and City championship five. Reserve holdovers include John Shore, Dave Ritter and John Poling.

Around this nucleus Cavanaugh will attempt to build a team replacing such stars as "Creepy" Wilson, Lynn Beightol, Ronnie Cage, Eddie Landis, Gerald Null, Carroll Andrews, Donald Brake, Jackie Rice and Schley Lyons who were graduated in June. The schedule follows:

Dec. 11—Hagerstown, home
Dec. 14—West Fairmont, away
Dec. 18—Moorefield, home
Dec. 21—Ridgeley, home
Dec. 27—Alumni, home
Jan. 4—Martinsburg, home
Jan. 8—LaSalle, home (City)
Jan. 11—Central, away (WMI)
Jan. 15—Bruce, home (WMI)
Jan. 18—Beall, home (WMI)
Jan. 22—Barton, away (WMI)
Jan. 25—Allegany, away (WMI and City)
Jan. 29—LaSalle, away (City)
Feb. 1—Martinsburg, away
Feb. 5—Hagerstown, away
Feb. 8—Central, home (WMI)
Feb. 12—Bruce, away (WMI)

Forty Niners Trounce Rams

Soltau Tops Scorers In 44 To 17 Victory

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 28 (INS)—Gordon Soltau, veteran San Francisco 49er end, scored 26 points this afternoon to lead the 49ers to a 44-17 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

A crowd of 51,987 saw the wild-scoring game between the two rival west coast professional football teams which meet in a return engagement next week in Los Angeles.

Soltau opened the scoring after three minutes of play in the first period with a 23-yard field goal.

The Rams tied it up at 3-3 a few minutes later when Bob Waterfield booted a 26-yard field goal.

Just as the first quarter was ending, 49er halfback Pete Schbarum scored the first 49er touchdown from the two-yard line, capping an 80-yard drive.

Then Soltau, early in the second period, took a 10-yard TD pass from Quarterback Frankie Albert.

Van Brocklin passed a crowd-thriller 39-yard pitch to Elroy Hirsch who made the catch on the San Francisco 40 and went from there for the first Ram touchdown midway in the second period.

The Rams moved 80 yards in 15 plays at the outset of the third period for their second and final touchdown of the game. It was scored by Fullback Dick Hoerner on a 12-yard romp around left end.

Western Maryland Has Close Call

[By The Associated Press]

Western Maryland will welcome a couple of weeks' breather from Mason-Dixon Conference competition after its close call with Hampden-Sydney's football team.

Coming from an underdog role, Hampden-Sydney almost made its homecoming a success before bowing to the league-leading Marylanders Saturday, 20-15.

The Western Maryland gridders were stopped on the ground by a hard-charging Hampden-Sydney line, and only hit pay dirt when they took to the air. Held to only 67 yards by rushing, the winners' passing game clicked for 133.

In another conference game, Randolph-Macon was an expected winner over Bridgewater, 40-13.

In non-conference play, winless Johns Hopkins was dumped again as Gettysburg rolled up a 27-7 victory. Gettysburg outrushed Hopkins only 115 to 98, but its passing game clicked better. Each team tried 26 passes and Gettysburg's 110 yardage outdistanced the Jays by 38.

Next Saturday all Virginia teams will see conference action again. Bridgewater, with a 1-1 record, will be underdog at Hampden-Sydney, seeking its first Mason-Dixon victory. Gallaudet will entertain a favored Randalph-Macon squad at Washington.

Meanwhile, Western Maryland will risk its five-game streak against Drexel at Westminster, Md., and Johns Hopkins will go against Swarthmore on the Pennsylvanians' field.

Stranahan Is Victor

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 28 (INS)—Frank Stranahan of Toledo, O., won the Mexican Amateur Golf Championship today when he defeated U. S. amateur King Billy Maxwell of Odessa, Tex., 3 and 2 in their 36-hole final.

Stranahan was ahead of the North Texas State star throughout the match. The strongman sparkplug heir held a three-up lead at the end of the first 18 holes, aided by Maxwell's poor putting game.

Chicago Blocks Punt To Defeat Detroit, 28-23

Wightkin's Recovery In End Zone Decides

DETROIT, Oct. 28 (AP)—End Ed Sprinkle blocked a fourth period punt and Bill Wightkin recovered the ball in the end zone for a deadlock-breaking touchdown that gave the Chicago Bears a 28-23 victory over the Detroit Lions before 36,950 fans today.

Rookie fullback John Dottley crashed over for two second period Bear touchdowns and George Gulyanics battered across in the third period as the Bears remained in first place of the Western Division of the National Professional Football League.

Quarterback Bobby Layne unleashed a long-gain passing attack that kept the Lions in the game all the way, throwing touchdown passes to ends Leon Hart, Jim Doran, and Dorne Dibble.

Sprinkle crashed through as the Lions were trying to punt on fourth down with the ball on the Detroit 14. The ball bounded on the turf and Wightkin grabbed it on the goal line, stepping over.

Just 99 seconds earlier Gulyanics drove four yards for a Chicago touchdown that tied the score 21-21.

The Lions added two points on a safety minutes after Wightkin's score when Ed Berrang tackled Quarterback Steve Romnik in the Bears' end zone. Score by periods:

Packers Edge Yanks

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (AP)—Quarterback Bob Thomason threw three touchdown passes and Fullback Fred Cone booted a field goal in a ferocious fourth period attack which gave the Green Bay Packers an uphill 29-27 triumph over the winless New York Yanks today in a thrill-packed National Football League game.

Cone's winning three-pointer, a 16-yard kick, came with only 11 second remaining and snatched victory from almost certain defeat. It was the Packers' third victory against two defeats and the Yanks' fourth loss in five starts. The Yanks tied the Detroit Lions last week. Score by periods:

Piedmont Circuit May Add Two Clubs

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 28 (AP)—The Piedmont League's directors today paved the way for the Class B circuit to return to its former eight-team lineup.

The directors, at a four-hour session here, voted to consider the admission of two new clubs.

League President Frank Summers declined to disclose the clubs that would be considered for membership. But a reliable source, with close contact to the situation, admitted the two cities are Bluefield, W. Va., and Charleston, W. Va.

Bluefield is currently a member of the Class D Appalachian League and Charleston is in the spread-out Class A. Central League, which extends into Michigan.

The source, who declined to be named, said he didn't think Bluefield and Charleston had applied officially for Piedmont membership.

"But they're definitely interested," he added.

The Piedmont has operated with only six teams since 1942, when the league was composed of five North Carolina cities and three Virginia clubs

Pitt's Homecoming

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 28—The University of Pittsburgh has announced that the football game with Ohio State here, Saturday, November 10, has been set aside as the Homecoming Day attraction.

Pitt was the Homecoming Day Game attraction for Michigan State at East Lansing on November 27.

56,942 Persons See New York Lose Lead On Missed Place Kick

CLEVELAND, Oct. 28 (AP)—The champion Cleveland Browns struck for two lightning-fast touchdowns in the opening period today to defeat the New York Giants, 14-13, before 56,942 customers in the wind-swept Lakefront Stadium.

The victory pushed the New Yorkers out of the top spot in the American Division of the pro loop as the Browns took over the leadership.

A missed place kick after the Giants' second touchdown provided the margin of victory. The miss was a heartbreaker for Ray Poole, Giant end who had kicked 13 in a row this year before missing today's vital one. Poole also missed a 33-yard place kick in the final minute as the Giants tried to pull the game out of the fire.

The Browns struck for a touchdown on the opening play when Otto Graham passed to Dub Jones on an aerial play that covered 64 yards. The tally went up on the scoreboard in the first 49 seconds.

The Giants, who surrendered only one touchdown to the Browns in three games last year—and that on a fluke—tied the count at the 10-minute mark when Fullback Tom Landry intercepted a pass and dashed 19 yards into the end zone.

Lou Groza had kicked the opening conversion for the Browns and Poole matched it after Landry's score.

The Browns banged out front late in the first session when Emien Tunnell muffed one of Horace Gillom's punts on the Giant 28 and Hal Herring recovered for the Browns. A line play gained two and then Graham hit Dante Lavelli in the end zone with a scoring pass, Lavelli making a great catch off his shoe tops while on a dead run.

Eagles Upset By Redskins

Bill Dudley Stars In 27-23 Conquest

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28 (INS)—Bullet Bill Dudley booted two second half field goals and scored a touchdown today to pace the Washington Redskins to a 27 to 23 upset win over the Philadelphia Eagles before 20,437 fans at Shibe Park.

Dudley led the 'Skins to their second National Football League victory by scoring all their points in the last half. The veteran NFL star, who made all Washington's conversions, accounted for fifteen points in the game.

With the 'Skins trailing 17-14 Dudley tied the game in the third period with a 14-yard boot. He added three points in the fourth period from 20 yards out and later skirted around end for a nine-yard touchdown.

Washington's two other touchdowns came on a one-yard plunge by Rob Goode and a 53-yard pass play in which Sammy Baugh pitched to Bob Thomas.

Adrian Burke tossed for two Philadelphia scores. He hit Bob Walston with a 43-yard pass and Clyde Scott in a 53-yard play. Steve Van Buren plunged from the one-yard line for the other td.

Score by periods:

Washington	0	14	3	10	—27

Tigers Belt Cornell, Baylor Is Held Even

By ED CORRIGAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (AP)—When they start giving out plaques and awards for top coaching jobs this year, Charlie Caldwell of Princeton should haul down enough to float a battleship.

Caldwell, the master of the single-wing, and his Tigers were riding high atop an 18-game winning streak today. The longest of any major college team in the nation. But even more important, Princeton faces clear sailing in its quest for a second straight Ivy League title.

After its stunning 53-15 pasting of Cornell yesterday, the Tigers need to whip only Brown, Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth, all Ivy League foes and all patsies.

Rare is the year when an Ivy League team is near the top, but the Tigers were rated No. 8 in last week's Associated Press poll, and this week probably will gain some. Cornell was the favorite for the Ivy championship and there were few observers who thought the Tigers would win, much less massacre the Big Red.

Dick Kazmaier Stars

But as usual, it was Dick Kazmaier, one of the really great backs of the year, who engineered the victory. He scored two touchdowns and passed for three others. But his fine work would have gone for naught if his mates hadn't contained Cornell's aces, Rosco Calvo and Stu Mertz.

It was a rather calm Saturday nationally. The only thing approaching an upset came—naturally—in the Southwest Conference where it usually is an upset if the favorite wins.

Baylor, the seventh ranking team in the country, was tied by Texas A and M 21-21. After last week's drubbing by Texas Christian, the Aggies were being counted out of it, and Baylor was beginning to try on the crown for size. But Baylor still has to face T.C.U., Texas,

Important PVC Grid Game Is Set For Stayman Field

Win Would Net Keyser Title; AHS And LaSalle In 23rd Game Friday

Keyser High School's important game with the West Virginia School for the Deaf will be played at Stayman Field, Keyser, on Thursday at 1:30 p. m., instead of Friday as originally scheduled, Coach Frederick "Tack" Clark of Keyser announced last night.

"The "Golden Tornado" from Mineral County, fresh from a 6-0 upset victory over Moorefield, can sew up the P.V.C. title with a victory over Coach Glenn Hawkins' high-flying Silents who are on a four-game winning streak. Keyser is undefeated in the P.V.C., having won three games and played one tie. West Virginia Deaf School has won its lone start in the PVC and can't qualify for the championship because it's playing only two contests in the 10-team circuit. The Keyserites have shut out four opponents while scoring 44 points in the conference race.

Silents On Warpath

West Virginia Deaf School trounced the New Jersey Silents, 57-0, at Trenton on Saturday and now is the top scoring high school team in the tri-state district with 201 points to its credit.

At Trenton, the West Virginia Silents made eight touchdowns. Jack Riggleman scored thrice, Charles Tackett and Hugh Boyd had two each and Max Pyles scored once. Boyd made three conversions and Tackett and Pyles once apiece. Two safeties also were credited to the Romney team.

Jackets At Berkeley

Sharing interest with the Keyser-Deaf School game is Moorefield High's engagement with Herb Yost's Indians at Berkeley Springs. A Keyser defeat coupled with a Moorefield win would put the Hardy Countians back in first place in the P.V.C. race. The Yellow Jackets of Coach Johnny Paugh have a 4-1 record in the conference.

In another PVC tilt on tap for Friday, Franklin plays at Circleville.

Card Of Thanks

We wish to thank our neighbors, friends and relatives for their acts of love and sympathy during the recent loss of our beloved father, William A. Stitcher; also those who sent floral tributes, loaned cars for the funeral, the pallbearers, and to the entire management including Dr. John K. Rozum and all the nurses of the Allegany Hospital for their many acts of kindness during his last illness.
THE FAMILY

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our beloved Mother, Mrs. Helen Smith, who died October 29, 1946.
Memories and treasures none can steal,
Death leaves a heartache none can heal.
Some have forgotten you now that you're gone,
But we will remember you no matter how long.
Flowers we place upon your grave will wither and decay
But love for the one who sleeps beneath
Will never fade away.
Sadly missed by
Mrs. Hilary Brode & Family

In loving memory of our beloved wife and mother, Mrs. Grace Winters James, who departed this life four years ago today, October 29th.
The blow was hard, the shock severe,
We never thought her death so near,
Only those who have lost can tell
The pain of parting without farewell.
She little thought when leaving home,
That she would never return,
That she so soon in death would sleep,
And leave us here to mourn.
God knows how much we miss her,
Never shall her memory fade
Loving thoughts shall ever wander
To the spot where she is laid.
Sadly missed by Husband & Children

Card Of Thanks

We wish to thank our neighbors, friends and relatives for their acts of love and sympathy during the recent loss of our beloved father, William A. Stitcher; also those who sent floral tributes, loaned cars for the funeral, the pallbearers, and to the entire management including Dr. John K. Rozum and all the nurses of the Allegany Hospital for their many acts of kindness during his last illness.
THE FAMILY

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our beloved Mother, Mrs. Helen Smith, who died October 29, 1946.
Memories and treasures none can steal,
Death leaves a heartache none can heal,
Some have forgotten you now that you're gone,
But we will remember you no matter how long.
Flowers we place upon your grave will wither and decay
But love for the one who sleeps beneath
Will never fade away.
Sadly missed by
Mrs. Hilary Brode & Family

In loving memory of our beloved wife and mother, Mrs. Grace Winters James, who departed this life four years ago today, October 29th.
The blow was hard, the shock severe,
We never thought her death so near,
Only those who have lost can tell
The pain of parting without farewell.
She little thought when leaving home,
That she would never return,
That she so soon in death would sleep,
And leave us here to mourn.
God knows how much we miss her,
Never shall her memory fade
Loving thoughts shall ever wander
To the spot where she is laid.
Sadly missed by Husband & Children

Drake Protests Bright's Injury

Oklahoma A. & M. To Study Report

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 28 (AP)—A special fact finding committee of the Missouri Valley Conference, in a closed session today, heard Drake University's protest on the injury of star halfback Johnny Bright in a football game with Oklahoma A. and M. at Stillwater Oct. 20.

Bright was injured early in the game won by Oklahoma A. and M. 27-14 and Drake officials protested that the negro star, the nation's record breaking ground gainer, was the victim of "x x x x vicious, malicious and intentional attacks."

The committee said Oklahoma A. and M. deferred defense until it had time to study the Drake report and meet with its own athletic council and president of the college.

The statement handed the press by A. E. Eilers, of St. Louis valley commissioner:

"The committee heard the Drake protest and submitted the protest to Oklahoma A. and M. authorities. Oklahoma A. and M. has asked for the privilege of studying the Drake report and making a formal statement to the committee. The committee granted this request and will meet again when Oklahoma A. and M. submits its reply."

Snead Wins Warm-Up

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va., Oct. 28 (AP) — Sam Snead — the White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., slammer — today won the American Ryder Cup team's warm-up matches when he fired a four-under-par pyt for a two-day, 36-hole total of 129, nine strokes under regulation figures.

The captain of the American team burned up the Cavalier Yacht and Country Club course for the second straight day as the Americans prepared for the match with the British later this week at Pinehurst, N. C.

Beall, AHS Jayvees Clash Here Today

Junior varsity grid teams of Allegany High School and Beall High School will tangle in the final game of their home and home series today at Campobello.

AHS is undefeated and tied once and will be seeking to sweep the series with Coach Ralph Basilio's eleven today.

Browns Beat

penalty and a 42-yard pass from Quarterback Charlie Conerly to Halfback Joe Scott, marched 73 yards in nine plays for its second touchdown, manufactured on a 29-yard aerial from Conerly to End Bob McChesney. It was at that point that Poole missed the big conversion. Score by periods:

Cleveland Browns	14	0	0	0	—14
New York Giants	7	6	0	0	—13

Steelers Top Cards

CHICAGO, Oct. 28 (INS) — A three-touchdown rally by the Pittsburgh Steelers in the fourth quarter gave them a 28 to 14 victory today over the Chicago Cardinals in a National Football League game played before 14,773 fans at Comiskey Park.

The Steelers led at the half, 7 to 0, on a second quarter touchdown scored by Val Jansante after he took a pass from Joe Geri. The play covered 46 yards.

Jim Hardy replaced Charley Trippi as quarterback for the Cards in the second half and maneuvered to tie the score at 7 to 7 in the third quarter. His passes, particularly one to Billy Cross, pushed the ball to the Steelers one-yard mark. Cross hit the line for the tying score.

Hardy's passes also set up the second Chicago touchdown. Cross went over from the seven-yard line, giving the Cards a 14 to 7 lead which they carried into the fourth quarter.

Then the Steelers started to roll. They tied the score, 14 to 14 on a 49-yard touchdown pass, Lynn Chadnois to Joe Geri.

Ex-Michigan star Chuck Ortmann put Pittsburgh ahead, 21 to 14, with a touchdown toss to Elbie Nickel that covered 34 yards.

Joe Butler gave the Steelers their final tally when he ran 52 yards with an intercepted pass.

Score by periods:

Pittsburgh Steelers	0	7	0	21	—28
Chicago Cardinals	0	0	14	0	—14

Vols, Spartans

Southern Methodist and Rice in league encounters.

Tennessee, Michigan State and Georgia Tech, Nos. 1, 2 and 3 in the country, all came through as expected, but the Spartans and the Engineers had some anxious moments, though for different reasons.

Michigan State kept the slate clean with a 53-26 conquest of Pitt, although the Panthers held a 20-19 halftime margin.

Vols Win Easy One

Georgia Tech was stalled by the wretched weather, and barely nosed out Vanderbilt, 8-7. Tennessee, with 15 straight victories did a 68-0 job on Tennessee Tech. But things won't be that easy against North Carolina this Saturday.

Trojans Trim TCU

The Southern California Trojans, shooting for the Pacific Coast Conference crown and the automatic Rose Bowl bid that goes with it, had to tally two touchdowns in the final quarter to bat down Texas Christian, 28-26.

In other Pacific Coast action, California throttled Oregon State, 35-14. Stanford stayed in the running for the title by stopping Washington, 14-7. Now it looks as though the Southern Cal-Stanford game on Nov. 10 will decide the title. Washington State beat Oregon, 41-6, in a game that had no bearing on the race.

The Big Ten battle took a turn for the better as far as Illinois is concerned. The Illini polished off Indiana, 21-0, while Wisconsin was slaughtering previously unbeaten Northwestern, 41-0. Michigan steamrolled Minnesota, 54-27, and Ohio State defeated Iowa, 47-21, in other conference games. Both Michigan and Illinois still are unbeaten in the conference.

Army finally pulled down a victory and from an unexpected source. After going winless all season, the Cadets defeated Columbia, 14-9, so the Army-Navy game on Dec. 1 won't be between two teams that haven't won a game. Navy took another trimming, this one from Penn, 14-0.

In the Big Seven, Oklahoma, last year's national champion, pasted Colorado, 55-14, and in the process probably assured itself of another league championship. In other league games, Missouri defeated Nebraska, 35-19, and Kansas tripped Kansas State, 33-14.

Maryland Trips Tigers

Notre Dame halted Purdue, 30-9, and Babe Parilli hurled a pair of touchdown passes as Kentucky nipped Florida, 14-6. Maryland, the fifth-ranking team in the nation, overcame Louisiana State, 27-0, and Texas, No. 10, put the crusher on Rice, 14-6.

In other important games, Dartmouth defeated Harvard, 26-20; Iowa State shut out Drake, 13-0; Wake Forest battered North Carolina, 39-7; Alabama triumphed over Mississippi State, 7-0; Auburn stopped Tulane, 21-0; Yale rode over Colgate, 27-7; Virginia rammed Duke, 30-7; Villanova defeated Houston, 33-27; Santa Clara upset Arkansas, 21-12, and Holy Cross stopped Brown, 41-6.

Drake Protests Bright's Injury

Oklahoma A. & M. To Study Report

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 28 (AP)—A special fact finding committee of the Missouri Valley Conference, in a closed session today, heard Drake University's protest on the injury of star halfback Johnny Bright in a football game with Oklahoma A. and M. at Stillwater Oct. 20.

Bright was injured early in the game won by Oklahoma A. and M. 27-14 and Drake officials protested that the negro star, the nation's record breaking ground gainer, was the victim of "x x x x vicious, malicious and intentional attacks."

The committee said Oklahoma A. and M. deferred defense until it had time to study the Drake report and meet with its own athletic council and president of the college.

The statement handed the press by A. E. Eilers, of St. Louis valley commissioner:

"The committee heard the Drake protest and submitted the protest to Oklahoma A. and M. authorities. Oklahoma A. and M. has asked for the privilege of studying the Drake report and making a formal statement to the committee. The committee granted this request and will meet again when Oklahoma A. and M. submits its reply."

Snead Wins Warm-Up

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va., Oct. 28 (AP) — Sam Snead — the White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., slammer — today won the American Ryder Cup team's warm-up matches when he fired a four-under-par pyt for a two-day, 36-hole total of 129, nine strokes under regulation figures.

The captain of the American team burned up the Cavalier Yacht and Country Club course for the second straight day as the Americans prepared for the match with the British later this week at Pinehurst, N. C.

Beall, AHS Jayvees Clash Here Today

Junior varsity grid teams of Allegany High School and Beall High School will tangle in the final game of their home and home series today at Campobello.

AHS is undefeated and tied once and will be seeking to sweep the series with Coach Ralph Basilio's eleven today.

Coach Jim Hosack's aggregation holds a 12-0 decision over the Mountain City eleven.

Browns Beat

penalty and a 42-yard pass from Quarterback Charlie Conerly to Halfback Joe Scott, marched 73 yards in nine plays for its second touchdown, manufactured on a 29-yard aerial from Conerly to End Bob McChesney. It was at that point that Poole missed the big conversion. Score by periods:

Cleveland Browns . 14 0 0 0—14
New York Giants .. 7 6 0 0—13

Steelers Top Cards

CHICAGO, Oct. 28 (INS) — A three-touchdown rally by the Pittsburgh Steelers in the fourth quarter gave them a 28 to 14 victory today over the Chicago Cardinals in a National Football League game played before 14,773 fans at Comiskey Park.

The Steelers led at the half, 7 to 0, on a second quarter touchdown scored by Val Jansante after he took a pass from Joe Geri. The play covered 46 yards.

Jim Hardy replaced Charley Trippi as quarterback for the Cards in the second half and maneuvered to tie the score at 7 to 7 in the third quarter. His passes, particularly one to Billy Cross, pushed the ball to the Steelers one-yard mark. Cross hit the line for the tying score.

Hardy's passes also set up the second Chicago touchdown. Cross went over from the seven-yard line, giving the Cards a 14 to 7 lead which they carried into the fourth quarter.

Then the Steelers started to roll. They tied the score, 14 to 14 on a 49-yard touchdown pass, Lynn Chadnois to Joe Geri.

Joe Butler gave the Steelers their final tally when he ran 52 yards with an intercepted pass.

Score by periods:

Pittsburgh Steelers 0 7 0 21—28
Chicago Cardinals 0 0 14 0—14

Vols, Spartans

Southern Methodist and Rice in league encounters.

Tennessee, Michigan State and Georgia Tech, Nos. 1, 2 and 3 in the country, all came through as expected, but the Spartans and the Engineers had some anxious moments, though for different reasons.

Michigan State kept the slate clean with a 53-26 conquest of Pitt, although the Panthers held a 20-19 halftime margin.

Vols Win Easy One

Georgia Tech was stalled by the wretched weather, and barely nosed out Vanderbilt, 8-7. Tennessee, with 15 straight victories did a 68-0 job on Tennessee Tech. But things won't be that easy against North Carolina this Saturday.

Trojans Trim TCU

The Southern California Trojans, shooting for the Pacific Coast Conference crown and the automatic Rose Bowl bid that goes with it, had to tally two touchdowns in the final quarter to bat down Texas Christian, 28-26.

In other Pacific Coast action, California throttled Oregon State, 35-14. Stanford stayed in the running for the title by stopping Washington, 14-7. Now it looks as though the Southern Cal-Stanford game on Nov. 10 will decide the title. Washington State beat Oregon, 41-6, in a game that had no bearing on the race.

The Big Ten battle took a turn for the better as far as Illinois is concerned. The Illini polished off Indiana, 21-0, while Wisconsin was slaughtering previously unbeaten Northwestern, 41-0. Michigan steamrolled Minnesota, 54-27, and Ohio State defeated Iowa, 47-21, in other conference games. Both Michigan and Illinois still are unbeaten in the conference.

Army finally pulled down a victory and from an unexpected source. After going winless all season, the Cadets defeated Columbia, 14-9, so the Army-Navy game on Dec. 1 won't be between two teams that haven't won a game. Navy took another trimming, this one from Penn, 14-0.

In the Big Seven, Oklahoma, last year's national champion, pasted Colorado, 55-14, and in the process probably assured itself of another league championship. In other league games, Missouri defeated Nebraska, 35-19, and Kansas tripped Kansas State, 33-14.

Maryland Trips Tigers

Notre Dame halted Purdue, 30-9, and Babe Parilli hurled a pair of touchdown passes as Kentucky nipped Florida, 14-6. Maryland, the fifth-ranking team in the nation, overcame Louisiana State, 27-0, and Texas, No. 10, put the crusher on Rice, 14-6.

In other important games, Dartmouth defeated Harvard, 26-20; Iowa State shut out Drake, 13-0; Wake Forest battered North Carolina, 39-7; Alabama triumphed over Mississippi State, 7-0; Auburn stopped Tulane, 21-0; Yale rode over Colgate, 27-7; Virginia rammed Duke, 30-7; Villanova defeated Houston, 33-27; Santa Clara upset Arkansas, 21-12, and Holy Cross stopped Brown, 41-6.

Conference Called To Discuss Plan For Local Crosstown Bridge

Federal, State, City, Railroads Confer Friday

Congressman Beall, City Solicitor Cobey Are Arranging Meet

As a forward step toward the ultimate elimination of downtown traffic and parking congestion in Cumberland, a conference has been called for 10 a. m. Friday morning in the City Hall auditorium between federal, state, city and railroad officials.

Rep. J. Glenn Beall, congressman from the Sixth Maryland District disclosed yesterday that Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin and representatives of the State Highway Commission will attend, along with a representative from the Federal Bureau of Roads. W. Earle Cobey, city solicitor, said he is contacting city officials and representatives of the Baltimore and Ohio and Western Maryland railroads.

Crosstown Bridge Seen

Rep. Beall conferred with City Solicitor Cobey on the traffic question over the weekend.

Last night, Rep. Beall said the most frequently recommended solution to Cumberland's traffic congestion is a crosstown viaduct or bridge over Wills Creek, both railroads and downtown parallel streets.

Commonly referred to as a crosstown bridge, this proposal first came into serious consideration, Rep. Beall recalled, in 1938 when he was a member of the State Roads Commission. At that time, the project had been fairly well agreed upon and planned, but it was delayed by the war and other projects were put ahead of it, such as the Savage River Dam and Cumberland-Ridgeley flood control.

Early Start Proposed

Rep. Beall noted that "with the Savage River Dam completed and flood control well underway, it seems a logical time to begin definite planning for a program of action on the crosstown bridge."

In 1949, the State Highway Commission recommended a crosstown route (including a viaduct) from a point near Greene and Johnson streets to Maryland Avenue near Emily Street. That survey also included a recommendation for a central to southwest route from Greene and Johnson streets to Route 220 south and a central to southeast route from downtown to Oldtown Road.

However, the conference here Friday is expected to deal largely with plans for the crosstown bridge, which will take traffic from Greene Street, McMullen Highway (Route 220) and the West Side, across the city to Route 40 (east), and of course, also in the opposite direction.

The plans call for approaches at Mechanic and Centre streets, so down town traffic could enter or leave the bridge. This would eliminate the Baltimore Street bottleneck, engineers claim, and still give shoppers an easy access to the city's downtown shopping area.

To Air Crossing Problem

City Solicitor Cobey said last night that he conferred with C. T. Williams, superintendent of the Cumberland Division, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad on proposals to close crossings and construct an overpass near Harrison Street. This idea may also come up at the conference Friday, Cobey noted, although the crosstown viaduct will probably be the major order of business.

Prime purpose of the conference, Cobey and Beall explained, is to get all interested officials properly informed on the problem, and if possible, to reach an early agreement on a solution. Beall is of the opinion that the federal government can bear part of the cost, part can probably be borne by the state, part by the railroads and the city's cost would not be prohibitive, under such an arrangement.

Millionth Traffic Victim Will Die Before January 1

By LYNN WALKER

(President, Western Maryland Safety Council)

Somewhere among the 150 million people in our nation today there is an individual marked with an invisible sign.

Sometime between now and January 1, 1952, that individual, man, woman or child, has a date with destiny. Driving or walking, night or day, the peculiar combination of circumstances will arise that cause just one more traffic accident and the wearer of the sign will be revealed as Victim "X".

Victim "X" will be the millionth victim claimed by automobiles in America since the beginning of the Century.*

The name of Victim "X" will not be inscribed on a plaque, no monument will be raised to his memory for the brutal truth is this: Because of the mass murder tactics we have accepted in the use of automobiles he will never be known by name. Our National average of 100 traffic deaths a day is our assurance that Victim "X" will be claimed sometime within the space of the next two months.

Greater Toll Than War

A parallel "X" has already kept his date, G. I. "X" fell in Korea sometime during the week of September 2, 1951. Traffic, in 50 years has killed as many humans as all the wars in which the United States has been engaged.

There is a tragic parallel in these two shadowy figures although they are 10,000 miles apart. Since the battle of Lexington on April 19, 1775 these men in uniform have paid with their lives that we might continue to live in a free land. Their deeds reflect credit to our nation and they fell in the name of freedom and independence.

Disgrace To Mankind

Since the turn of the century we have had a new kind of killer to contend with. This one takes its victims from civil and military ranks, it accepts women and children, old and young, rich and poor.

Engineers strive to give it more power, more speed, greater smoothness and it kills over 30,000 a year. Their deaths reflect nothing but disgrace on our civilization and they fell in the name of carelessness and thoughtlessness.

Maybe the total elimination of war as a national policy is too much to hope for at the present time, but we CAN do something about automobile deaths.

When you, as an individual driver, realize that you have a share in the responsibility for preventing accidents and start to use common sense in your every day driving, we will start to solve the problems that the automobile has brought to us.

State PTA Meeting Set

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 28 (AP)—The Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers will open a two-day convention here Thursday with the problems of children and young adults a main topic.

The 36th annual meeting will include panel discussions and a symposium.

Among the speakers will be Mrs. John E. Hayes, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Dr. Daniel A. Prescott of the Institute of Child Study in the College of Education at the University of Maryland.

Thursday afternoon there will be a panel discussion on "Young Adults in Troubled Times" and in the evening there will be a symposium on "Our Citadels of Security—Home, School, Church," the general convention theme.

The Weather

A dismal morning yesterday developed into a changeable afternoon. The sun broke through the clouds occasionally with the winds acting up now and then. High temperature as registered by the official weather station at Constitution Park was 67 degrees, low was 51 and at 8:30 p. m. mercury read 52 degrees. The amount of rainfall was .04 and humidity at 6 p. m. was 64 per cent. The housewife can look forward to a partly cloudy wash day which will be rather windy and cooler.

Local Couple Will Join Tour To Havana, Cuba

L. E. Randall, 519 Avirett Avenue, local International Harvester zone manager, and his wife have been awarded a 10-day, all-expenses-paid trip to Miami Beach and Havana, Cuba, starting November 5, for leading all other zone managers in the Parkersburg district in refrigeration sales in a company-wide sales contest that ended October 1.

Randall sold the highest percentage of his assigned quota during the 61 days of the August-September contest.

Mr. and Mrs. Randall are leaving here on Nov. 5 by plane, for Miami Beach, where on Monday, November 5, they will meet the other 500 members of the International Harvester party. Harvester has planned a busy program of social functions at the Roney-Plaza in Miami Beach. On Wednesday, November 7, they will sail from Miami on the chartered S. S. Florida for Havana, Cuba. The Nacional Hotel has been reserved as a home for the party in Havana and will be the focal point of a round of entertainment and sight seeing.

Paper Collection Today

Waste paper will be collected today beginning at 9 a. m. on West Side. Residents are reminded to securely bundle the paper.

Three Deeds Record Property Sales

Three property sales were recorded in deeds which have been filed in the office of the clerk of Circuit Court.

Dorsey A. Ensor and Mary A. Ensor have sold property at the southwest corner of Edgewood Drive and Holland Street to John J. Robinson and Laura W. Robinson for about $15,000.

Rudolph Nickel sold property on the northeast side of Frost Avenue in Frostburg to William J. McFarland and Mary T. McFarland for about $11,500. Kenneth L. Bobo, Sr., and Ethel I. Bobo transferred ownership of property on Cromer Street in Westernport to Harry V. Reeves, Sr., for about $5,000.

Washington Camp Marks Anniversary

Washington Camp No. 86, Patriotic Order Sons of America, of Ellerslie, recently observed its 40th anniversary and honored its 11 surviving charter members with a dinner at St. Mark's Evangelical Church, Ellerslie.

The principal speaker was Rev. Frederick D. Oberkirker. A musical program was presented by the Madden Brothers and Darlene Miller. There was a vocal solo by Rev. C. W. Roby.

County Farmers Urged To Sell Their Scrap

Form Letter Will Urge Cooperation

A form letter will be sent to virtually all of Allegany County's approximately 1,000 farmers this week urging them to cooperate in the farm scrap drive sponsored by the County Agricultural Mobilization Committee.

Special Demand

The letter will ask the farmers to cooperate in rounding up farm scrap this fall, preferably by November 15, and selling it to scrap dealers. The higher grade, heavier types of scrap found on farms are in special demand.

In part the letter will read:

"Scrap prices are comparatively good right now. Generally, farmers can count on getting higher prices than they received for scrap in World War II. Scrap prices are controlled by the Office of Price Stabilization.

Farmers To Gain

"In the long run, farmers stand to gain when scrap moves to mills in sufficient quantities. Scrap helps guarantee continued production of farm machinery and equipment.

"Iron and steel scrap is wanted especially. There has been no call for the lighter metals, such as aluminum, or for such other materials as scrap rubber or paper. A partial list of items to look for: plow points and shares, cultivator shovels and sweeps, other broken machine parts, horse-drawn equipment replaced by a tractor, old electrical wires and cable, worn-out storage batteries, windmill and watertank towers replaced by modern pressure systems. You can include wire and screening, too. This lighter scrap is in greater demand than it used to be since more steel products are made in lighter weights today."

Albert O'Neal is chairman of the Agricultural Mobilization Committee.

Grantsville Man Hurt In Accident

A Grantsville man was taken to Memorial Hospital last night in an unconscious condition, State Police reported, following a highway accident about 6 p. m. on Keyser's Ridge.

Police identified the automobile driver as George J. Fazenbaker, 46. He was reported to have sustained a possible fractured skull.

Cause of the accident is unknown, police said and Fazenbaker, alone at the time, ran off the road and upset the automobile near the intersection of Route 219 and 40. Investigating the accident is Trooper Glenn Folk. The automobile, police said, was damaged considerably.

Briefs

Donald C. Brake, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Donald F. Brake, 203 Grand Avenue, was pledged by the Kappa Delta Rho fraternity in ceremonies taking place recently at Gettysburg (Pa.) College. Brake, a member of the freshman class, is majoring in history. He is a pre-ministerial student.

Hunting squirrels with his brother yesterday in the Barrelville section, Lee Robey, 336 Avirett Avenue, shot a gray fox, but no squirrels. His brother killed two squirrels.

Ivan C. Diehl of Frostburg, district Rotary governor, will address the Cumberland Rotary Club Tuesday at 12:15 p. m. at the Central YMCA. He will also conduct a club assembly at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club Tuesday following a 6 p. m. dinner.

Samuel H. James, 24, of Oldtown, has enlisted in the Air Force at the local recruiting station. He will be assigned to Sampson Air Force Base at Geneva, N. Y. for basic training.

While a civilian he did similar work and is a graduate of Fort Hill High School class of 1949. He was art editor of the school's newspaper "Sentinel" and artist for the classbook "Saber" for two years.

Today's Sermonette

For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God. I Corinthians 1:18.

By REV. MILTON M. ROBINSON

The Miracle Of The Cross

The most miraculous thing about this miracle we call Jesus is His cross. Nearly everything we know about Him is a miracle to us. It is a miracle that Jesus, God and Son of God should be born of a virgin, spend His childhood in the lowly carpenter's home, submit to human temptation, minister to the humble as well as the great, and choose obscure men such as Peter, a fisherman, or Levi, a tax collector, for His followers rather than rich men or great men. But the fact that fills us with the greatest awe is that Christ, the Son of God, should come to earth for the express purpose of dying the ignoble death of the cross. But then Christ does not do things the way the rest of humanity does.

The Christ of the cross is the distinctive feature of Christianity. You can take the personality of the founder out of any other religion and it will still exist inviolate. But take Christ out of Christianity and you will cut out its heart. Jesus Christ is Christianity. He is the sustainer of the human race. He is the incentive to righteous living. He is directly or indirectly the prime-mover behind every humanitarian cause since His death and resurrection. And yet the world doesn't realize it!

In thinking of the Christ of the cross we should ask ourselves certain questions. Why did Christ die like that? Why do we live as though Christ had not died? Why don't we take sin seriously? Who is capable of preaching the cross? Why has the cross, a symbol of shame, become the symbol of life?

The answers in part are: Christ died like that to save men from sin, to give them eternal life, to show God's loathing of sin and His love for men. We live as though Christ had not died because we don't take sin seriously. We're ungrateful and thoughtless. We're indifferent to the price Christ paid for our redemption. We don't want anything to interfere with our selfish pleasure, even if it is contrary to Christ's will. We live for the pleasure of the moment and care nothing for tomorrow. We fail to realize that tomorrow is eternity. No one is really capable of preaching the cross. It is too final. Its mystery is too great. It is too divisive. Our minds are too limited by our humanity to comprehend its greatness much less describe it. But because Christ has died upon it, the cross, which was formerly a symbol of degrading shame has become the symbol of life, hope, and of peace to the repentant.

There is only one way to heaven and one way to God and that is through the Christ of the cross. He has dignified and glorified the symbol of shame and you must accept it if you accept Him. There are two sides to the cross, the right side and the wrong side. On which side are you? Do you know Him as your Lord? Confess Him! Accept Him! He is the way to eternal life!

Tree Uprooted In Auto Mishap

An automobile traveling west on Braddock Road left the highway yesterday afternoon, turned over and caused considerable damage at the residence of Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of Allegany County School. None of the three occupants of the car was injured seriously, police noted.

James Victor Walker, 30, of Baltimore, driver of the car, was taken into custody by Lt. Edwin R. Lilya and Officer William Valentine and will be given a hearing today at 10:30 a. m. on charges of reckless driving and operating a vehicle without license, police said.

The two other occupants were Gerald D. Hare and Robert Hare. The automobile, according to police, went out of control, turned over and rolled into the front yard and driveway of the Kopp residence. A tree was uprooted and shrubbery and hedge torn out. The automobile was practically demolished, police added.

Walker told police an automobile coming from the opposite direction crowded him, causing the mishap.

Meeting Postponed

A meeting of Hyndman, Pa., residents called for last night to discuss an overhead bridge at the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad crossing there was postponed until the first of this week.

Harris Gives Mrs. Schurg Six Years

Declares Murder Verdict Warranted

Three prison sentences were meted out in Allegany County Circuit Court, one of them for six years to the 22-year-old Hoffman mother convicted of the manslaughter death of her husband.

Judge Morgan C. Harris on Saturday ordered Mrs. Shirley (Meek) Schurg sent to the Maryland Reformatory for Females. She had been convicted by a jury early last week.

Her husband died August 10 in Miners Hospital, Frostburg, of internal hemorrhages caused by a bullet wound inflicted by her four days earlier.

"The explanation that he stayed out late and you wanted to scare him does not seem enough reason to shoot him," Judge Harris declared in sentencing Mrs. Schurg.

He said he did not believe her defense that she backed into a chair and discharged the gun accidentally. He said the jury would have been justified in returning a verdict of first degree murder.

"There is an important undisclosed motive in this case and only you know what it is," Judge Harris told the defendant.

"I have come to the conclusion that since you are so emotionally unstable it might not be safe for the children to be in your custody."

He referred to the couple's two small daughters.

Judge Harris also sentenced two Eckhart men, George Bullett and Nachoma Bullett, to three years each in the House of Correction. They have been convicted of receiving stolen goods.

Judge Harris also imposed three year terms for each of the two other counts in the indictment to which the men had pleaded guilty. The sentences will run concurrently.

At Martinsburg, William L. Hudson, 26-year-old Shepherd College student from Antioch, W. Va., had a rape charge that had been filed against him dismissed at a hearing yesterday.

However, police then swore out a warrant against him on the larceny of a watch from the plaintiff in the rape case, Mrs. Elva Rollison, 30, of Hamilton, W. Va. Police testified they found her wrist watch in his possession when he was arrested Sunday. He was freed under $500 bail pending action of the February grand jury of Berkeley County Circuit Court.

Membership Is Urged By VFW Judge Advocate

Leaders Of Eastern States Attend Meeting

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (AP)—Two hundred eastern leaders of the Veterans of Foreign Wars were told today that in recent years the VFW has "lost more members out the back door than we have taken in the front."

The statement was made by Merton B. Tice, lawyer from Mitchell, S. D., and National Judge Advocate of the VFW.

He spoke at a meeting of leaders from five eastern states—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland—and the District of Columbia.

The meeting was held to plan a recruiting drive through which the VFW hopes to get 3,000 new members by next June.

Tice said the membership now is 1,200,000 and if it should drop below 1,000,000 "we will lose everything—revenue, prestige and the results of 52 years of hard work."

Saying that the VFW is "one of the strongest forces" against Communism in this country, Tice added:

"We have got to get the membership and, by heaven, we're going to get the membership."

Tice heads a four-man panel which plans to visit key cities, helping to organize the recruiting drive.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Sisk, RFD No. 3, Hazen Road, a son yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Gerson, 318 Cumberland Street, a daughter Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Snider, RFD No. 2, Williams Road, a daughter Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Parker, 40 Pennsylvania Avenue, a son Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Armstrong, RFD No. 2, Keyser, W. Va., a daughter Friday.

Allegany Hospital

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Rice, of Rawlings, a daughter Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Norval Rawlings, Mt. Savage, a daughter yesterday.

Safety Week Will Feature Many Events

Dinner Tuesday Set As Highlight

A Western Maryland Safety Council dinner meeting at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow at Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club has been arranged as one of the features of the third annual Allegany County Safety Week.

One of the highlights of the dinner meeting will be a demonstration of "Magic of Fire" by William Eathorne, Pittsburgh, Pa., who is with the United States Department of Interior's Bureau of Mines.

First In Area

This is the first time this program has been presented in this area and should be of much interest to the approximately 100 persons who will attend the affair.

Eathorne proves in a series of experiments that many of the common household items found in every kitchen and pantry will cause either fire or an explosion under certain favorable conditions.

Toastmaster at the dinner will be John J. Long, commissioner of the Police and Fire Departments. Rev. L. P. Landrigan, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church, will deliver the invocation.

Among the speakers will be C. T. Williams, superintendent of the Cumberland Division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and a member of the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission. He will speak on the activities of the commission.

Melvin L. Fine, chairman of the State Industrial Accident Commission, will address the group on industrial safety. Simon F. Reilly, commissioner, and Joseph A. Haller, director of safety, also will speak.

Members of the District Mine Rescue Team from Kitzmiller, national champions for 1951, will be special guests at the dinner. They will present a short demonstration of mine rescue equipment and methods. L. C. Hutson, University of Maryland instructor of mine safety engineering, and H. B. Buckley, district mine inspector, of Kitzmiller, will accompany the team.

Rescue Truck

The District Mine Rescue Truck will be located at Baltimore and Centre Streets from 10 a. m. until 2 p. m. Tuesday for public inspection.

Four downtown Cumberland window displays have been arranged for this Safety Week. There will be a traffic safety display in the C&A Gas Company window, a safety equipment display at 22 North Centre Street, a window display at the C&P Telephone Company and window posters at the Liberty Trust Company.

Special school and service club programs for Safety Week also will be conducted around the county.

The County Safety Week is sponsored by the State Industrial Accident Commission and the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission and is being directed by the Western Maryland Safety Council.

"Close The Book On Accidents" has been designated as the theme for the week ending Saturday.

Promotes Safety

The Western Maryland Safety Council is composed of representatives of the State Department, industry, City, County and State Police and Fire Departments, organ-

117 Births, 36 Deaths Recorded Here In July

Most Fatalities Caused By Heart Diseases

There were 117 births in Cumberland during July with 189 births in Allegany county, and there were 36 deaths in this city with 66 deaths in the county, according to the latest report of the State Department of Health.

Garrett County had 63 births and 14 deaths during the same month.

There were three infants deaths in Cumberland during the month, with two caused by premature birth and one by malformation. Allegany County had four stillbirths with three caused by premature birth and one by malformation. Garrett County reported two stillbirths by premature birth.

Of the 36 deaths in this city, five were caused by cancer, one by diabetes, three by cerebral hemorrhage, 13 by heart diseases, one by enteritis, one by tuberculosis, four by accidents and eight by other causes.

Allegany County had one death caused by tuberculosis, 12 by cancer, one by diabeetes, six by cerebral hemorrhage, 25 by heart diseases, one by enteritis, eight by accidents and 12 by other causes.

Garrett County's 14 deaths included seven by cerebral hemorrhage, four by heart diseases and three by other causes.

There were 30 notifiable diseases reported in Allegany County. There were three cases of rheumatic fever, four of measles, four of scarlet fever, one of mumps, five of tuberculosis, three of syphilis, one of gonorrhea, four of bronchopneumonia, one of lobar pneumonia and five of unspecified pneumonia.

Garrett County reported 21 notifiable diseases. There were 17 cases of measles, two of influenza, one of tuberculosis, and one of bronchopneumonia.

Early Start Proposed

Rep. Beall noted that "with the Savage River Dam completed and flood control well underway, it seems a logical time to begin definite planning for a program of action on the crosstown bridge."

In 1949, the State Highway Commission recommended a crosstown route (including a viaduct) from a point near Greene and Johnson streets to Maryland Avenue near Emily Street. That survey also included a recommendation for a central to southwest route from Greene and Johnson streets to Route 220 south and a central to southeast route from downtown to Oldtown Road.

However, the conference here Friday is expected to deal largely with plans for the crosstown bridge, which will take traffic from Greene Street, McMullen Highway (Route 220) and the West Side, across the city to Route 40 (east), and of course, also in the opposite direction.

The plans call for approaches at Mechanic and Centre streets, so down town traffic could enter or leave the bridge. This would eliminate the Baltimore Street bottleneck, engineers claim, and still give shoppers an easy access to the city's downtown shopping area.

To Air Crossing Problem

City Solicitor Cobey said last night that he conferred with C. T. Williams, superintendent of the Cumberland Division, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad on proposals to close crossings and construct an overpass near Harrison Street. This idea may also come up at the conference Friday, Cobey noted, although the crosstown viaduct will probably be the major order of business.

Prime purpose of the conference, Cobey and Beall explained, is to get all interested officials properly informed on the problem, and if possible, to reach an early agreement on a solution. Beall is of the opinion that the federal government can bear part of the cost, part can probably be borne by the state, part by the railroads and the city's cost would not be prohibitive, under such an arrangement.

Millionth Traffic Victim Will Die Before January 1

By LYNN WALKER
(President, Western Maryland Safety Council)

Somewhere among the 150 million people in our nation today there is an individual marked with an invisible sign.

Sometime between now and January 1, 1952, that individual, man, woman or child, has a date with destiny. Driving or walking, night or day, the peculiar combination of circumstances will arise that cause just one more traffic accident and the wearer of the sign will be revealed as Victim "X".

Victim "X" will be the millionth victim claimed by automobiles in America since the beginning of the Century.

The name of Victim "X" will not be inscribed on a plaque, no monument will be raised to his memory for the brutal truth is this: Because of the mass murder tactics we have accepted in the use of automobiles he will never be known by name. Our National average of 100 traffic deaths a day is our assurance that Victim "X" will be claimed sometime within the space of the next two months.

Greater Toll Than War

A parallel "X" has already kept his date, G. I. "X" fell in Korea sometime during the week of September 2, 1951. Traffic, in 50 years has killed as many humans as all the wars in which the United States has been engaged.

There is a tragic parallel in these two shadowy figures although they are 10,000 miles apart. Since the battle of Lexington on April 19, 1775 these men in uniform have paid with their lives that we might continue to live in a free land. Their deeds reflect credit to our nation and they fell in the name of freedom and independence.

Disgrace To Mankind

Since the turn of the century we have had a new kind of killer to contend with. This one takes its victims from civil and military ranks, it accepts women and children, old and young, rich and poor.

Engineers strive to give it more power, more speed, greater smoothness and it kills over 30,000 a year. Their deaths reflect nothing but disgrace on our civilization and they fell in the name of carelessness and thoughtlessness.

Maybe the total elimination of war as a national policy is too much to hope for at the present time, but we CAN do something about automobile deaths.

When you, as an individual driver, realize that you have a share in the responsibility for preventing accidents and start to use common sense in your every day driving, we will start to solve the problems that the automobile has brought to us.

State PTA Meeting Set

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 28 (AP) —The Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers will open a two-day convention here Thursday with the problems of children and young adults a main topic.

The 36th annual meeting will include panel discussions and a symposium.

Among the speakers will be Mrs. John E. Hayes, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Dr. Daniel A. Prescott of the Institute of Child Study in the College of Education at the University of Maryland.

Thursday afternoon there will be a panel discussion on "Young Adults in Troubled Times" and in the evening there will be a symposium on "Our Citadels of Security—Home, School, Church," the general convention theme.

The Weather

A dismal morning yesterday developed into a changeable afternoon. The sun broke through the clouds occasionally with the winds acting up now and then. High temperature as registered by the official weather station at Constitution Park was 67 degrees, low was 51 and at 8:30 p. m. mercury read 52 degrees. The amount of rainfall was .04 and humidity at 6 p. m. was 64 per cent. The housewife can look forward to a partly cloudy wash day which will be rather windy and cooler.

Local Couple Will Join Tour To Havana, Cuba

L. E. Randall, 519 Avirett Avenue, local International Harvester zone manager, and his wife have been awarded a 10-day, all-expenses-paid trip to Miami Beach and Havana, Cuba, starting November 5, for leading all other zone managers in the Parkersburg district in refrigeration sales in a company-wide sales contest that ended October 1.

Randall sold the highest percentage of his assigned quota during the 61 days of the August-September contest.

Mr. and Mrs. Randall are leaving here on Nov. 5 by plane, for Miami Beach, where on Monday, November 5, they will meet the other 500 members of the International Harvester party. Harvester has planned a busy program of social functions at the Roney-Plaza in Miami Beach. On Wednesday, November 7, they will sail from Miami on the chartered S. S. Florida for Havana, Cuba. The Nacional Hotel has been reserved as a home for the party in Havana and will be the focal point of a round of entertainment and sight seeing.

Paper Collection Today

Waste paper will be collected today beginning at 9 a. m. on West Side. Residents are reminded to securely bundle the paper.

Three Deeds Record Property Sales

Three property sales were recorded in deeds which have been filed in the office of the clerk of Circuit Court.

Dorsey A. Ensor and Mary A. Ensor have sold property at the southwest corner of Edgewood Drive and Holland Street to John J. Robinson and Laura W. Robinson for about $15,000.

Rudolph Nickel sold property on the northeast side of Frost Avenue in Frostburg to William J. McFarland and Mary T. McFarland for about $11,500. Kenneth L. Bobo, Sr., and Ethel I. Bobo transferred ownership of property on Cromer Street in Westernport to Harry V. Reeves, Sr., for about $5,000.

Washington Camp Marks Anniversary

Washington Camp No. 86, Patriotic Order Sons of America, of Ellerslie, recently observed its 40th anniversary and honored its 11 surviving charter members with a dinner at St. Mark's Evangelical Church, Ellerslie.

The principal speaker was Rev. Frederick D. Oberkirker. A musical program was presented by the Madden Brothers and Darlene Miller. There was a vocal solo by Rev. C. W. Roby.

County Farmers Urged To Sell Their Scrap

Form Letter Will Urge Cooperation

A form letter will be sent to virtually all of Allegany County's approximately 1,000 farmers this week urging them to cooperate in the farm scrap drive sponsored by the County Agricultural Mobilization Committee.

Special Demand

The letter will ask the farmers to cooperate in rounding up farm scrap this fall, preferably by November 15, and selling it to scrap dealers. The higher grade, heavier types of scrap found on farms are in special demand.

In part the letter will read:

"Scrap prices are comparatively good right now. Generally, farmers can count on getting higher prices than they received for scrap in World War II. Scrap prices are controlled by the Office of Price Stabilization.

Farmers To Gain

"In the long run, farmers stand to gain when scrap moves to mills in sufficient quantities. Scrap helps guarantee continued production of farm machinery and equipment.

"Iron and steel scrap is wanted especially. There has been no call for the lighter metals, such as aluminum, or for such other materials as scrap rubber or paper. A partial list of items to look for: plow points and shares, cultivator shovels and sweeps, other broken machine parts, horse-drawn equipment replaced by a tractor, old electrical wires and cable, worn-out storage batteries, windmill and watertank towers replaced by modern pressure systems. You can include wire and screening, too. This lighter scrap is in greater demand than it used to be since more steel products are made in lighter weights today."

Albert O'Neal is chairman of the Agricultural Mobilization Committee.

Grantsville Man Hurt In Accident

A Grantsville man was taken to Memorial Hospital last night in an unconscious condition, State Police reported, following a highway accident about 6 p. m. on Keyser's Ridge.

Police identified the automobile driver as George J. Fazenbaker, 46. He was reported to have sustained a possible fractured skull.

Cause of the accident is unknown, police said and Fazenbaker, alone at the time, ran off the road and upset the automobile near the intersection of Route 219 and 40. Investigating the accident is Trooper Glenn Folk. The automobile, police said, was damaged considerably.

Briefs

Donald C. Brake, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Donald F. Brake, 203 Grand Avenue, was pledged by the Kappa Delta Rho fraternity in ceremonies taking place recently at Gettysburg (Pa.) College. Brake, a member of the freshman class, is majoring in history. He is a pre-ministerial student.

Hunting squirrels with his brother yesterday in the Barrelville section, Lee Robey, 336 Avirett Avenue, shot a gray fox, but no squirrels. His brother killed two squirrels.

Ivan C. Diehl of Frostburg, district Rotary governor, will address the Cumberland Rotary Club Tuesday at 12:15 p. m. at the Central YMCA. He will also conduct a club assembly at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club Tuesday following a 6 p. m. dinner.

Samuel H. James, 24, of Oldtown, has enlisted in the Air Force at the local recruiting station. He will be assigned to Sampson Air Force Base at Geneva, N. Y. for basic training.

DISPLAY ARTIST AT WORK — Richard O. Springer, seaman apprentice, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennie H. Springer, Bedford Road, is seen above putting some finishing touches on a display at Little Creek, Va. The young display artist and sign painter is the newly assigned staff artist for Commander, Amphibious Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet. While a civilian he did similar work and is a graduate of Fort Hill High School class of 1949. He was art editor of the school's newspaper "Sentinel" and artist for the classbook "Saber" for two years.

Today's Sermonette

For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God. I Corinthians 1:18.

By REV. MILTON M. ROBINSON

The Miracle Of The Cross

The most miraculous thing about this miracle we call Jesus is His cross. Nearly everything we know about Him is a miracle to us. It is a miracle that Jesus, God and Son of God should be born of a virgin, spend His childhood in the lowly carpenter's home, submit to human temptation, minister to the humble as well as the great, and choose obscure men such as Peter, a fisherman, or Levi, a tax collector, for His followers rather than rich men or great men. But the fact that fills us with the greatest awe is that Christ, the Son of God, should come to earth for the express purpose of dying the ignoble death of the cross. But then Christ does not do things the way the rest of humanity does.

The Christ of the cross is the distinctive feature of Christianity. You can take the personality of the founder out of any other religion and it will still exist inviolate. But take Christ out of Christianity and you will cut out its heart. Jesus Christ is Christianity. He is the sustainer of the human race. He is the incentive to righteous living. He is directly or indirectly the prime-mover behind every humanitarian cause since His death and resurrection. And yet the world doesn't realize it!

In thinking of the Christ of the cross we should ask ourselves certain questions. Why did Christ die like that? Why do we live as though Christ had not died? Why don't we take sin seriously? Who is capable of preaching the cross? Why has the cross, a symbol of shame, become the symbol of life?

The answers in part are: Christ died like that to save men from sin, to give them eternal life, to show God's loathing of sin and His love for men. We live as though Christ had not died because we don't take sin seriously. We're ungrateful and thoughtless. We're indifferent to the price Christ paid for our redemption. We don't want anything to interfere with our selfish pleasure, even if it is contrary to Christ's will. We live for the pleasure of the moment and care nothing for tomorrow. We fail to realize that tomorrow is eternity. No one is really capable of preaching the cross. It is too final. Its mystery is too great. It is too divisive. Our minds are too limited by our humanity to comprehend its greatness much less describe it. But because Christ has died upon it, the cross, which was formerly a symbol of degrading shame has become the symbol of life, hope, and of peace to the repentant.

There is only one way to heaven and one way to God and that is through the Christ of the cross. He has dignified and glorified the symbol of shame and you must accept it if you accept Him. There are two sides to the cross, the right side and the wrong side. On which side are you? Do you know Him as your Lord? Confess Him! Accept Him! He is the way to eternal life!

Tree Uprooted In Auto Mishap

An automobile traveling west on Braddock Road left the highway yesterday afternoon, turned over and caused considerable damage at the residence of Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of Allegany County School. None of the three occupants of the car was injured seriously, police noted.

James Victor Walker, 30, of Baltimore, driver of the car, was taken into custody by Lt. Edwin R. Lilya and Officer William Valentine and will be given a hearing today at 10:30 a. m. on charges of reckless driving and operating a vehicle without license, police said.

The two other occupants were Gerald D. Hare and Robert Hare. The automobile, according to police, went out of control, turned over and rolled into the front yard and driveway of the Kopp residence. A tree was uprooted and shrubbery and hedge torn out. The automobile was practically demolished, police added.

Walker told police an automobile coming from the opposite direction crowded him, causing the mishap.

Meeting Postponed

A meeting of Hyndman, Pa., residents called for last night to discuss an overhead bridge at the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad crossing there was postponed until the first of this week.

Harris Gives Mrs. Schurg Six Years

Declares Murder Verdict Warranted

Three prison sentences were meted out in Allegany County Circuit Court, one of them for six years to the 22-year-old Hoffman mother convicted of the manslaughter death of her husband.

Judge Morgan C. Harris on Saturday ordered Mrs. Shirley (Meek) Schurg sent to the Maryland Reformatory for Females. She had been convicted by a jury early last week.

Her husband died August 10 in Miners Hospital, Frostburg, of internal hemorrhages caused by a bullet wound inflicted by her four days earlier.

"The explanation that he stayed out late and you wanted to scare him does not seem enough reason to shoot him," Judge Harris declared in sentencing Mrs. Schurg.

He said he did not believe her defense that she backed into a chair and discharged the gun accidentally. He said the jury would have been justified in returning a verdict of first degree murder.

"There is an important undisclosed motive in this case and only you know what it is," Judge Harris told the defendant.

"I have come to the conclusion that since you are so emotionally unstable it might not be safe for the children to be in your custody."

He referred to the couple's two small daughters.

Judge Harris also sentenced two Eckhart men, George Bullett and Nachoma Bullett, to three years each in the House of Correction. They have been convicted of receiving stolen goods.

Judge Harris also imposed three year terms for each of the two other counts in the indictment to which the men had pleaded guilty. The sentences will run concurrently.

At Martinsburg, William L. Hudson, 26-year-old Shepherd College student from Antioch, W. Va., had a rape charge that had been filed against him dismissed at a hearing yesterday.

However, police then swore out a warrant against him on the larceny of a watch from the plaintiff in the rape case, Mrs. Elva Rollison, 30, of Hamilton, W. Va. Police testified they found her wrist watch in his possession when he was arrested Sunday. He was freed under $500 bail pending action of the February grand jury of Berkeley County Circuit Court.

Membership Is Urged By VFW Judge Advocate

Leaders Of Eastern States Attend Meeting

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (AP)—Two hundred eastern leaders of the Veterans of Foreign Wars were told today that in recent years the VFW has "lost more members out the back door than we have taken in the front."

The statement was made by Merton B. Tice, lawyer from Mitchell, S. D., and National Judge Advocate of the VFW.

He spoke at a meeting of leaders from five eastern states—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland—and the District of Columbia.

The meeting was held to plan a recruiting drive through which the VFW hopes to get 3,000 new members by next June.

Tice said the membership now is 1,200,000 and if it should drop below 1,000,000 "we will lose everything—revenue, prestige and the results of 52 years of hard work."

Saying that the VFW is "one of the strongest forces" against Communism in this country, Tice added:

"We have got to get the membership and, by heaven, we're going to get the membership."

Tice heads a four-man panel which plans to visit key cities, helping to organize the recruiting drive.

Births

Dr and Mrs. David C. Brown, 112 Booth Street, Stratford, Conn., announce the birth of a daughter, Diane Christiana, October 24, in Bridgeport Hospital. Mrs. Brown is the former Miss Nannie Lee Frye, daughter of Lawrence W. Frye, 104 East Oldtown Road.

Memorial Hospital

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fitzmaurice, Largent, W. Va., a daughter yesterday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Mackereth, 41 Boone Street, a daughter yesterday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Sherman, Petersburg, W. Va., a son yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Sisk, RFD No. 3, Hazen Road, a son yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Gerson, 318 Cumberland Street, a daughter Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Snider, RFD No. 2, Williams Road, a daughter Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Parker, 40 Pennsylvania Avenue, a son Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Armstrong, RFD No. 2, Keyser, W. Va., a daughter Friday.

Allegany Hospital

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Rice, of Rawlings, a daughter Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Norval Rawlings, Mt. Savage, a daughter yesterday.

Safety Week Will Feature Many Events

Dinner Tuesday Set As Highlight

A Western Maryland Safety Council dinner meeting at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow at Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club has been arranged as one of the features of the third annual Allegany County Safety Week.

One of the highlights of the dinner meeting will be a demonstration of "Magic of Fire" by William Eathorne, Pittsburgh, Pa., who is with the United States Department of Interior's Bureau of Mines.

First In Area

This is the first time this program has been presented in this area and should be of much interest to the approximately 100 persons who will attend the affair.

Eathorne proves in a series of experiments that many of the common household items found in every kitchen and pantry will cause either fire or an explosion under certain favorable conditions.

Toastmaster at the dinner will be John J. Long, commissioner of the Police and Fire Departments. Rev. L. P. Landrigan, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church, will deliver the invocation.

Among the speakers will be C. T. Williams, superintendent of the Cumberland Division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and a member of the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission. He will speak on the activities of the commission.

Melvin L. Fine, chairman of the State Industrial Accident Commission, will address the group on industrial safety. Simon F. Reilly, commissioner, and Joseph A. Haller, director of safety, also will speak.

Members of the District Mine Rescue Team from Kitzmiller, national champions for 1951, will be special guests at the dinner. They will present a short demonstration of mine rescue equipment and methods. L. C. Hutson, University of Maryland instructor of mine safety engineering, and H. B. Buckley, district mine inspector, of Kitzmiller, will accompany the team.

Rescue Truck

The District Mine Rescue Truck will be located at Baltimore and Centre Streets from 10 a. m. until 2 p. m. Tuesday for public inspection.

Four downtown Cumberland window displays have been arranged for this Safety Week. There will be a traffic safety display in the C&A Gas Company window, a safety equipment display at 22 North Centre Street, a window display at the C&P Telephone Company and window posters at the Liberty Trust Company.

Special school and service club programs for Safety Week also will be conducted around the county.

The County Safety Week is sponsored by the State Industrial Accident Commission and the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission and is being directed by the Western Maryland Safety Council.

"Close The Book On Accidents" has been designated as the theme for the week ending Saturday.

Promotes Safety

The Western Maryland Safety Council is composed of representatives of the State Department, industry, City, County and State Police and Fire Departments, organ-

117 Births, 36 Deaths Recorded Here In July

Most Fatalities Caused By Heart Diseases

There were 117 births in Cumberland during July with 189 births in Allegany county, and there were 36 deaths in this city with 66 deaths in the county, according to the latest report of the State Department of Health.

Garrett County had 63 births and 14 deaths during the same month.

There were three infants deaths in Cumberland during the month, with two caused by premature birth and one by malformation. Allegany County had four stillbirths with three caused by premature birth and one by malformation. Garrett County reported two stillbirths by premature birth.

Of the 36 deaths in this city, five were caused by cancer, one by diabetes, three by cerebral hemorrhage, 13 by heart diseases, one by enteritis, one by tuberculosis, four by accidents and eight by other causes.

Allegany County had one death caused by tuberculosis, 12 by cancer, one by diabeetes, six by cerebral hemorrhage, 25 by heart diseases, one by enteritis, eight by accidents and 12 by other causes.

Garrett County's 14 deaths included seven by cerebral hemorrhage, four by heart diseases and three by other causes.

There were 30 notifiable diseases reported in Allegany County. There were three cases of rheumatic fever, four of measles, four of scarlet fever, one of mumps, five of tuberculosis, three of syphilis, one of gonorrhea, four of bronchopneumonia, one of lobar pneumonia and five of unspecified pneumonia.

Garrett County reported 21 notifiable diseases. There were 17 cases of measles, two of influenza, one of tuberculosis, and one of bronchopneumonia.

Weather Forecast

REDS ATTACK ON CENTRAL FRONT

Bus Plunges Off Bridge Ramp, 7 Die

'Loyal' Dockmen To Defy Pickets, Union Head Says

New York Port "Open," Ryan Tells Truman

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (AP) — Opposing union factions in the east coast's wildcat dock strike sent separate messages to President Truman today — and a top White House aide expressed belief that a break in the dispute was imminent.

But behind the talk was the threat of a renewal of the violence that has flared sporadically along New York's waterfront during the past two weeks.

Today's major developments in the strike were:

(1) Joseph P. Ryan, president of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association, told Mr. Truman in his telegram that back-to-work longshoremen tomorrow would "go through" and "over" any picket lines.

Ryan Says Port Open

Ryan said, too, that "the port of New York is open" and "thousands of loyal Americans have returned to work on piers in all sections of the port."

(2) John J. (Gene) Sampson, wildcat strike leader, told the chief executive in his telegram that he would urge an immediate end to the strike—if Mr. Truman would set up an "emergency impartial body" to review the strike issues.

(3) Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman said he had received word definitely indicating that the dockers would return to work tomorrow in response to Truman's plea.

Steelman's statement brought a sharp denial, however, from Sampson.

The insurgent union leader called Steelman's statement "applesauce" and said his position remained the same as he outlined in his wire to Truman.

Port At Standstill 14 Days

Sampson could not be reached for comment on Ryan's assertion that longshoremen would "go through" and "over" picket lines tomorrow.

Neither was there any confirmation of Ryan's statement that thousands of dock workers already had returned to their jobs.

The sprawling port has been nearly at a standstill for 14 days—but there have been some ship movements, particularly passenger vessels, and some work has been done on military cargoes.

Sunday usually is a relatively quiet day on the waterfront.

Although the port of Boston is tied up—like New York—Portland, Me., and Philadelphia dockworkers voted over the weekend to handle all but diverted cargoes.

Mrs. Rosenberg Explains Korea Rotation Policy

12,000 Due Home By End Of November

TOKYO, Monday, Oct. 29 (AP) — Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, assistant secretary of defense in charge of manpower, heads for home today, having assured that 12,000 to 15,000 U. S. combat troops will be brought out of Korea by the end of next month under a new point-rotation formula.

The rotation program calls for return to the United States of men in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force who have accumulated 37 points—if their replacements are on hand.

After a seven day tour of Japan and Korea, Mrs. Rosenberg in a press conference Sunday answered a long-standing question about the return of men from Korea before winter if they served there through last winter's tough campaign.

Applies To Combat Troops

She said this policy applied strictly to combat troops, not rear-echelon men. About 12,000 to 15,000 veteran frontline troops still remain to be rotated by the end of November.

The rotation program is based on two factors: 1. Length of service in the Far East and Korea. 2. Availability of trained replacements to insure that combat effectiveness of the American forces will not be cut down.

Mrs. Rosenberg explained that the 37-point rotation policy worked this way:

1. Four points monthly to men in the combat zone. This includes division headquarters.

2. Two points monthly to men "behind the lines" duty, including corps headquarters.

Wounded Get Full Credit

3. One and one-half points monthly to single men in Japan for each month since July 1950, and to all men—single or married— on Okinawa, Guam and in the Philippines.

4. One point per month is given a married man serving in Japan whose dependents are in Japan.

A man wounded in action in Korea, if he received the Purple Heart, is credited with the same time during hospitalization as if he remained with his unit.

A man who returns from confirmed prisoner-of-war or missing-in-action status receives the same four points monthly he would have received in combat during that time.

Israeli Alliance Ideas Requested

TEL AVIV, Israel, Oct. 28 (AP) — The United States, Britain, France and Turkey today invited Israel to submit her ideas on the projected Middle East defense command which Egypt has spurned, reliable sources reported.

The four powers thus moved into the most ticklish area of their movement to organize Middle East defense—the mutual suspicion and rivalry between Israel and her unreconciled Arab neighbors.

Informants said U. S. Ambassador Monnet B. Davis, British Minister Sir Knox Helm, French Minister Edouard Guyon and Turkish Minister Seyfullah Esin made an unusual Sunday call at the foreign ministry with notes from their governments. The Sunday calls were said to have been made because of the urgency of their mission.

Less than two weeks ago Egypt slapped the four powers in the face by bluntly rejecting their invitation to become a founding member of the Middle East alliance and establish an internationalized defense force for the Suez Canal.

Egypt took the attitude that the British must withdraw from the canal area and the Sudan before she could entertain the idea.

Liberals Pledge Aid To Churchill

LONDON, Oct. 28 (AP)—Winston Churchill tonight won a qualified pledge of support from the Liberal Party for his new Conservative government and its narrow majority in the House of Commons.

But Liberal Party headquarters announced that Clement Davies, the Liberal leader, had turned down an offer of a place in the government.

The Liberals pledged their six votes to the aid of the Conservatives' 18-seat majority in the House of Commons on "measures clearly conceived in the interest of the country as a whole.'

Wearing his old "siren suit"—the zip-fronted overalls which he adopted in London's blitz — Churchill conferred with Davies for a second time today. He had called in the Liberal leader for the first time last night.

In offering Davies a place, Churchill was trying to fulfill a campaign proposal to create a "broad based" government to deal with Britain's deepening dilemma in economic and foreign affairs.

Vehicle Goes Out Of Control, Falls 40 Feet

22 Hurt; Concrete Chunk Is Blamed

OAKLAND, Calif., Oct. 28 (AP)—A big Greyhound bus plunged 40 feet off an approach ramp to the bay bridge today, killing seven persons and injuring the other 22 occupants pinned upside down in the pancaked wreckage.

The bus spun out of control after striking a chunk of concrete knocked into its path by the crash of a motorist minutes before.

The motorist, whose car had smashed into a traffic-dividing abutment on the cloverleaf bridge approach, also was injured seriously.

Twelve bus occupants were in critical condition in hospitals.

"Get me out, get me out," the bus survivors screamed during the hour and 46 minutes required to pry open the wreckage.

The bus, after hitting the concrete chunk, swerved across another traffic lane, crashed through a steel retaining fence bordering the ramp and fell upside down on a railroad right of way.

The accident occurred 300 yards short of the bay's waters while the bus, inbound from Salt Lake City, was circling in the cloverleaf traffic system on its way into the Oakland bus terminal.

The last bus occupant removed was an 11-year-old boy, James Pete Smith, Vallejo, Calif., who kept pleading:

"Where's my mother, where's my mother. Is she all right?"

She was among the injured.

Shortly before the bus hove into sight, a car driven by Orville Charles Russell, Jr., formerly of Independence, Kan., smashed into the concrete divider and overturned, pinning him in a pool of spilled gasoline. He was on his way to his new home in nearby Richmond.

Police Officer Art Dezotte said the car crash broke off a piece of concrete three feet long, 1½ feet wide and 1½ feet thick. It was thrown into the Oakland-bound lane just minutes before the bus appeared.

It caromed across the opposite lanes of traffic, ripped through 100 feet of the restraining fence and went the 40 feet with a crash that shook nearby homes.

One of the first to reach the bus was S. Q. Bryant, a negro construction worker. He and Dezotte smashed windows and removed four or five persons.

"At first," Bryant said, "everyone seemed to be unconscious. There were moans but no screaming that I can remember. Then, as we kept working, more and more seemed to regain consciousness. That's when the screaming and crying began."

Truce Talk Site Balloon Explodes, Burning 13 Yanks

PANMUNJOM, Korea, Oct. 28 (AP) —One of four hydrogen-filled balloons over the armistice talk site exploded this afternoon, burning 13 American soldiers.

Some soldiers extinguished their flaming clothing by leaping into a nearby river.

The big yellow balloon had been lowered for refilling when it exploded.

The balloons are to warn aircraft away from the area.

Autopsy May Provide Clue To Cause Of Doctor's Death

LYNN, Mass., Oct. 28 (AP)—Investigators tonight awaited the outcome of an examination of the vital organs of Dr. Albert H. Covner for a clue to the cause of his death 16 days after three teen-aged baby sitters snatched $20,000 from his home.

The 51-year-old heart specialist's body was found Saturday in North Reading woods, about 20 miles from his Nahant home. His automobile was about 500 feet from the body.

Police said a small bottle of nitroglycerine, a heart stimulant, was found near the body and several types of pills were in his pockets.

Relatives and friends told investigators that he had been "terribly upset" since his baby-sitter, Roberta McCauley, 15, and two other girls disappeared with the contents of a strong box for a wild spree in New York.

Medical Examiner Thomas P. Devlin said the cause of death probably would not be known for 48 hours.

With hundreds attending, services for the highly respected physician were held today at a funeral home. Three hundred mourners packed into the chamber designed to accommodate 200 and 500 stood outside in the rain.

Blueprint Submitted For UMT Could Involve 800,000 Year

Leaving The Generals At A Distance

Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, assistant secretary of defense, talks with men of the 24th Division on the central front in Korea. Mrs. Rosenberg led the men up a hillside away from the generals accompanying her (small group in background) so she could get the GIs' point of view. She heads for home today, having assured that 12,000 to 15,000 U. S. combat troops will be brought out of Korea by the end of next month under a new point-rotation formula.

First-Year Cost Is Set At More Than $4 Billion

Civilian Commission Gives Grim Warning

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP) — A blueprint for a universal military training system—a program that could involve 800,000 youths annually and cost more than $4 billion in the first year — was disclosed today by the new National Security Training Commission.

The commission prefaced its recommendations to Congress with some grim words about the world outlook and the need for UMT, among them these:

The clear prospect is that the present generation must live in danger for many years" and therefore should "learn to live with danger calmly and confidently."

Because today's military technology permits an enemy to strike directly at the United States by sea or air, "the American people must be prepared, like their forebears to pushed the frontier westward, to meet a savage and deadly attack at any moment."

"The return to frontier conditions demands a frontier response."

The frontier response, the commission argued, is to have every physically and mentally able youth taught in the "art of survival and self-defense."

The five-man civilian commission, headed by James W. Wadsworth, a former Republican member of Congress, was formed last June after Congress had approved the broad idea of UMT. But in doing that (as part of an amendment to the draft law) Congress left details on the form and operation of UMT for the commission to draft and submit to the lawmakers. It also left to some time in the uncertain future the date upon which a training program could be started.

Here are some of the points the commission's report made:

1. A fully operating program would mean that about 800,000 youths 18 years old would get six months of training, then for the next seven and a half years be in a reserve component (reserves of the Army, Navy, Marines or Air Force or the ground or air National Guard). A UMT program starting off on a limited scale might involve training about 60,000 men annually.

2. The cost of a full-scale program is estimated by the Defense Department for the first year at $4,187,983,600, with the annual cost later dropping to $2,158,746,200. The limited program cost estimate was $398,895,210 for the starting year, $179,291,680 thereafter.

3. The commission thought the military's estimate cost was too high, that it might be possible to reduce it. For one thing, the commission raised questions about the military belief that for each two trainees one more person would be needed in the system to support it through maintenance and other service.

4. Induction of trainees would be through the existing Selective Service system used for the drafting of men into the regular forces. The trainees, however, would not be members of the regular armed forces, although they would be trained for military duty and subject generally to the same military law governing the armed forces.

5. Actually the system could not be "universal" because there is a level of physical and mental standards below which it would be unprofitable, from a military standpoint, to go in the UMT program. But these unqualified youths could be mobilized and their civilian skills used in emergency.

A-Bomb Detonated In Nevada Produces Zig-Zag After-Cloud

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Oct. 28 (AP) — A dazzling new weapon in America's atomic bag — a medium sized bomb with a lazy Z-shaped after-cloud — was dropped over the Nevada desert today.

The bomb, apparently dropped from an Air Force B-29, exploded with a high flash and afterglow, visible on Mt. Charleston, 50 miles away.

The ball of fire seared against a purple mountain background at 7:30 a. m., P. S. T., (10:20 a. m., E. S. T.) for several brief moments it put the bright morning sun to shame.

Odd Zig-Zag Cloud

The bomb burst at an elevation that appeared to be at least 1,000 feet above the floor of Yucca Flat. Its flash was considerably greater than that of the baby a-bomb, unveiled at the Atomic Energy Commission grounds last Monday. Observers agreed that it did not appear as bright as the blasts set off here last January and February.

Strangely, the detonation, for all its spectacular aspects, was not felt by observers on Charleston peak, or in Las Vegas, 75 miles away.

But the odd, zig-zagging cloud which stretched for miles across the desert before disintegrating was seen by hundreds of early Sunday morning risers.

Weather Is Perfect

The AEC declined to verify that the bomb was dropped from a plane, issuing only its routine announcement that there had been a nuclear explosion at the Nevada test site.

The experiment, the second nuclear burst in the current AEC series, was conducted in perfect weather. The three planes spent more than an hour hovering over the target before the detonation came.

Slight radiation was reported by the AEC radiological safety unit in the area between Beatty and Lathrop Wells, Nev., 35 miles southwest of the test site. But, said the AEC, the radiation was barely measurable and was in no way harmful to humans, animals, or crops.

Demos To Pick New Chairman Wednesday

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP)—The Democratic National Committee meets here Wednesday to pick a new chairman with Frank McKinney, Indianapolis banker, reported to be No. 1 man in the list of those who might get the nod from President Truman.

A committee official, who asked not to be quoted by name, told a reporter that unless Mr. Truman changes his mind in the meantime, he expects McKinney's name to be put forward.

The President himself has said about 30 names are under consideration in the hunt for a successor to William M. Boyle, Jr., who is resigning.

There are indications that John Carroll, former Colorado congressman and now a White House assistant, and Federal Judge James P. McGranery of Pennsylvania, also are high on the list

More Jobs, Higher Consumer Income Predicted In 1952

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP)—The Bureau of Agricultural Economics predicted today that 1952 will bring more jobs, higher consumer incomes and perhaps some additional price increases.

The bureau said the increase in income is likely to be limited to non-farmers. It said farmers are not expected to share in the prospective boost in economic activity because of rising production costs.

In an economic outlook report for the new year, the bureau said "non-agricultural income is currently at a record high and is expected to continue to rise in 1952."

Raid Turns Up Iran Red Plot

TEHRAN, Iran, Oct. 28 (AP) — A Communist plot to overthrow Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi was reported uncovered in a police raid last night on an underground headquarters of the outlawed Red Tudeh Party.

Authorities said the raid turned up the most important discovery in the last three years.

The party was declared illegal after the Shah was nicked by assassin's bullets in February, 1949, but it has continued operations covertly.

In last night's raid police reported seizure of documents and thousands of leaflets calling on Iranians to get rid of the Shah and found a "national government."

Police said they found "very important documents which may lead to further discoveries." The pamphlets attacked the Shah's character and morals. An undisclosed number of Tudeh Party members was arrested. The Tudeh party was officially blamed for tearing down street signs on Tehran's Avenue Churchill Friday after Winston Churchill's election victory in Britain. The Avenue was named during the historic Roosevelt-Churchill -Stalin conference here in 1943.

55th Great Grandchild

DEEPWATER, Mo., Oct. 28 (AP) — Mrs. Betty Parscale greeted her fifty-fifth great grandchild at her home here today, and with trigger quick arithmetic figured she now has 98 living descendants.

No. 98 is Charles Edward Cook, four-week-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Cook of Clinton, Mo.

Egypt's State Council Backs Mobilization

CAIRO, Egypt, Oct. 28 (AP)—The Egyptian State Council today approved general mobilization of manpower and drafting of all Egyptians between 18 and 50 "in case of war or threat of war."

It also provided for setting up a high council of war headed by Prime Minister Mustapha El Nahas Pasha.

The state council has the status of a supreme court.

To become law, this preparedness move in the British-Egyptian dispute over the Suez and the Sudan needs only approval of the cabinet ministers. They drafted the mobilization bill.

When parliament is in recess, as it is now, the cabinet can issue decrees "if this is required by urgent circumstances."

Abdel Razak El Sanhoury Pasha, chairman of the state council, told reporters his judges have been studying the general mobilization since long before the Anglo-Egyptian crisis.

Sources close to the government said the cabinet would step up final approval of the bill "to be ready for any developments."

The government yesterday gave Britain formal notice of the actions taken two weeks ago to break old treaty rights giving the British a share in ruling the Suez Canal zone and the million-square-mile Sudan.

Britain in the past fortnight has poured thousands of troop reinforcements into the Canal zone and has military control of the canal in the face of Egyptian labor, food and water supply boycotts and mob demonstrations.

Soviet Press Curbs Attacks On Churchill

MOSCOW, Oct. 28 (AP) — A letup in Soviet press attacks on Winston Churchill led Western observers to express a belief today that Russia may be feeling for an opening to negotiate over East-West differences.

Most Western diplomats stationed here felt the Russians would welcome a direct approach by the new British prime minister to ease the tension.

U. N. Armored Unit Fights Out Of Enemy Trap

One MIG Downed In New Jet Battles

U. S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Monday, Oct. 29 (AP)—Chinese Reds hurled new assaults today at a hill mass southeast of strategic Kumsong, after the Allies had reported that Central Korean city "neutralized."

Some 1,000 screaming Reds attacked the hills in the predawn darkness. A pooled news dispatch did not report the outcome. An earlier assault in company strength was reported repulsed.

The fresh attacks underscored an Allied briefing officer's report Sunday that the Chinese had regrouped after being driven northward in the recent U. N. drives on the central front.

On the eastern front, officers said the Reds had built five bridges across the Pukhan River north of Yanggu and were rebuilding their forces in that area.

Heavy fighting raged Sunday north of Kumsong. An Allied armored task force ramming beyond the rubbled city fought out of a Communist artillery trap, but four 47-ton Patton tanks were crippled.

AP Correspondent Milo Farnett reported the Reds shelled the armored column two and a half hours at a road junction northwest of Kumsong. He said Allied casualties were light.

The aerial encounters, fought at speeds of more than 600 miles an hour, pitted a total of 64 deadly U. S. Sabre jets against 160 or more swept-wing MIGs of Russian manufacture. It was the eighth straight day of jet combat.

The U. S. Fifth Air Force claimed one MIG destroyed and one damaged in the flashing action.

Headquarters said all Sabres returned safely from these encounters, but admitted the loss elsewhere of one jet shot down by ground fire. The pilot was rescued by helicopter.

Eight Japan-based B-29 Superforts bombed Communist bridge facilities at Songchon in Northwest Korea without opposition.

Subcommittees Again Tackle Buffer Issue

MUNSAN, Korea, Monday, Oct. 29 (AP) — Allied and Communist negotiators met at Panmunjom today for the fifth time in an effort to break the deadlock over a buffer zone — a necessary step toward ending the Korean war.

The meeting began as scheduled at 11 a.m. (9 p.m., EST, Sunday).

The Communists want a buffer zone five to 12 miles south of the present battle line. The Allies insist on the battle line, mostly well inside North Korea.

A United Nations command spokesman estimated the difference involved about 1,000 square miles.

There was no indication that any quick settlement was in prospect. However, Communist correspondents at Panmunjom expressed optimism.

"I feel certain a few miles are not going to hold up an agreement," one of them told Allied correspondents while the subcommittees of both sides were meeting Sunday.

Red Air Power Challenges U. N.

TOKYO, Monday, Oct. 29 (AP) — Communist air power today is hurling its most serious threat at Allied air supremacy since the Korean war began.

In the past eight days the Reds have pressed what the U. S. Far East Air Forces officially describe as "the most intensive and most prolonged aerial warfare" of the 16-months-old conflict.

Not counting Sunday's three battles, in which one Red jet was destroyed and one damaged, the Far East Air Forces gave this score for the previous week:

Enemy planes destroyed 14; probably destroyed, 6; heavily damaged, 29.

Allied planes destroyed, 14, including four B-29 bombers; and an undisclosed number damaged. These are the greatest one-week Allied losses of the war.

The Allies still control the Korean skies, and air commanders are confident they can continue to do so, but it is taking a growing toll of men and planes. Tactics may have to be revised.

25 Die In Plane Crash

GUATEMALA, Guatemala, Oct 28 (AP)— A troupe of Guatemalan stage and radio artists was all but wiped out yesterday in the crash of a Guatemalan army air force C-47 transport plane that killed 25 of 27 persons aboard.

Convicted Killer Reprieved As Woman Admits She Lied

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 28 (AP)—A convicted slayer, scheduled to die in the state prison's electric chair tomorrow night, today received a temporary reprieve after a scorned woman admitted she had lied at his trial.

Francis C. Smith, 26, was granted a reprieve until at least next Jan. 14 by Gov. John Lodge this afternoon in the latest development in the case which broke over the weekend.

Edith Springer, 23, Stamford, now serving time at the Wetumpka, Ala., state prison, a diminutive brunette, who admitted on Friday that she committed perjury at the trial, was a key witness against Smith and George Lowdon, 23.

Smith was sentenced to die in the electric chair at the state prison in nearby Kethersfield, and Lowden, who pleaded guilty to second degree murder, was sentenced to life.

Both were indicted in the slaying of an elderly night watchman during a burglarly at the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, Greenwich, July 23, 1949.

Miss Springer said she lied against Smith and Lowden because she wanted to get revenge against Lowden because he "was spreading lies about me."

Noted Composer To Appear With Choral Society

Miss Shirley Weaver Listed As Soloist

Geoffrey O'Hara, composer of such classics as "One World," "There Is No Death" and "Give A Man A Horse He Can Ride," will give a piano-illustrated lecture at Allegany High School auditorium tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. with the Cumberland Choral Society. The entire program of the Chorus will be devoted to O'Hara compositions.

Although his serious compositions are admired by music lovers everywhere, the general public knows O'Hara best as the composer of the tremendously popular "K-K-K-Katy," a song that topped the hit parade a quarter century ago.

Opening Tuesday night's program, the Choral Society will sing "Sons and Daughters Of A Land Reborn" and "Forward To Christ." Harold Hanson and Kenneth McGregor will sing the solo parts.

Mr. O'Hara's musical lecture will follow and will show the audience how anyone may compose a tune.

The chorus will open the third and final phase of the program with "There Is No Death." Preceding a performance of "One World" by 200 singers (combining the Allegany and Fort Hill High School choruses with the Cumberland Choral Society) will be a dramatic prelude writen by Dr. Frances Andrews, associate professor of Music Education at Penn State College. Called "Bombs Or Brotherhood," this original sketch will lead up to the 200 member chorus singing O'Hara's inspiring "One World." Shirley Weaver will be soloist.

Jack E. Platt will conduct the choral part of the program and introduce Mr. O'Hara. No admission will be charged but an offering will be asked at one of the intermissions.

Possible Candidate

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 28 (AP)—W. Lee O'Daniel, former governor of Texas, said in an interview today he might become a Democratic candidate for president in the Oregon primary election next May.

Piece Of Bomber, No Bodies Found In River

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 28 (AP) — One piece of the Air Force B-25, carrying seven men, which yesterday crashed into the Missouri River here, was recovered today by the Army Corps of Engineers, but so far no bodies have been located.

Two men were rescued but the other five were believed to have lost their lives as the bomber split apart in hitting the water at a point between Municipal and Fairfax airports.

Early Ratification Seen

Demos May Gain Control Of Philly

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28 (AP) — The most persistent grip any political party has ever held on a major American city is in danger of being broken today as the Democrats challenge the Republicans for control of Philadelphia.

Even the most avid Republicans concede the Democrats a strong chance of grabbing control of this city, third largest in the nation, for the first time since 1880, the year before James A. Garfield won election to the White House.

The principal contest, for mayor, is between the Rev. Daniel A. Poling, Republican, and Joseph S. Clark, Jr., Democrat, but the key man to the November 6 election is Richardson Dilworth, running for district attorney on the Democratic ticket.

Dilworth, who already has proved himself to be the greatest Democratic vote getter in Philadelphia for many a year, has singled out municipal graft and fraud as the major election issue.

The 53-year-old ex-Marine promises to clean up "the stink and corruption in city hall once and for all because the Republicans will never, never do it."

A-Weapons To Force Military Revolution

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28 (AP)—Air Secretary Thomas Finletter said today that "the atomic weapons we soon will have" require a revolution in "our basic concepts of the use, composition and deployment of armies, navies and air forces."

He mentioned "great advances" this country is making in that field and said that unless their possibilities are taken into account America will be making the traditional mistake of planning for a war that is past.

Finletter expressed his views in an address delivered at St. Joseph's College here in connection with the award to him of a doctor of laws degree.

Fire At Cincinnati Leaves Four Dead

Two victims were burned to death. A man and a woman were killed when they jumped from windows of the burning four story building.

One of those killed was Ruby Whitrock, owner of a tavern on the first floor of the brick building. She lived on an upper floor. Miss Whitrock missed a fire net when she jumped from her flat window.

Former FCC Member Dies At Philippi, W. Va.

PHILIPPI, W. Va., Oct. 28 (AP) — Judge Ira Ellsworth Robinson, 82, former member of the Federal Communications Commission, died unexpectedly at his home here early today.

Robinson, a Republican, was a former judge of the West Virginia State Supreme Court of Appeals. He was one of the first appointees to the old Federal Radio Commission, predecessor agency to the present FCC.

Robinson was the Republican nominee for governor in 1916. In recent years he had practiced law in association with Rupert A. Sinsel of Clarksburg.

Three Duck Hunters, Two Searchers Missing

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Oct. 28 (AP) — Two Coast Guardsmen who joined the search early today for three missing duck hunters were themselves reported missing.

The Wilmette Goast Guard station said it has not heard from the two searchers since 2 a. m. (EST) Sunday. They left the station two hours earlier in a radio-equipped 30-foot cabin boat.

"He brought my son safely home"

"Recently, my four-year-old boy wandered away from our home. One of your repairmen, driving along, noticed my son darting across the street. Realizing the danger my son was exposing himself to, your repairman stopped his truck, found out where the boy lived, and returned him to his mother. My wife and I are convinced that the thoughtful actions of your employee saved our son from possible serious injury."

The above is from a letter we received. It carries an important message for all of us, for it points the way to safety on the road. Be thoughtful . . . drive carefully.

Telephone drivers are thoughtful and careful. Last year, for instance, they covered 7,655,000 miles of streets and highways in Maryland—in all kinds of weather. More than 1,700 of them completed the year without a single accident. And 47% have safe driving records that range from five to thirty years.

This is good, of course, but our people will never stop trying to better these records in every way. With telephone drivers, it's safety first, last and all ways.

The Old Second Guesser

By JOHN N. WHEELER

Never Teach A Woman To Shoot

Never teach a woman to shoot unless she is an Annie Oakley who used to like to break glass balls in Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show.

John Wheeler

When this century was young, there was a musical show called Florodora that attracted all the young blades because in it was a famous sextette which danced flirtatiously and sang a song that started "Oh, tell me, pretty maiden, are there any more at home like you?" These girls became famous for their pulchritude, their costumes, and their charm, but not for their conduct. It seemed as if every time there was some kind of a scandal, the lady involved turned out to be one of the Florodora Sextette.

Actually this should add up to six, although you would gather from news reports there were more females in the act than there were passengers on the Mayflower, and she must have had elastic sides judging by the number who claim their ancestors came over on her. My grandmother used to tell me her parents were late getting to the dock and arrived just as they were pulling in the gangplank. I think she wanted to soothe my feelings.

"Caesar" Young was a rich bookmaker in New York before the days of the Kefauver investigation who was riding downtown in a hansom cab on June 4, 1904, with the idea of meeting his wife at the pier and sailing for Europe. This style vehicle was a high perpendicular affair with the driver sitting up topside and talking to his passengers by lifting a little trapdoor in the roof. It gave considerable privacy and was popular with lovers. Sitting beside the bookmaker was a young lady named Nan Patterson, one of the "original Florodora Sextette."

The cabman was startled by a shot and, looking down through his peephole, he saw the man's bloody head on his companion's lap. He promptly called the cops and set off one of New York's big murder cases which went through three trials trying to determine whether he killed himself at the prospect of leaving the girl and going abroad with his wife or she had pulled the trigger. Anyway he was dead. After the third try, there was a disagreement, and she was permitted to go free and was reported later to have married and moved to Seattle, Wash.

Then there was the neighbor of mine who wanted to go pheasant shooting with me, and I loaned her a shotgun and alerted her on certain points.

"The idea," I said before we started, "is to aim at birds and not to shoot any hunters or dogs."

She nodded her head. Soon the setter was on a point, and I urged her to keep abreast of me, but she lagged timidly. Suddenly a cock pheasant got up, and her gun went off in my ear, and just about blew my cap off. I knew she had another barrel left so I hit the dirt faster than Rizzuto sliding into second base. It was lucky I did. Bang she went again. The bird survived, too. That was her last hunting experience as far as I was concerned.

A dashing young former Yale quarterback and man-about-town, named Jack DeSaulles married a South American beauty. This was publicized as a great romance, but as often happens, they soon quarreled and were divorced. On their honeymoon he had given her a revolver and taught her how to shoot to protect herself during his absences. She was an apt pupil for she killed him one night when he came to return their child after a visit to him. She was acquitted and gave a big party to her lawyers, the district attorney and newspapermen who covered the trial to celebrate.

When I was at Camp Dix during the first World War we had a cottage at a place called Brown's Mills, a rather lonely spot in the pines, and my wife said one day,

"Why don't you get me a pistol and teach me how to shoot?"

I looked at her suspiciously and replied,

"I may get killed in the war anyway, but no revolver for you. Look what happened to Jack De Saulles."

County Treasurer Files Quarterly Report

The Allegany county treasurer's report for the quarter ending September 30 has been submitted to the Allegany County Board of Commissioners showing a bank balance as of September 30 of $1,785,061.73. Among the receipts listed is $12,000 interest on U. S. Treasury notes.

The report was prepared by Mrs. Johanna N. Sills, acting treasurer during the illness of Frederick C. Dreyer. Mr. Dreyer died before the report could be compiled. James W. Bishop is now the county treasurer and he will compile the next report.

Among receipts listed are $59,520.95 from state income taxes; $36,843.05 from motor vehicle and gasoline tax; $37,453.75 from auto taxes, and the $12,000 interest on U. S. Treasury notes. The treasury notes amounted to $400,000 and were purchased from school bond issues sold in 1948. The sum of $400,000 has since been turned over to the Board of Education.

The cash balance on hand on June 30, 1951 was $356,442.28 and added to various receipts listed the total was $3,202,064.61. This included well over a million and one half in taxes.

Disbursements listed the sum of $110,839.63 for highways (most of this was for three federal aid road projects), $407,092.30 for public schools, $46,251.15 for hospitals, $79,434.02 for public welfare, $11,458.54 for correctional institutions (jails and training institutions), and $15,675 for volunteer fire companies in the county.

Conservation Award To Be Given In State

The Maryland Conservation Federation said yesterday the names of 31 men now have been submitted for the state-wide award it plans to give at Thanksgiving time of outstanding achievement in conservation.

Anyone can make nominations, the Federation pointed out, emphasizing that women and youngsters also are eligible.

A silver medallion is to be presented to the individual who makes the most conspicuous contribution this year to soil, water, seafood, or wildlife resources.

400 Notre Dame Students To Go To Mass Here

A special train carrying 400 Notre Dame students to the Notre Dame-Navy football game will stop in Cumberland between 7 and 8 o'clock Thursday morning to enable the undergraduates to attend a special mass at St. Patrick's Catholic Church.

Thursday is All Saints' Day, a holy day of obligation for Catholics, and the Rev. Father Charles M. Carey, CSC, prefect of students and vice president of Notre Dame, has requested permission for the students to attend mass at St. Patrick's that morning. The special train will be side-tracked here at least an hour.

Very Rev. J. Lawrence Kilkenny, rural dean of Western Maryland and pastor of St. Patrick's, stated Saturday he has advised Father Carey that the local church will arrange to accommodate the students.

The Notre Dame football team will leave South Bend, Ind., by plane Friday and fly to Baltimore for the game against Navy on Saturday. Headquarters for the team in Baltimore will be the Emerson Hotel, according to the South Bend Tribune.

The University Band will also travel East and participate in the Saturday festivities.

Petersburg PTA Plans Carnival Wednesday

PETERSBURG, W. Va. — The Petersburg PTA will sponsor a carnival Wednesday evening.

A mummers parade will be organized at the Grade School at 6:30 and prizes will be given for the best couple or group, the most original, the prettiest and the ugliest with first and second prize for each class.

After the parade, which returns to the Grade School gymnasium for judging, there will be a carnival in the gym. Some of the events planned are cake walks, fish pond, auction sale of cakes and other foods, a presentation of turkeys and a door prize and several other events.

Fuller To Attend Md.-Missouri Game

Former City Commissioner Clifton E. Fuller, 624 Elm street, will be the guest of Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland at the Maryland - Missouri football game November 3 in Byrd Stadium, College Park. He will occupy a seat in President Byrd's box.

This year's eleven is the 60th football team at Maryland since Fuller was quarterback on the first team ever to represent the school, back in 1892.

Frown lines are a giveaway that petty irritations get the best of you. Conquer them this way!

SECRETS OF CHARM

By JOHN ROBERT POWERS

A serene brow is a mark of beauty always found among the charms of a gallant lady. Since it can only be attained through poise and self-control, no wonder it has such powerful attraction!

Real care and tremendous responsibility seldom mar the brow. Instead, the furrows are made by little irritations and puzzlements. When the muscles in the area of the eyebrows are allowed to display annoyance, petulance, impatience so frequently that they "freeze" in their active position, the brow becomes permanently marred — and makes us question its owner's ability, likeability, and stability.

Alerted For Frowns

Of course, wrinkling the brow is usually an unconscious act. But to avoid giving the wrong impression of your nature, it's worth a little conscious consideration to control what goes on between your eyebrows and above the bridge of your nose.

There is an aid to training which you can buy or make yourself that has been proved most effective. It's a plaster to place over your frown lines while they are pulled taut. Its virtue lies not in any therapeutic value but in the reminder, the gentle tug you will feel, everytime that you forget and permit yourself to frown. Wear the plaster whenever you expect to be alone for a while.

Softening established frown lines is a little more difficult than breaking the frown habit. Short of face lifting, frown lines cannot be eradicated entirely. But they can be made much less apparent, if you systematically massage them with a rich cream or oil.

"Wipe" Wrinkles Away

Every day or night apply your oil to your brow and with your finger pads "wipe" the lines away. For the vertical furrows between the eyebrows, use both hands, massaging from the center outward. For the horizontal lines across the brow, (still using both hands) begin at the top of the bridge of the nose and move upward to the hairline. Then, move your fingers a fraction of an inch apart and repeat the stroke. Continue until your fingers reach the temples on opposite sides.

Even one frown during the day will undo much of the good gained in any single treatment. If the patience you must exercise to show results seems irksome, just remember that impatience started the whole trouble!

Tomorrow: Ankle and foot appeal.

Speeding Motorists In City Will Be Checked By Radar

Cumberland's streets will soon be radar controlled.

This was revealed to members of the traffic bureau and others at a meeting called by John J. Long, commissioner of police and fire, Saturday in the City Hall.

Long announced the arrival of the most important part of the Electro Matic Speedmeter, a device that records the speed of a moving vehicle. The rest of the control setup is scheduled to arrive this week.

After the device is received, the Police Department will conduct an educational program on its use on various streets in the city where speeding has been a problem.

Long announced that three officers, one for each shift, have been selected to man the speedmeter.

Control Officers Named

Handling it on the first platoon, during the day shift will be Officer J. W. Brown. The second platoon, which works from 5 p.m. to 1 a.m. will have officer Richard E. Lashley; while on the third platoon, 1 a.m. to 9 a.m. will be Officer Charles E. Cubbage.

The commissioner said these men will be assisted by Cpl. Samuel Conrad, of the LaVale Barracks of Maryland State Police, who has had considerable experience with similar devices used by the State Police.

A team of two officers and two radio cars will be used in the first phase of the educational program.

Trial Period Explained

Long said the license number of a speeding car will be relayed from one cruiser to another located on the same street. The driver of the car will be stopped and given a safety talk together with information concerning the speedmeter. Large signs will designate the controlled street, he said.

During the second phase of the educational program, the license numbers of violators will be taken and the drivers given a written warning.

Long said after the enforcement date is set, violators apprehended by this device will be prosecuted just as speeders are now. The tape recording will be used as evidence, he said.

Also attending the orientation meeting on the use of the speedmeter yesterday were J. Walter Byer, president of the Western Maryland Motor Club; Lynn Walker, state inspector for the Maryland State Industrial Accident Commission, who is also an officer in the Western Maryland Safety Council, and Lt J. J. Johnston, head of the traffic bureau of the police department.

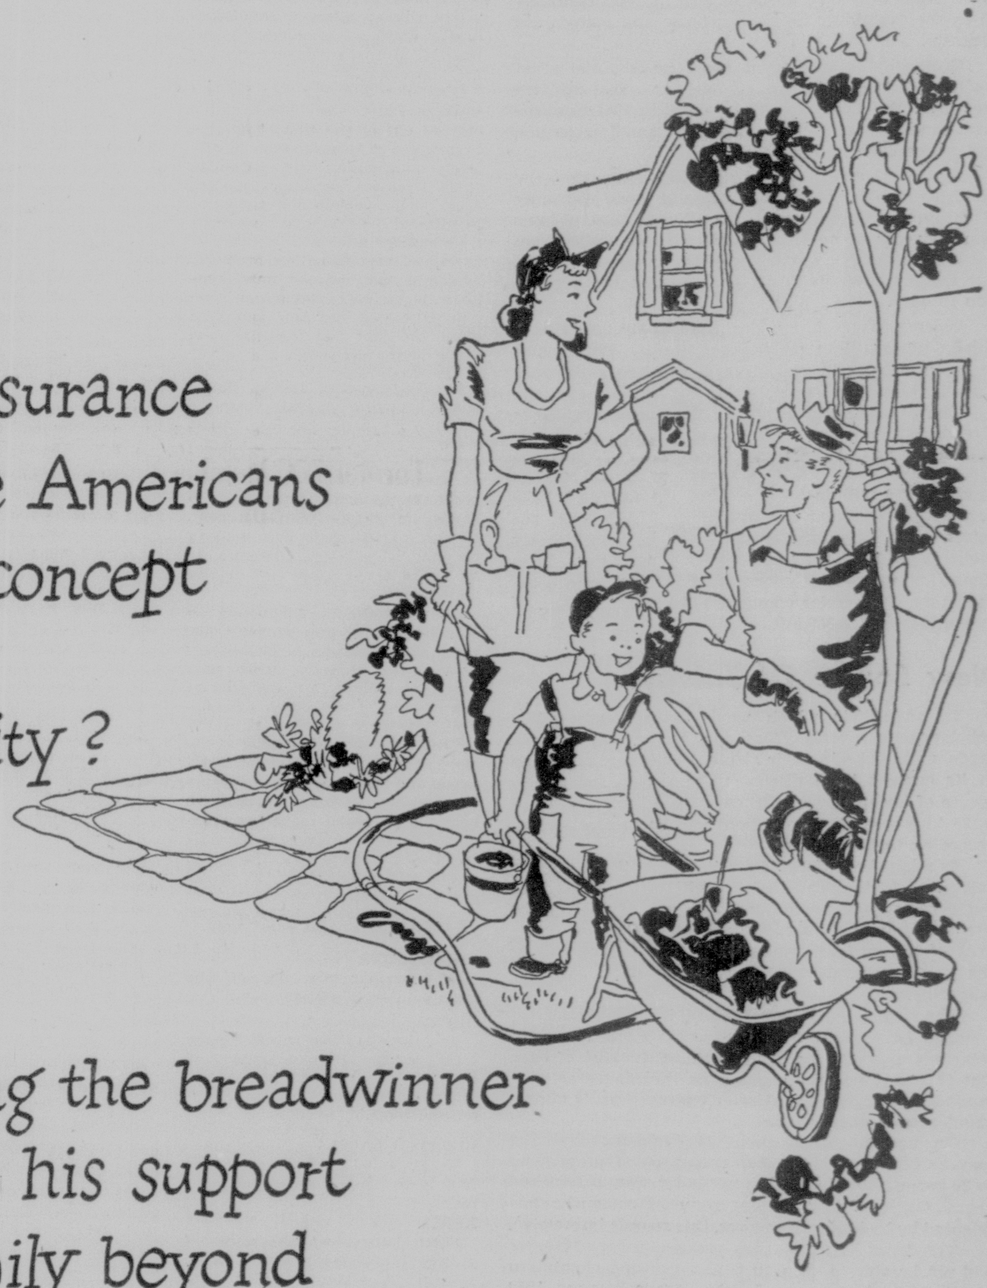
How has Life Insurance helped give Americans a broader concept of family responsibility?



By enabling the breadwinner to extend his support of the family beyond his lifetime

In millions of American homes today, the father is using life insurance to provide a regular income for his family beyond his lifetime.

The old concept of the breadwinner's responsibility to provide for his family for "as long as he shall live" is thus being broadened to "as long as they shall live" or at least for as long as they may need his support.

This broader concept is important both to America's families and to the economic life of the country which draws its strength from them. Its development has been aided by life insurance which is being used today to help replace the earnings of the breadwinners not only upon death but also upon retirement.

America's 83 million policyholders, through life insurance, are making America a better place to work in and to live in. They are providing for the future of their families and themselves. Their life insurance dollars are invested all over the country. And their healthy habit of thrift is one of the nation's strongest bulwarks against inflation.

Chronic Illness Economy

The economic aspects of prolonged or chronic illness will be discussed at a forum sponsored by the Research Council for Economic Security in Chicago on Tuesday. The principal speaker will be Senator Douglas (D., Ill.), one of 37 Democratic senators who voted for federal aid to the needy disabled in 1950 when the bill to expand the Social Security program was up for Senate consideration.

Aid to the needy who are permanently and totally disabled was rejected in the Senate by a 41 to 42 vote. The provision was restored to the bill, however, in conference, and was accepted by both Senate and House on final passage.

The House bill, as passed in 1949, had also provided for payment of annuities to persons covered by Social Security insurance who became totally and permanently disabled. These annuities were to be identical with those paid workers who retire at 65. Even this was somewhat less than the administration had asked for: a system of insurance against temporary as well as permanent disability.

The administration is expected to press for insurance or further aid for the ill or disabled at the next session of Congress which convenes in January. But whether the administration will be content merely to put its position on record or will exert pressure to have these measures adopted depends largely on other items in the federal budget.

Federal Security Administrator Ewing announced in June, 1951, that Congress would be asked to amend the Social Security Act to provide hospital benefits up to 60 days a year for insured persons over 65, their widows and dependents. But bills to authorize that program had not reached Congress by adjournment.

The new revenue act does allow taxpayers over 65 to deduct the full costs of medical care up to $2,500 each for the taxpayer, his wife, and each dependent. Reluctance of the administration to press for further aid to the chronically ill and the disabled is attributed to the boost in federal spending and in taxes demanded by the expanding national defense and foreign aid program.

Ordinarily, in an election year, the administration could be expected to go all-out for social welfare measures. But Congress will be asked in 1951 to authorize even greater spending for arms and foreign aid, and hence even higher taxes.

Statistical records and projections show that the problems of older people will demand more and more attention as the years pass. By the year 2000, persons over 45 years of age are expected to comprise from one third to perhaps nearly half the population. That age group represented only one-sixth of the population in 1900.

Older workers lose more time from disability—chiefly illness—than do younger adults. This is not so much because they are sick more often as because their illnesses last longer.

The new program of aid to the needy disabled is already catching up in volume with aid to the needy blind. Thus far this year federal and state governments have spent about $33 million on aid to the disabled, $36 million for the blind. In August 111,329 persons received aid for disability; 97,345 blind received aid. Disability costs would be considerably higher were it not for veterans' compensation. Pensions (for non-service connected disability) and compensation (for service connected disability) in August amounted to $128,880,585.

New Source Of Energy

In an article which would have sounded like gobbledygook several years ago, but which modern readers will take in their stride, Nucleonics magazine in its current issue discusses the search for a new source of cheap energy. Unless such a source is found in 25 to 50 years, the old globe will be in dire straits, according to the article.

As might be deduced from its name, the magazine subscribes to the school of thought which holds that nuclear energy will come to the rescue. It pooh-poohs the recent prediction of Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, that solar energy will be the new source. It will be no such thing, says the magazine.

The magazine points out, and it is no doubt correct—unless Dr. Conant is, that is—that overall costs of solar energy would be 10 to 50 times the cost of coal. But this may be only a guess, as the magazine contends less is known about solar energy than is known about atomic energy today.

No nuclear power plant is operating, but the magazine is hopeful nuclear energy could provide up to 20 per cent of the world's needs for several hundred years. Contrasted to the one per cent currently contributed by hydroelectric power, this sounds impressive.

The point is made that present energy reserves will not be able to keep up with a growing population and industrial economy. In the decade between 1940 and 1950, the United States used four billion billion heat units of energy. In the next 50 years 100 billion billion heat units of nuclear energy might be available at a favorable price, according to Nucleonics, which thus sets a formidable mark for the solar energy adherents to shoot at.

Corruption Compounded

The stories which a House subcommittee is now hearing from agents of the Department of Internal Revenue constitute just one more illustration of the corruption which the administration has tolerated and which, presumably, would still be going on except for the diligence of a few members of Congress.

Bribery, gifts to agents for outside services, pigeonholing of tax delinquencies in special cases—all these things and many more are being uncovered.

Here on the administration's very doorstep is a tax loophole which it could have closed without congressional action. All that was necessary was for the White House to order a complete investigation of the activities of those federal officials who were generally known to be defrauding the government.

Instead of acting on his own account, the President waited for committees of Congress to undertake the task. Even worse, he not infrequently went out of his way to defend men admittedly guilty of shady practices.

Highest taxes in the nation's history create a situation in which many taxpayers, squirming this way and that, fall easy prey to grafting politicians. Neither the opportunity for graft nor the temptation to succumb to it were present to the current extent before income taxes—which could be imposed only by changing the Constitution—were enacted.

After all that is now being revealed and promises to be further revealed, morality in government is certain to be an issue in the coming Presidential campaign.

How To Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Fatigue And Weakness

Undue fatigability and lack of energy are not synonymous but refer to weakness and that tired sensation that comes from not feeling well. It is doubtful whether a day passes in the life of a busy physician when he is not consulted by a dozen patients who are bothered along this line. The modern medico takes the complaint seriously in contrast to the physicians at the turn of the century who ordered a tonic and let it go at that.

The individual who encounters fatigue for no obvious reason is likely to be emotionally upset. Instead of spending his energy in productive pursuits he is tiring himself out with worries, fears, hates, and dissatisfactions. These unhealthy attitudes sap his strength and lassitude is the natural consequences. Unless corrected, the sufferer may develop a neurosis. In this respect, lack of energy is a distress signal from a body that is laboring under unwelcome stress.

A physical ailment is suspected, however, when weakness is associater with other troublesome complaints such as fever, chills, weight loss, pain, cough, or shortness of breath. In some instances an obscure chronic infection is responsible. There are many possibilities in this category and the most likely are tuberculosis, rheumatic fever, kidney trouble, parsites, and brucellosis. Anemia also has been blamed but we now know that the blood count must be definitely abnormal before this symptom arises. Pallor usually coexists and numbness and tingling in the arms and legs are not uncommon.

Glandular disorders also produce weakness and the manifestation may be one of the first signs of a liver disorder. It also occurs in diabetes, alcoholism, and poisoning from bromides, barbiturates, and drugs such as opium and morphine. Nutritional deficiencies resulting from lopsided diets or intestinal disturbances also bring on lassitude. Tiredness may be the only complaint in the early stages of a vitamin deficiency and now and then offers the clew that the individual is not eating properly.

The fatigue that follows illness is well known. It generally clears up within a few weeks but may persist a month or two. Some of the worst cases follow influenza and other virus diseases. With exertion, the heart pounds and the person is so listless he prefers to take it easy. No one gains strength by staying in bed and it is better, therefore, to try to be active within reasonable limits.

Recurrent attacks of weakness are described as seizures of faintness, weak spells, dizziness, or momentary decrease in alertness. They may stem from epilepsy, a disturbance in the rhythm of the heart, nervousness, low blood pressure, or a decrease in the amount of sugar in the blood. The attacks are of brief duration and many are more terrifying than serious. Tests are available to help the physician make the diagnosis and such procedures are recommended because half the battle is won when the mystery as to the cause is solved.

TOMORROW: Girl Scout week.

COLD SORES

B. W. writes: Is a cold sore the same as a fever blister?

REPLY

Yes, there are two names for the same lesions. Herpus simplex is another term. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on cold sores.

BLOATED FACE

W. E. writes: What causes the face to be bloated looking on arising?

REPLY

When lying down the effect of gravity is not as great as when standing. As a result, fluid is more likely to accumulate in the tissues, especially the delicate areas around the eyes.

WEAK BACK

M. L. writes: Is a worn out back another name for osteoarthritis?

REPLY

Yes, as osteoarthritis of the spine is one of the causes. Muscular strain is another and some individuals, even refer to slipped disk as a worn out back.

CHEST PAIN IN DRINKER

C. D. writes: A 55 year old friend of mine has terrific chest pain after eating or walking. He drinks to excess. Do you think he would be helped by giving up liquor?

REPLY

Yes, but more must be done if chest pain represents heart trouble. Heavy drinkers also develop neuritis and heartburn. The man in question should be examined to find the cause of his symptoms.

SORE NECK GLANDS

J. W. writes: What causes the glands of the neck to feel sore?

REPLY

Infection is the most common cause. This usually stems from an inflamed throat or ear or an abcessed tooth.

SWIMMING AND BALDNESS

J. F. writes: Will swimming every day cause the hair to drop out?

REPLY

No, despite the number of baldies you see at the beach. Water has a drying effect, which may encourage dandruff in those with a dry scalp. This does not mean that they will become bald.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Vacation-Minded Congressmen Find "Business" In Faraway Places; South America More Popular; Not One Congressman Has Asked To Go To Korea

WASHINGTON.—With Congress taking the rest of the year off, vacation-minded congressmen have suddenly discovered "official business" in South America, the Pacific islands, the Mediterranean and other faraway places.

With winter approaching, the greatest congressional interest seems to be in South America, as compared with Alaska in the summer. More than two dozen congressmen have signed up for "surveys" of sunny South America in November and December. However, other tours are also planned through Europe, the Middle East and around the world.

While some of these trips are pure junkets, this columnist is of the opinion that some make worthwhile additions to a congressman's store of knowledge at a time when the American defense line extends from Korea to the Rhine. However, since the taxpayer pays for the air travel, the public is entitled to know the travel program and judge for itself. Here are the chief itineraries:

First to light out for a foreign vacation were Congressmen Monroe Redden, North Carolina Democrat, and Fred Crawford, Michigan Republican. They represent the House Interior Committee, chiefly concerned with domestic matters. However, the congressmen explained solemnly to the Air Force that they had to inspect the Pacific territories entrusted to us under the peace treaty and they then headed for the Pacific by way of Paris, Geneva, Cairo and Bangkok. This is quite a long way round. Crawford left word he hoped to be back in time to make another trip to the Virgin Islands in December.

Another expedition to the Pacific "trust" territories is scheduled in November by Congressmen Ben Jensen of Iowa, Carl Andersen of Minnesota, Lowell Stockman of Oregon, George Schwabe of Oklahoma and William Van Pelt of Wisconsin, all Republicans, of the House Appropriations Committee.

Popular Latinos

The first junket to South America has been scheduled November 7 by Congressman Abraham Multer, New York Democrat, who is lining up a 45-day tour for House Banking Committee members. Presumably, they will take a long-distance view of U. S. banking problems, as seen from South America.

House Commerce Chairman Robert Crosser of Ohio has also made reservations with the Air Force for 18 of his committee members to make a 30-day tour of South America, November 10 to December 10. They will be followed four days later by a delegation from the House Foreign Affairs Committee, headed by Chairman James Richards of South Carolina. South America is very popular.

Those who have signed up for this South American trip are Congressman Tom Morgan of Pennsylvania, Tom Gordon of Illinois and Omar Burleson of Texas, Democrats, with Robert Chiperfield of Illinois and Don Jackson of California, Republicans.

Another House Foreign Affairs group will leave for Europe at the same time. They will include Representatives Clement Zablocki of Wisconsin, A. S. Carnahan of Missouri and Edna Kelly of Brooklyn, N. Y., Democrats, and Jacob Javits of New York, Republican.

Around The World

Congressman Porter Hardy, Jr., Virginia Democrat, has scheduled a trip to Europe for the House Armed Services Committee November 7. A joint Senate-House group is also planning to tour Europe, North Africa and the Middle East, beginning November 6. This group includes Senators Theodore Green of Rhode Island, Brien McMahon of Connecticut, William Benton of Connecticut and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, Democrats; and Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin and Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa, Republicans. Most of the above are members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, so have a legitimate reason for taking the trip.

With them will also go Congressmen Gene Cox of Georgia, Howard Smith of Virginia, Frazier Reams of Ohio and Donald O'Toole of New York, Democrats; and Walter Judd of Minnesota, Harris Ellsworth of Oregon and Kenneth Keating of New York, Republicans.

Meanwhile, another congressional delegation has already taken off for a leisurely, two-month, round-the-world tour. They include Congressmen Herbert Bonner of North Carolina, Harold Donohue of Massachusetts, Sidney Fine of New York, John Shelley of California and William Lantaff of Florida, Democrats; together with Charles Brownson of Indiana, Thomas Curtis of Missouri, Cecil Harden of Indiana, Walt Horan of Washington and George Meader of Michigan. Their "official trip" is sponsored by the House Expenditures Committee which has no round-the-world business, but is supposed to keep an eye on federal expenses.

It is interesting to note that not a single congressman has asked to go to Korea, where the weather is growing bitter cold and accommodations aren't so comfortable.

Sparkman Vs. Lawyer

Sen. John Sparkman was mystified by a strange visit from an emissary of Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer just before the senator returned to Alabama.

The emissary, Assistant Secretary Thomas W. S. Davis, said, almost apologetically, "Secretary Sawyer is quite upset about your speech on the distribution of war contracts."

"What was the matter?" Sparkman asked.

"Well," Davis replied, "you said that 40 per cent of the war contracts are held by 10 companies, and the Secretary of Commerce feels you gave an erroneous impression. After all, much of the work on the prime contract is sublet. The Bendix Company, for example, has benefited widely from sub-contracts, and it is not one of the first 10."

Sparkman said this was most interesting, and that he would like the figures on Bendix.

Davis took out the list of defense contracts, then seemed even more embarrassed. For the figures revealed that Bendix was 15th in the list of prime contracts, receiving $265,000,000 worth.

NOTE — In a recent talk at Columbus, O., not cleared at the White House, Secretary Sawyer lambasted the federal budget as "wild and extravagant" and called the small plants corporation, just approved by Congress to help small business, as "ridiculous." As a result, rumors are current around Pennsylvania Avenue that Sawyer is anxious to exit from Washington.

Gravity Investments

By ROGER W. BABSON

GRAVITY VILLAGE, NEW BOSTON, N. H., Oct. 28—Readers know that I have always been interested in the force of gravity and its possibility for free power from which everyone could greatly benefit. Letters come to me asking if there are now any ways for investors to benefit from gravity. Yes, there are three.

Electric Power Developments

Every waterfall produces power due to gravity, plus, of course, the heat of the sun which takes the water from the oceans into the clouds. The clouds eventually turn into rain and supply the water which flows over these falls. In this connection, it must be realized that this gravity pull is the same in any part of the United States as it is at Niagara Falls. If any reader has never visited Niagara, he surely should do so. At that time he should realize that only a small portion of the power is now being used. The part of the waterfall which is being used cannot be seen; while the water going over the falls is "wasted," except for scenic beauty.

There are thousands of water powers now being used every day. Most of these are operating mills of various kinds; but they are gradually being converted to generate electricity which power can easily be transported. I, however, consider the Niagara Mohawk Power Company the prime electric power gravity development. This is the company which taps Niagara Falls and, supplemented by other falls and steam plants, supplies electric power to most of New York State, from Buffalo down to New York City. The stocks of this Company are listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The 3.90 per cent preferred pays $3.90 and sells at 96, thus yielding 4 per cent. The common pays $1.40 and sells at 25, thus yielding nearly 6 per cent. One cannot get rich quickly by buying these stocks, but if you put them away in your safety deposit box, they should gradually become more valuable and give you good dividends each year; all from gravity.

Railroad Companies

I certainly am not now bullish on most railroad stocks. They are handicapped by severe competition from trucks, automobiles and airplanes; their expenses are constantly increasing from wage demands and the cost of coal, oil, and equipment; while their rates are determined by political commissions, leaving little profit for stockholders. Transcontinental roads may do well for some time; also certain southwestern roads; but my favorites are the three gravity roads. These are the Virginia Railway, Norfolk & Western, and Chesapeake & Ohio. All of these let most of their heavy traffic coast downhill and have mostly only empty cars to pull uphill again!

I believe that the stocks of all three roads are safe investments; but I will quote only the stocks of the Virginian Railway which runs from the coal fields of West Virginia to Norfolk. (More details can freely be obtained from the company at 44 Wall Street, New York City.) The stocks are listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The Virginian Railway preferred pays $1.50 and sells for 28, while the common now pays $2.50 and sells for 33, thus yielding nearly 8 per cent.

Waterworks Securities

The most economically operated public utilities are gravity waterworks which supply householders with water. Why? The answer is that gravity does most of the work for them by causing the water inexpensively to run downhill through the pipes and up to your bathrooms without aid of costly power. In most water systems steam or electric power is needed first to pump the water up into a standpipe or reservoir. But, gravity systems have a natural reservoir, higher than any house in the city, and gravity performs all the work. If the water system in your community is operated by a private company, and the bonds or stocks are available, ascertain to what extent it is being operated by gravity. Based upon your findings, consider these securities as an investment.

Enthusiastic inventors who think they can use gravity for "perpetual motion" machines, should read "Wanted: War Inventions" in Readers Digest of October. The article entitled "Should You Buy Shares in America?" is good for everyone to read.

Matter Of Fact

By JOSEPH ALSOP

The Professionals Talk

WASHINGTON

The professional politicians in the Democratic party are just about as nervous, nowadays, as so many cats on hot bricks. The members of the real inner circle—the fathers of the party as it were—have thought for some time that they knew what was going to happen, and have been pleased with what they thought they knew.

In brief, they thought they knew that at some suitable moment before the new year, Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson would lay down his heavy burden, making a place at the State Department for Chief Justice Fred Vinson. This, they expected, would in turn be only the preliminary for the President to lay down his burden, passing the Democratic nomination to his old friend, the Chief Justice—Secretary of State.

This particular move in the game of political musical chairs has been discussed often enough before. It can now be stated, however, that some of those who have discussed it were not indulging in mere empty speculation.

Six months or so ago in fact, the President actually, signified his intention not to seek a third term, and declared his preference for the Chief Justice as his successor. He also indicated his intention to prepare the Chief Justice for the race by allowing him, so to speak, to use the State Department as a judicial disrobing room, where he could conveniently make the transition from the high formality of the supreme bench to the undress of rough and tumble politics.

Insiders Nervous

Because a group of Democratic insiders close to the President and the Chief Justice were aware that these signs and significations had been given, they believed that the Democratic party's future was fairly cut and dried. They thought the Chief Justice could beat any Republican candidate but Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. They thought he would make a good President. They were generally pleased with the prospect, as they understood it.

They are nervous now, for a very simple reason. The Chief Justice has also signified to his old political friends, that he will not leap from the supreme bench straight into party politics. Some sort of a disrobing room is essential for him. The State Department appears to be the only one available. For it is inconceivable that the President will replace Robert A. Lovett at the Defense Department, where the new Secretary is so brilliantly tackling his gigantic task; and it is equally inconceivably that the Chief Justice will leave the court to go back to the Treasury, where he was before his elevation.

Thus the Acheson-Vinson switch is regarded as being the inescapable prelude to the Truman-Vinson switch. And those who have been looking to see the Chief Justice as the Democratic candidate in 1952 are now beginning to fear that the whole project will die aborning, because there is nothing to suggest that the Acheson-Vinson switch is going to be made.

At least, if the Chief Justice is to replace the Secretary of State before the new year as anticipated, there are only two months left to arrange the matter. And the President, who indicated his intentions on this point a good many months ago, has more recently been notably silent about them.

More Uncertainties

Such is the background. Perhaps the professionals, in considering this background, have paid too little attention to the foreground, and especially to the peculiar relationship between the President and Dean Acheson. Those close to Acheson still appear to be convinced that he has no intention of leaving his office. Yet they also say that the failure of the Senate to confirm his friend, Philip Jessup, has been the worst blow that Acheson has received to date. And there is no doubt at all that if a truce is arranged in Korea, and Acheson comes back from his present journey to Paris and Rome in a position to claim successes abroad, a new situation will exist in which Acheson can retire gracefully, not "under fire."

This in turn may influence the President, who has been so determined to stand by Acheson to the last. In short, you pay your money and you take your choice, as to the best bet about this mysterious pattern, whose development is so unpredictable.

Perhaps one last set of factors should also be considered by the eager bettors. Within the White House itself, while Mrs. Truman continues to urge the President not to run again, the professional inhabitants of the executive woodwork are urging the President to take the opposite course. They do this naturally, because their livelihoods and their self-importances depend upon Truman. But here again, there is a balance of forces, between the cronies and the President's wife, so that here also there is uncertainty.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Does Nobody Care?

There have always been crooked men, wicked men, malicious men — and women, too — but that is no reason why the citizens of such a country as ours should condone corruption, subversion, betrayal. Nor should we permit ourselves to be governed by the gutter by default.

Day after day, reports appear of official misconduct, Internal Revenue official's dishonesty, of RFC corruption, of the secretary to the Vice President being involved in using influence, of police being associated with bookmakers — and what has been disclosed amounts to hardly anything. The story has not been told by half.

And there is more than that. Take these strikes — dockworkers' strikes, milk strikes, strikes in munition plants, strikes that in the present state of our country make no sense. Those 90,000 casualties in Korea did not strike.

There seems to be no use raising that argument. Strikers say that they are veterans too. Some say that they have sons in Korea. But still they strike. They tie up supplies to their own sons and to their neighbors' sons. And what they quarrel about ought to be, among civilized persons, adjustable not only in the private interests of individuals but in the national welfare. These men are not thinking clearly ;most of them are misled by extraordinarily selfish so-called leaders who project themselves into every troubled situation. For instance, the very serious New York dockers' strike began as part of a permanent feud between a man called Ryan and a man called Sampson, neither important to the needs of America.

There can be no reason why Harry Bridges should play any part in the affairs of this country. He is not one of us. He does not belong here. He has been ordered deported and somehow he and his lawyers and politicians connive to keep him in the United States. The Department of Justice has been delaying since August, 1950, to bring his case on appeal before the courts, they, not he, applying for the delays. Who is interested in keeping this man, who has done this country no good since some misery brought him to our shores, in this country?

The association of Harry Bridges with John L. Lewis, and the Communists, particularly in the automobile, electrical and dockworkers' industries, cannot be constructive for America in times like these. Since 1936, they have kept the relations between labor and management disturbed with such constancy that it is impossible not to wonder why they do it. The motive must be other than personal ambition; it must be deeper than that and more perilous.

It is difficult to understand why John L. Lewis, who hates Communists, can associate with them from time to time. He has never permitted Communists in the United Mine Workers but he brought them into the CIO and gave them high office. He knew that such men as Lee Pressman and Len de Caux were left-wingers. He knew that 11 of his CIO unions were being organized under the control of Communists. Yet he hated Communists. How is this to be explained?

When Lewis temporarily broke with the Communists, they were strong enough to have him thrown out of the CIO. Yet, he is now back at the old stand, making deals with them designed to weaken the position of Walter Reuther in the United Auto Workers, so that Communists, associated now with Lewis, can gain control of that crucial union and industry.

No one can accuse John L. Lewis of being a Communist. But who can explain his conduct?

Obviously, it is impossible to depend on our politicians. They deal not with fundamental principles or with the issues in a situation. They count the votes. They measure the strength of pressure groups. They fear the violence of organized elements who answer all questions with picket lines, legal or illegal, with threats and intimidations. The police are generally instructed to ignore unlawful picketing lest they offend prospective voters. Party politics are paramount.

It simply cannot continue to go on that way without the citizens sooner or later taking matters in their own hands as they have done before in this country. And that is no solution, for it can only mean more disorders, more confusion, more injustice and hatred.

Corruption breeds not only corruption but lawlessness. When those at the top of government are moral cowards, the worst elements in the population gain control. They risk greatly because they recognize the smallness of heart. The selfishness of those at the helm of government.

This country needs a moral revolution — and soon.

Keyser-McCoole Bridge Nearly Ready For Use

Travel Over Span Likely This Week

KEYSER, W. Va. — The Keyser-McCoole Bridge spanning the Potomac River, between the two communities, will be completed and ready for travel probably the end of the week.

It may even be completed before that time. There remains only the completion of the rails on either side of the structure on the Maryland or north end of the structure. The foreman in charge of the finishing work said this is a matter of only a few days. Then there is the painting of the metal rails in the uncompleted part and the under steel structure, and work on this is being done now.

The work is being done by P. N. Spanos & Company, Wheeling, a firm specializing in bridge structural steel painting. This work was begun on the Keyser end of the structure on Friday and is progressing well, and it is understood this can be completed before the end of the week.

This is one type of work that the "sidewalk superintendents" of Keyser and vicinity have not observed. The work is being done with little fanfare and the customary crowds that have gathered to watch other groups of workmen in the more than two years of operation, have not begun to realize that here is a job that has its interesting points, too.

Keyser and McCoole citizens say the bridge will never be completely finished until the state roads commissions of Maryland and West Virginia get together on a plan to provide lighting for the structure. As it is now, the bridge is exclusively for vehicle traffic, night and day, as few persons, if any, will face the dangers of walking over the long span in night hours, with dangers facing them that will not be present in the light hours of day.

Keyser Women Named To Office

KEYSER, W. Va.—Several local women were elected to district officers at the 41st bi-annual Rebekah District Convention held last week at Blaine at which Mrs. Edith Workman presided as District Deputy President.

Among those elected for the ensuing term were May Arnold, Blaine, vice-president; Lena Johnson, Parsons, secretary; Hazel Pyles, treasurer, Blaine, and the following appointive officers were named: Evelyn Shrader, Thomas, warden; Kathleen Harshman, Parsons, conductor; Stella Lazier, color bearer, Blackwater; Mira Cooper, Thomas, chaplain; Evelyn Hanlin, Elk Garden, inside guardian; Beulah Nester, Parsons, Musician.

The following local area persons were appointed to standing committees: Evelyn Shrader, Thomas; Esta Brae, Elk Garden, and Janette Fream, Davis, to resolution committee; June Parrish, Elk Garden; Curenia Rice, Keyser and Mamie Drury, Davis, to courtesy committee; Faye Edwards, Keyser, publicity committee.

Mt. Olive Lodge, Keyser, carried off attendance honors at the convention with Blaine being second.

Hampshire Countians Enlist For Navy Service

KEYSER, W. Va., Oct 28—Two Hampshire County youths recently enlisted in the Navy, according to Chief Teddy M. Beckham, local recruiter.

James Eugene Shingleton, 19, son of Eugene Shingleton, Romney, enlisted for four years as seaman recruit. He graduated from Romney High School. Charles Dailey Loar, 18, son of Floyd Lee Lear, Romney, and Mr. Mildred Pauline Lear, Cumberland, enlisted for four years as a seaman recruit. Both men are taking their basic training at Bainbridge, Md. Naval Training Center.

Chief Beckham announced that the date for closing the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps to applicants for 1952 classes, has been set as November 17. Young men who will graduate from high schools in 1952 may take advantage of this opportunity to become eligible for the college aptitude test which will be given December 8.

Piedmont WSCS Plans Pre-Christmas Bazaar

PIEDMONT, W. Va. — The pre-Christmas Bazaar of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Trinity Methodist Church of Piedmont will be held Thursday, November 8, beginning at 4 p. m.

Hand-made pillowcases, unusual aprons, children's clothes, handkerchiefs, home made candies, pies, cakes, flowers, art and miscellaneous items will be on sale. A turkey dinner will be served from 5 to 7 p. m. Music and Christmas Carols at 8 p. m.

Oldtown Personals

Mr. and Mrs. D. Hinkle and family of Fremont, Ohio, have returned home after visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Shawn, Oldtown, and Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Hinkle Green Spring, W. Va.

Cpl. and Mrs. George E. Carder and son, Gregory, Camp Kilmer, N. J. are visiting her mother, Mrs. Elsie Nield, Oldtown. Carder, who recently returned from Germany, has reenlisted in the Adjutant General's Corps for six years.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Grondine and son, Edmund, Jr., Washington, D. C., spent the weekend at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Miller.

MISS BETSY McCAIN

Frederick Girl Serving As Maryland Apple Queen

The Maryland Apple Queen who is joining in the observance this week of National Apple Week is Miss Betsy McCain, daughter of Russell H. McCain, of Frederick, chairman of the State Roads Commission.

Miss McCain, and apple queens from West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Virginia will visit Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to carry the apple message to prominent citizens of these cities.

Family In Industry

The Maryland queen also is a granddaughter of Dr. Joseph Apple, founder and its first president of Hood College in Frederick. Her family is prominently associated with the apple industry.

Miss McCain, who received her regal honors from the Maryland Horticultural Society, attended Northfield School for Girls in East Northfield, Mass., where she was graduated in 1947.

Later, she attended Hood College, taking part in athletics, serving as an officer of her class and the campus YWCA for several years.

Literary Editor

She was literary editor of the Hood yearbook, Touchstone, and was May Day chairman in 1950. In the same year she also held the honorary position as "White Blazer Girl" for her contribution toward the advancement of the college. She also was given the title "Prince Hood" in 1951 as the senior who best exemplified the Hood Spirit.

For the past five years Miss McCain has served as councilor at Camp Marlyn, Andover, N. H. She is currently the alumnae representative for the Class of 1951 and is employed by Hood College as an assistant field director.

Other queens who will journey with Miss McCain on the promotional tour are Miss Maxine Twigg, Romney, W. Va.; Miss Pat Alexander, daughter of Mrs. J. M. Alexander, Fairfield, Va., and Miss Carolyn Snyder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Snyder of Gardners, Pa., each representing her home state.

This program is being sponsored by the Appalachian Apple Service, a grower-sponsored promotional agency for apples produced in the four states. Growers in this four-state area are completing the harvest of a crop totaling some 24-million bushels, about one-fifth of the nation's apple crop.

Luke School Halloween Parade Slated Tuesday

LUKE — The Luke School will hold its annual Halloween parade and social Tuesday at the school.

The parade will leave the school at 6 p. m., marching to Fairview Street, to Pratt Street and back to Grant Street and to the school.

Following the parade there will be a social in the school annex. Prizes will be awarded by local merchants for the best witch, bride, groom, old man, old woman, ghost, character (male), character (female).

Barton Briefs

The annual masquerade dance was held at Barton Hose Co. 1 Armory Friday night and prizes were won by Miss Barbara Ann Mowbray of Lonaconing; Mrs. Hilda Roberts and Mrs. Merrill Seville of Barton; and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Inskeep of Westernport. There were several other awards made during the Grand March in which the masqueraders were contestants. Judges were Miss Maude Mowbray, Mrs. George Lauder and Paul Footen, of Barton High School faculty. The Halloween dance was sponsored by the Barton firemen.

In conjunction with Allegany County Safety Week this week, Barton Hose Co. 1 has painted the safety drive's code on the highways in that vicinity. David E. Kirk is head of the committee appointed by Henry Howell, president of the Barton Fire Company.

Barton Chapter No. 37, Order of Eastern Star, attended services at the Barton Methodist Church Sunday. Rev. Wendall Allen, pastor, delivered the sermon.

Halloween Dance Set

WESTERNPORT — A Halloween masquerade dance, sponsored by St. Peter's Alumni Association, will be held this evening at Jake's Place. Miss Myrtis Maybury, chairman, announces dancing will be from 9:30 to 12:30 a. m. with music by Edna Engle and Edward Stakem.

Art Exhibit Plans Complete

PIEDMONT, W. Va.—The Fine Arts committee of the Piedmont Woman's Club will be in charge of the program at the exhibit of painting which will be shown from 1 until 5:30 p. m. Thursday in the Library.

Mrs. Daniel Small, membership chairman, will register members and guests. Refreshments in keeping with the fall theme will be served at the conclusion of the program.

The Fine Arts committee includes Mrs. Harry Baker, music; Mrs. Joseph Gleeson, literature; Mrs. Harry Drane, poetry; Mrs. Dent Davis, crafts; Mrs. Bernard Maybury, arts. Mrs. Madaine Elliott is general chairman.

Visitors to the exhibit will be able to cast votes for the favorite paintings. The two winners will be announced at the Woman's Club meeting Thursday evening.

Midland Briefs And Personals

Mrs. Richard Hunt, who has been a surgical patient at Memorial Hospital in Cumberland, is now convalescing at home.

Walter Ross is seriously ill in Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, following a major operation.

Mr. and Mrs. William Retallick and Mr. and Mrs. William Morris of Aliquippa, Pa., visited Mr. and Mrs. Henry Eisentrout and Mrs. Martha Blair.

John Tighe is home from Miners Hospital, Frostburg, where he has been a medical patient.

Mrs. William George has returned to her home in Cumberland after spending five weeks visiting her mother, Mrs. Jane Russell, who is convalescing from an illness.

Mrs. Nettie Stevenson, Baltimore, who has been ill for the past two months, has returned to her home at the Homewood Apartments there. She formerly lived in Midland.

Turkey Dinner Marks Man's 83rd Birthday

WESTERNPORT—A turkey dinner was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Michael near Firm Rock on the occasion of his 83rd birthday.

The event also marked the birthday of his granddaughter, Mrs. Darius Green of Barton.

Dr. Pullen Visits At Frostburg

FROSTBURG — Dr. Thomas G. Pullen, state superintendent of schools, visited the campus of State Teachers College with James Reed, superintendent of school plants, and Ernest V. Baugh, an editor of the Baltimore Sun.

Dr. Pullen, Reed and Baugh were on a visit to Garrett County and on their return trip to Baltimore visited the campus here. They were entertained at a social hour by Miss Lillian C. Compton in the college dining room. Members of the faculty and student presidents of school organizations also attended.

Following, Dr. Pullen and friends remained to talk with the college students and laboratory school children.

Baugh, who was on his first visit to the college, inspected all college facilities, and a tour of the campus was made to determine the location of future buildings.

Dr. Pullen expressed gratification at the large enrollment, and the type of students enrolling at the college. He was also pleased with the program of the college and expressed his optimism for future development.

Frostburg Personals

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Are pretenses part of normal living?

Answer: Yes, especially the kind that really deceive no one. There are aspects of reality which it does no good to dwell on and which civilized people tacitly agree to ignore so as to make life pleasanter for everybody — above all, the feelings of annoyance or indifference which most of us have in certain moods. "Putting on an act" of friendliness when you "feel like biting someone's head off" is not really being insincere — it is saving others from the same sort of unpleasantness from which you prefer to have them save you. A world in which everybody always acted as he felt would be unbearable to live in.

Do brain changes make old people "difficult"?

Answer: No, says Drs. D. A. Boyd and F. J. Braceland in Medical Clinics of North America. What makes some old people cranky and hard to get on with is not mainly the organic changes taking place in their brains — all these really do is to slow down their thinking and make it hard for them to grasp new ideas. It is the sense of failing powers plus the feeling of not being wanted that creates the emotional insecurity which makes them irritable. Psychotherapy with aging people consists mainly in attempting to restore their sense of security and personal dignity — to make them feel "wanted" again.

Are our young folks pessimistic?

Answer: One might be tempted to think so by the novels turned out by some of our most gifted younger writers — James Jones and now, William Styron, for example. But perhaps the truth is that it is the morbidly unhappy members of each generation who are most apt to become writers. For creative writing is essentially a means of sublimating repressed feelings, and one of the strongest of these in neurotic young men and young women is self-pity. In telling a story of frustration and despair the author can say indirectly — and unconsciously: "See how terribly the cruel world has treated poor me!"

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

G D A A T E Y E N N P X W D ? E D G D A
A T E Y R G H W , X E V V E K G K I B E B Y -
S G D ? — H T G O W H B W G D W .

Coal Mine Operators Given Special Priority By NPA

WASHINGTON (AP)—The National Production Authority gave special priority help to coal miners and coke producers in obtaining materials for repair, maintenance and operation.

The new order also permits the country's 9,000 coal and coke producers to obtain materials for minor additions to plant and equipment without obtaining special allotments from NPA.

The agency said the priority action will help the industry expand the output of fuel for defense plants and essential civilian industries.

Coal mines and processing plants, coke plants and coal chemical and petroleum coke calcining operations are eligible for the automatic priority assistance. They need merely certify on their purchase orders for materials that the order is within the limits fixed by the new regulation.

Each producer may use this "self-rating" to obtain a quantity of materials based on monthly average purchases in the last nine months of 1950. The first three months were excluded because many mines were closed by strikes in the period.

For minor plant and equipment additions, each producer may (1) buy in any quarter materials not exceeding 10 per cent of his quarterly quota for maintenance and repaid materials or (2) spend $2,000 on capital additions, whichever is greater.

KEEPING UP WITH

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 28 (INS)—Jean Simmons gets herself the role of Pilate's wife on a long term contract with RKO. This is really a surprise since everyone thought Jean was going to join her husband, Stewart Granger, at MGM, but Howard Hughes signed her in an unexpected move. However, she will do "Young Bess" at MGM with Granger.

Jean will be built up as one of RKO's top stars. "Pilate's Wife" has been one of the most discussed roles of the year, and it's a great feather in the Simmons girl's cap to be able to land it. Even Jennifer Jones lost out.

I don't know just how long the contract is for, but I understand it's for a long time.

There is no grande passion in the feeling Montgomery Clift has for Elizabeth Taylor, despite reports. True, he took her to his pet Italian restaurant and to Birdland, the hep-cat heaven, but he thinks of Liz as a young sister.

More interesting than Clift's feeling for Liz is George Stevens' plans to star Monty in "The Dipper." It's a Stevens original and is highly dramatic. The hero (Clift) gets his foot caught in a railroad switch, and his girl, who is trying to free him, has to make up her mind whether to die with him or jump and save herself.

Dorothy Lamour has one of the most novel jobs in the business. C. B. De Mille has hired Dottie as super-deluxe public relations woman for advance promotion on "The Greatest Show On Earth."

Dottie will spend the entire month of February visiting the key cities coast to coast, promoting the opening of the picture which the public will see for the first time in March.

This all came about because of the fine compo job Dorothy did. The New England exhibitors wrote Frank Freeman a rave letter, and at the Movietime, USA dinner, Bill Grady, of MGM, paid her a tribute such as I've seldom heard any actress receive.

I feel very sentimental over the news that the beautiful daughter of the Edwin Knopfs, Mrs. Leon Cooper, is expecting a baby, because I was the first to announce that a daughter named Wendy had been born to Mildred and Eddie Knopf.

So, it only seems right that I should be the first to announce that Wendy is expecting a baby. She is married to the son of the Harry Coopers, and it's difficult to say whether Mildred and Eddie, or the Harry Coopers are the most excited.

If Margaret Truman can break a professional engagement she'll be with Robert Merrill at the opening of the Met. Merrill will be there and he has invited the President's daughter.

Barbara Hutton is due in the USA any day. She'll join her son, Lance, in Arizona. The boy is not well and must again spend the winter there.

Tom Neal's ex-wife, Vicki Lane, is wearing an engagement ring put on her finger by Fred Til'inghast, wealthy New Yorker. But Vicki denies the rumors they are married.

Frances Marion certainly has a charmed life. She had a head-on collision with a car which was hidden by a fire truck. She was in the hospital for several days but is now recuperating at home.

Ann Rutherford is not marrying Bill Dozier for the simple reason that she and David may have never untied the knot, and have no plans to do so now

The Movietime, USA dinner was a splendiferous success, and gave those of us who attended an idea of what such a tour means both to the public and to the theatre owners. It will be even bigger and better next year.

By JOHN CROSBY

The Righteousness Of A Reformed Sinner

Raymond Rubicam, one of the giants of the advertising rack—uh—business, founded Young & Rubicam, now one of the largest advertising agencies in the world, retired in 1948 and now basks in the warm sun of Arizona where apparently he has done a certain amount of brooding about the sins of his youth. At any rate, he recently wrote a letter to Sen. William Benton who read it on the Senate floor where it attracted absolutely no attention at all.

John Crosby

It's a forceful letter and, while most of the complaints in it have been made before, they are particularly pertinent and especially damning because they come from a man who did more than his share in committing the sins he now deplores. "Radio broadcasting," Mr. Rubicam wrote, "has come nowhere near serving the American people as well as it ought to have served them. I am convinced that a large part of the reason lies in the domination of radio by the advertiser. Since I am no longer in the advertising business these views will be called by many of my former associates, the newly acquired righteousness of a reformed sinner, but the fact remains that even when I was most active in advertising and in radio I held the same views and would have welcomed a reduction of the percentage of radio time available to advertisers and an enlargement of the public's opportunity to hear programs which have little worth for the advertiser but great worth for the public. . ."

• — • — •

"What I am opposed to," Mr. Rubicam continued, "is what amounts practically to a monopoly of radio and television by advertisers to the point where the public's freedom of choice in programs is more of a theory than a fact and to the point where public service of the two media is only a shadow of what it could be. . . Radio programming in the United States has been comparable to a school system in which everything stopped at the elementary grades . . . and which consequently had no colleges, universities or post-graduate schools to serve the rest of the population.

"In the field of print, people have a lot better chance of escaping the worst than they have in radio. There are printed publications specializing in almost every field of human interest, inquiry, thought, activity. Even those newspapers and magazines which typically take the low road to popularity often do more to serve minority interests than radio does.

"The infinite variety permitted by printed publication has helped bring men a long way in civilization. We, nevertheless, face an age in which a higher and higher percentage of what our minds take in will be taken in through radio and television. Their danger is that if mis-

"The Authority on Authorities"

SOME GUESSES GHASTLY

SOME of the discarding problems posed to the defenders when the declarer runs a long suit are ghastly. When the big suit is used early enough, before his opponents can read just what he holds or what he is trying for, it may be next to impossible to figure out the correct tosses. Sometimes, all that a poor defender can do is make the best guess he can, while knowing it is only a guess. And unless he is fortunate enough to guess just right, he hands the declarer one or more tricks, perhaps his contract.

What experts call a "pseudo squeeze" developed on this deal. It differs from a true squeeze to the extent that the victim fears he is really squeezed, but actually isn't. He is so much in the dark, however, that he has an unearthly job to figure out what discard will prove the best and which worst, when it comes to the last of a series of difficult choices.

Not liking to lead from his own honors, West chose the spade 9 for his lead and the K forced the A. East switched to the heart 9 in the hope of limiting club ruffs in the dummy. South won that with the A, scored the club A and ruffed the club 5 with the heart 4. Then he ran the rest of his hearts, putting the pressure on. East discarded his spade 8, club K and diamond 9, and then was in trouble. He had left the spade J-10, diamond A-10 and club 9. West tossed off one spade, then all clubs, retaining the diamond Q-J-7 and the club Q-10.

As the last heart was laid down, West followed his blue study by discarding the club 10. East then discarded the diamond 10. South then put East in with the diamond 2 to the A. With only clubs, East returned the 9 to the Q, and West couldn't help leading the diamond Q to the K, the spade Q then taking the final trick. If West had discarded a diamond on his last toss and retained two each in the minors, he could have beaten the contract. But, when he cut himself down to one club, his cause was hopeless.

New Boy Scout Executive Will Assume Duties

Robert E. Metger, 33 Frost Avenue, Frostburg, a veteran in area scouting circles, has been named the new field scout executive of Potomac Council, Boy Scouts of America.

The new field worker has had 15 years active participation with Boy Scouting. He became a Tenderfoot Scout in November, 1932, and before entering the armed forces at the outbreak of World War II, he was made an Eagle Scout. At that time he was assistant scoutmaster of Frostburg Troop No. 26, sponsored by Farrady Post, American Legion.

During World War II he served with the Corps of Engineers, seeing combat in the European and Pacific theatres. After the war he spent three years as a staff engineer with the Army of Occupation in Japan. His total Army service covers eight years, having been released from active duty in July, 1949.

Since that time, Metger has been engaged in surveying and engineering work through this section.

Effective November 1 Metger will take over his new duties working out of council headquarters in the County Building, Union Street. At present he is attending the 45-day scout executive training school at Mendham, N. J.

Since leaving the Army and returning to Boy Scout work he has served as scoutmaster of Troop No. 48, sponsored by St. John's Episcopal Church, Frostburg, and lately as district commissioner of Mountain District, which covers the Frostburg area.

ROBERT E. METGER

He was also an assistant scoutmaster of the National Jamboree troop which went to Valley Forge, Pa., summer before last from Potomac Council.

This summer he was a member of the staff at Camp Potomac, the council's new camp near Oldtown.

Smith said Metger's work will be with the South Branch, New Creek and Tri-Towns districts mainly, plus any other functional assignments.

Metger is married to the former Mary Virginia Walker and the couple has two children, Bobby, 4, and Carroll, 2.

Groves Breaks Ankle

By BOB CONSIDINE

LAS VEGAS, Nev., (INS) — The exact weight of the explosive heart of an a-bomb is never divulged, except by the likes of Dr. Klaus Fuchs. But the belief on the fringes of Operation Desert Rock is that it takes about as much of the stuff to make a so-called baby a-bomb as it does tb prime one of those Eniwetok jobs.

An atomic explosion is not caused by any means heretofore employed in making explosive matter go bang. The a-bomb has no fuse, no firing pin, in the accepted sense of the term. Uranium-235 or plutonium explodes when sufficient amounts of the stuff are assembled, or flung together briskly, to form a larger and heavier bulk. In other words the a-bomb explodes when its material reaches the right size.

Let us guess that a 20-pound hunk of the stuff is not big enough in itself to achieve detonation. You could bite it, shoot a bullet through it, or drop it out of the Empire State Building and it would not explode. It must be joined, perhaps by mechanical devices within the bombing casing, by another 20-pound piece. Then nothing could stop the 40-pound mass from going off instantly.

• — • — •

What the atomic wizards seem to have achieved recently is a method whereby those two hunks, or a series of smaller chunks amounting to the weight of the two hunks, can be brought almost together or in an uncertain sort of melding.

This creates a detonation which while probably beyond the power of a large conventional bomb or shell, is still tiny compared even to the Model T atomic bomb which knocked Japan out of the war and the so-called midget can be much more safely handled with troops in the vicinity.

As Washington hinted last week it is now possible to achieve an atomic bomb which would not explode at all, in the sense of a loud report, a blasting shock wave and a spread of shrapnel. But this silent "explosion" probably would spread death-dealing radiation about the immediate vicinity where it landed and for some time afterwards. An effect of this sort might be achieved by "teasing" the sub-critical masses inside the bomb or shell, never permitting them actually to get together but letting them get close enough to produce great invisible waves of radioactivity — a terrifying psychological block to any enemy.

Inasmuch as a specific amount of U-235 or plutonium is needed either to produce an Eniwetok holocaust or a poof as modest as the midget born at Las Vegas at the start of these tests, it does not seem likely that there can ever be an atomic bullet.

• — • — •

It seems also that if there is created artillery with atomic shells, the shells will have to be quite large and launched by guns of a design considerably different than big howitzers now banging away at the enemy in Korea.

A-bombs have now been detonated amid targets ranging all the way from battleships to mice. But one has never been tested against the target foremost in the American's mind—his type of home and the type of building in which he works.

Such a test is scheduled for next week in Nevada, during which time what amounts to an American housing community must be built, in order to be destroyed.

The AEC will reach two goals in that test. It will open the experiment to the eyes and ears of the press, radio and television, at the closest possible range, thus satisfying increasing demand for a good look at the world's foremost military tool. Secondly, the test will prove whether or not our cities might be completely leveled by an a-bomb, as was the flimsily-constructed center of Hiroshima. Right now there is considerable speculation in civilian defense circles as to whether the cellar of the standard American home, for instance, is the safest place to hide during an a-bomb attack.

In the meantime, the AEC and Army have more pressing matters at hand. Their joint Operation Desert Rock has run into a series of embarrassing delays which have thrown the timetable out of kilter. Weather and a fine respect for the safety of people on whom radioactive clouds or desert dust might settle have been the chief causes of delays whose cost in dollars must now be slightly titanic.

Hagerstown Is Sentinels' Foe In Initial Game

Locals To Play West Fairmont; Cavanaugh At Helm 24th Season

Fort Hill High will open its 1951-52 basketball season December 11 when Hagerstown's Maroon and Gray will visit here, Coach Bobby Cavanaugh announced last night.

Only one change in the 21-game slate from last season will be made Cavanaugh said as he prepares for his 24th year at the helm of the Sentinel-Penn Avenue cagers.

To Play Polar Bears

Davis High, perennial foe of Fort Hill, will be replaced this year by West Fairmont's Polar Bears. The Bears are being added this season in conjunction with a policy of Fort Hill to play schools in basketball that are being met on the football field. The single meeting between the teams is set for December 14 in the West Virginia city.

The remainder of the slate will be composed of home and home tilts with Western Maryland Interscholastic League opponents and Ridgeley, LaSalle, Martinsburg, Allegany and Hagerstown. Single frays will be played with Moorefield here and an Alumni aggregation. The Sentinels WMI season will get underway January 11, with Central. Other WMI opponents are Bruce, Barton, and Beall.

One Regular Returns

Cavanaugh indicated he will open cage practice some time in the middle of November. Only one regular, George McGregor, will return from last season's WMI and City championship five. Reserve holdovers include John Shore, Dave Ritter and John Poling.

Around this nucleus Cavanaugh will attempt to build a team replacing such stars as "Creepy" Wilson, Lynn Beightol, Ronnie Cage, Eddie Landis, Gerald Null, Carroll Andrews, Donald Brake, Jackie Rice and Schley Lyons who were graduated in June. The schedule follows:

Dec. 11—Hagerstown, home
Dec. 14—West Fairmont, away
Dec. 18—Moorefield, home
Dec. 21—Ridgeley, home
Dec. 27—Alumni, home
Jan. 4—Martinsburg, home

Forty Niners Trounce Rams

Soltau Tops Scorers In 44 To 17 Victory

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 28 (INS)—Gordon Soltau, veteran San Francisco 49er end, scored 26 points this afternoon to lead the 49ers to a 44-17 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

A crowd of 51,987 saw the wild-scoring game between the two rival west coast professional football teams which meet in a return engagement next week in Los Angeles.

The Rams tied it up at 3-3 a few minutes later when Bob Waterfield booted a 26-yard field goal.

Just as the first quarter was ending, 49er halfback Pete Schbarum scored the first 49er touchdown from the two-yard line, capping an 80-yard drive.

Then Soltau, early in the second period, took a 10-yard TD pass from Quarterback Frankie Albert.

Van Brocklin passed a crowd-thriller 39-yard pitch to Elroy Hirsch who made the catch on the San Francisco 40 and went from there for the first Ram touchdown midway in the second period.

The Rams moved 80 yards in 15 plays at the outset of the third period for their second and final touchdown of the game. It was scored by Fullback Dick Hoerner on a 12-yard romp around left end.

Score by periods:

Western Maryland Has Close Call

[By The Associated Press]

Western Maryland will welcome a couple of weeks' breather from Mason-Dixon Conference competition after its close call with Hampden-Sydney's football team.

Coming from an underdog role, Hampden-Sydney almost made its homecoming a success before bowing to the league-leading Marylanders Saturday, 20-15.

The Western Maryland gridders were stopped on the ground by a hard-charging Hampden-Sydney line, and only hit pay dirt when they took to the air. Held to only 67 yards by rushing, the winners' passing game clicked for 133.

Two Hampden-Sydney fumbles proved the Tigers' downfall. Western Maryland turned both into touchdowns.

In another conference game, Randolph-Macon was an expected winner over Bridgewater, 40-13.

In non-conference play, winless Johns Hopkins was dumped again as Gettysburg rolled up a 27-7 victory. Gettysburg outrushed Hopkins only 115 to 98, but its passing game clicked better. Each team tried 26 passes and Gettysburg's 110 yardage outdistanced the Jays by 38.

Next Saturday all Virginia teams will see conference action again. Bridgewater, with a 1-1 record, will be underdog at Hampden-Sydney, seeking its first Mason-Dixon victory. Gallaudet will entertain a favored Randalph-Macon squad at Washington.

Meanwhile, Western Maryland will risk its five-game streak against Drexel at Westminster, Md., and Johns Hopkins will go against Swarthmore on the Pennsylvanians' field.

Stranahan Is Victor

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 28 (INS)—Frank Stranahan of Toledo, O., won the Mexican Amateur Golf Championship today when he defeated U. S. amateur King Billy Maxwell of Odessa, Tex., 3 and 2 in their 36-hole final.

Stranahan was ahead of the North Texas State star throughout the match. The strongman sparkplug heir held a three-up lead at the end of the first 18 holes, aided by Maxwell's poor putting game.

Chicago Blocks Punt To Defeat Detroit, 28-23

Wightkin's Recovery In End Zone Decides

DETROIT, Oct. 28 (AP)—End Ed Sprinkle blocked a fourth period punt and Bill Wightkin recovered the ball in the end zone for a deadlock-breaking touchdown that gave the Chicago Bears a 28-23 victory over the Detroit Lions before 36,950 fans today.

Rookie fullback John Dottley crashed over for two second period Bear touchdowns and George Gulyanics battered across in the third period as the Bears remained in first place of the Western Division of the National Professional Football League.

Quarterback Bobby Layne unleashed a long-gain passing attack that kept the Lions in the game all the way, throwing touchdown passes to ends Leon Hart, Jim Doran, and Dorne Dibble.

Sprinkle crashed through as the Lions were trying to punt on fourth down with the ball on the Detroit 14. The ball bounded on the turf and Wightkin grabbed it on the goal line, stepping over.

Just 99 seconds earlier Gulyanics drove four yards for a Chicago touchdown that tied the score 21-21.

The Lions added two points on a safety minutes after Wightkin's score when Ed Berrang tackled Quarterback Steve Romnik in the Bears' end zone. Score by periods:

Packers Edge Yanks

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (AP)—Quarterback Bob Thomason threw three touchdown passes and Fullback Fred Cone booted a field goal in a ferocious fourth period attack which gave the Green Bay Packers an uphill 29-27 triumph over the winless New York Yanks today in a thrill-packed National Football League game.

Cone's winning three-pointer, a 16-yard kick, came with only 11 second remaining and snatched victory from almost certain defeat. It was the Packers' third victory against two defeats and the Yanks' fourth loss in five starts. The Yanks tied the Detroit Lions last week. Score by periods:

Piedmont Circuit May Add Two Clubs

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 28 (AP)—The Piedmont League's directors today paved the way for the Class B circuit to return to its former eight-team lineup.

The directors, at a four-hour session here, voted to consider the admission of two new clubs.

President Frank Summers declined to disclose the clubs that would be considered for membership. But a reliable source, with close contact to the situation, admitted the two cities are Bluefield, W. Va., and Charleston, W. Va.

Bluefield is currently a member of the Class D Appalachian League and Charleston is in the spread-out Class A. Central League, which extends into Michigan.

The source, who declined to be named, said he didn't think Bluefield and Charleston had applied officially for Piedmont membership.

"But they're definitely interested," he added.

The Piedmont has operated with only six teams since 1942, when the league was composed of five North Carolina cities and three Virginia clubs

Pitt's Homecoming

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 28—The University of Pittsburgh has announced that the football game with Ohio State here, Saturday, November 10, has been set aside as the Homecoming Day attraction.

Pitt was the Homecoming Day Game attraction for Michigan State at East Lansing on November 27.

Browns Beat Giants, 14-13 In Cleveland

56,942 Persons See New York Lose Lead On Missed Place Kick

CLEVELAND, Oct. 28 (AP) — The champion Cleveland Browns struck for two lightning-fast touchdowns in the opening period today to defeat the New York Giants, 14-13, before 56,942 customers in the wind-swept Lakefront Stadium.

The victory pushed the New Yorkers out of the top spot in the American Division of the pro loop as the Browns took over the leadership.

A missed place kick after the Giants' second touchdown provided the margin of victory. The miss was a heartbreaker for Ray Poole, Giant end who had kicked 13 in a row this year before missing today's vital one. Poole also missed a 33-yard place kick in the final minute as the Giants tried to pull the game out of the fire.

The Browns struck for a touchdown on the opening play when Otto Graham passed to Dub Jones on an aerial play that covered 64 yards. The tally went up on the scoreboard in the first 49 seconds.

The Giants, who surrendered only one touchdown to the Browns in three games last year—and that on a fluke—tied the count at the 10-minute mark when Fullback Tom Landry intercepted a pass and dashed 19 yards into the end zone.

Lou Groza had kicked the opening conversion for the Browns and Poole matched it after Landry's score.

Bill Dudley Stars In 27-23 Conquest

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28 (INS)—Bullet Bill Dudley booted two second half field goals and scored a touchdown today to pace the Washington Redskins to a 27 to 23 upset win over the Philadelphia Eagles before 20,437 fans at Shibe Park.

Dudley led the 'Skins to their second National Football League victory by scoring all their points in the last half. The veteran NFL star, who made all Washington's conversions, accounted for fifteen points in the game.

With the 'Skins trailing 17-14 Dudley tied the game in the third period with a 14-yard boot. He added three points in the fourth period from 20 yards out and later skirted around end for a nine-yard touchdown.

Washington's two other touchdowns came on a one-yard plunge by Rob Goode and a 53-yard pass play in which Sammy Baugh pitched to Bob Thomas.

Adrian Burke tossed for two Philadelphia scores. He hit Bob Walston with a 43-yard pass and Clyde Scott in a 53-yard play. Steve Van Buren plunged from the one-yard line for the other td.

Chancellors Gain On K. Of C. Leaders

The Chancellors moved within two games of the front running Guards in the Knights of Columbus Bowling League by winning two out of three from the Recorders yesterday on the Club Recreation alleys.

The Guards dropped two games to the Grand Knights.

Bill "Pick" McDermott, Grand Knights, 192-540; John Carroll, Chancellors, 174-493; Ed "Pie" Conley, Guards, 172-448, and Raymond "Ike" Law, Recorders, 156-445. The standings:

Tigers Belt Cornell, Baylor Is Held Even

By ED CORRIGAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (AP)—When they start giving out plaques and awards for top coaching jobs this year, Charlie Caldwell of Princeton should haul down enough to float a battleship.

Caldwell, the master of the single-wing, and his Tigers were riding high atop an 18-game winning streak today. The longest of any major college team in the nation. But even more important, Princeton faces clear sailing in its quest for a second straight Ivy League title.

After its stunning 53-15 pasting of Cornell yesterday, the Tigers need to whip only Brown, Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth, all Ivy League foes and all patsies.

Rare is the year when an Ivy League team is near the top, but the Tigers were rated No. 8 in last week's Associated Press poll, and this week probably will gain some. Cornell was the favorite for the Ivy championship and there were few observers who thought the Tigers would win, much less massacre the Big Red.

Dick Kazmaier Stars

But as usual, it was Dick Kazmaier, one of the really great backs of the year, who engineered the victory. He scored two touchdowns and passed for three others. But his fine work would have gone for naught if his mates hadn't contained Cornell's aces, Rosco Calvo and Stu Mertz.

It was a rather calm Saturday nationally. The only thing approaching an upset came—naturally—in the Southwest Conference where it usually is an upset if the favorite wins.

Baylor, the seventh ranking team in the country, was tied by Texas A and M 21-21. After last week's drubbing by Texas Christian, the Aggies were being counted out of it, and Baylor was beginning to try on the crown for size. But Baylor still has to face T.C.U., Texas,

Important PVC Grid Game Is Set For Stayman Field

Win Would Net Keyser Title; AHS And LaSalle In 23rd Game Friday

Keyser High School's important game with the West Virginia School for the Deaf will be played at Stayman Field, Keyser, on Thursday at 1:30 p. m., instead of Friday as originally scheduled, Coach Frederick "Tack" Clark of Keyser announced last night.

"The "Golden Tornado" from Mineral County, fresh from a 6-0 upset victory over Moorefield, can sew up the P.V.C. title with a victory over Coach Glenn Hawkins' high-flying Silents who are on a four-game winning streak. Keyser is undefeated in the P.V.C., having won three games and played one tie. West Virginia Deaf School has won its lone start in the PVC and can't qualify for the championship because it's playing only two contests in the 10-team circuit. The Keyserites have shut out four opponents while scoring 44 points in the conference race.

Silents On Warpath

West Virginia Deaf School trounced the New Jersey Silents, 57-0, at Trenton on Saturday and now is the top scoring high school team in the tri-state district with 201 points to its credit.

At Trenton, the West Virginia Silents made eight touchdowns. Jack Riggleman scored thrice, Charles Tackett and Hugh Boyd had two each and Max Pyles scored once. Boyd made three conversions and Tackett and Pyles once apiece. Two safeties also were credited to the Romney team.

Jackets At Berkeley

Sharing interest with the Keyser-Deaf School game is Moorefield High's engagement with Herb Yost's Indians at Berkeley Springs. A Keyser defeat coupled with a Moorefield win would put the Hardy Countians back in first place in the P.V.C. race. The Yellow Jackets of Coach Johnny Paugh have a 4-1 record in the conference.

In another PVC tilt on tap for Friday, Franklin plays at Circleville.

We wish to thank our neighbors, friends and relatives for their acts of love and sympathy during the recent loss of our beloved father, William A. Stitcher; also those who sent floral tributes, loaned cars for the funeral, the pallbearers, and to the entire management including Dr. John K. Rozum and all the nurses of the Allegany Hospital for their many acts of kindness during his last illness.
THE FAMILY

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our beloved Mother, Mrs. Helen Smith, who died October 29, 1946.
Memories and treasures none can steal,
Death leaves a heartache none can heal,
Some have forgotten you now that you're gone,
But we will remember you no matter how long.
Flowers we place upon your grave will wither and decay
But love for the one who sleeps beneath
Will never fade away.
Sadly missed by
Mrs. Hilary Brode & Family

In loving memory of our beloved wife and mother, Mrs. Grace Winters James, who departed this life four years ago today, October 29th.
The blow was hard, the shock severe,
We never thought her death so near,
Only those who have lost can tell
The pain of parting without farewell.
She little thought when leaving home,
That she would never return,
That she so soon in death would sleep,
And leave us here to mourn.
God knows how much we miss her,
Never shall her memory fade
Loving thoughts shall ever wander
To the spot where she is laid.
Sadly missed by Husband & Children

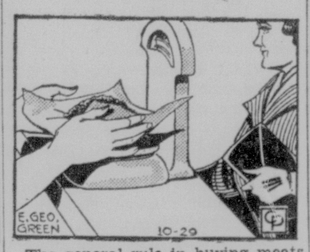
WIFE PRESERVERS



The general rule in buying meats is to allow one-fourth of boneless cuts or ground meat per serving, and one-third to one-half pound per serving for meat that contains some bone. For cuts with large amounts of bone (spareribs, shanks, hocks, etc.), allow three-fourths to one pound per serving.

EXECUTOR'S SALE
OF VALUABLE IMPROVED PROPERTY SITUATED ON EUCLID PLACE, IN CUMBERLAND, ALLEGANY COUNTY, MARYLAND

Under and by virtue of an order of the Orphans' Court for Allegany County, Maryland, dated October 5, 1951, in the matter of the Estate of Christopher Weires, the undersigned will, on TUESDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1951,
AT 10:00 A. M.
on Liberty Street, in Cumberland, Maryland, beside the Second National Bank, sell to the highest bidder:
ALL that lot, piece or parcel of ground situated, lying and being on the Westerly side of Euclid Place (formerly Goodman's Alley) in the City of Cumberland, Allegany County, Maryland, which is more particularly described as follows, to wit:
BEGINNING for the same at a point on the Westerly side of said Euclid Place at its intersection with a line drawn through the center of the division wall between the brick and concrete block dwelling No. 10 located upon the lot hereby conveyed and the brick and concrete block dwelling, No. 6, located on the Southerly side of, and adjoining the lot hereby conveyed, said point of beginning being at the end of 107.9 feet measured in a Northerly direction along the Westerly side of said Euclid Place from the Northerly side of North Mechanic Street, and running thence with the Westerly side of said Euclid place, North 26 degrees 40 minutes East 19.7 feet; thence North 62 degrees 30 minutes West 65 feet to the fourth line of the lot conveyed to The Real Estate and Building Company by two deeds, one from A. A. Wilson, Trustee, dated May 27, 1911, and recorded in Liber No. 108, folio 168, and the other from DeWarren H. Reynolds, Executor, dated February 3, 1922, and recorded in Liber No. 139, folio 526, of the Land Records of said Allegany County; thence with part of said fourth line, South 26 degrees 40 minutes West 19.7 feet to intersect a line drawn in a Westerly direction through the center of the aforesaid division wall; thence reversing said intersecting line and with the center line of said division wall and the same extending, South 62 degrees 30 minutes East 65 feet to the place of beginning. All bearings refer to the Magnetic Meridian of 1911.
THIS PROPERTY IS IMPROVED BY A TWO STORY BRICK DWELLING KNOWN AS NO. 10 EUCLID PLACE, HAVING SIX ROOMS WITH BATH AND A SMALL BASEMENT AND IS EQUIPPED WITH GAS AND ELECTRIC.
TERMS OF SALE: Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) cash on the date of sale, balance upon ratification of the sale by the Orphans' Court for Allegany County, Maryland.
All rents, State, County and City taxes, water rents, insurance and other charges shall be adjusted as of the date of the final ratification of the sale.

Drake Protests Bright's Injury

Oklahoma A. & M. To Study Report

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 28 (AP)—A special fact finding committee of the Missouri Valley Conference, in a closed session today, heard Drake University's protest on the injury of star halfback Johnny Bright in a football game with Oklahoma A. and M. at Stillwater Oct. 20.

Bright was injured early in the game won by Oklahoma A. and M. 27-14 and Drake officials protested that the negro star, the nation's record breaking ground gainer, was the victim of "x x x x vicious, malicious and intentional attacks."

The committee said Oklahoma A. and M. deferred defense until it had time to study the Drake report and meet with its own athletic council and president of the college.

The statement handed the press by A. E. Eilers, of St. Louis valley commissioner:

"The committee heard the Drake protest and submitted the protest to Oklahoma A. and M. authorities. Oklahoma A. and M. has asked for the privilege of studying the Drake report and making a formal statement to the committee. The committee granted this request and will meet again when Oklahoma A. and M. submits its reply."

Snead Wins Warm-Up

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va., Oct. 28 (AP) — Sam Snead — the White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., slammer — today won the American Ryder Cup team's warm-up matches when he fired a four-under-par pyt for a two-day, 36-hole total of 129, nine strokes under regulation figures.

The captain of the American team burned up the Cavalier Yacht and Country Club course for the second straight day as the Americans prepared for the match with the British later this week at Pinehurst, N. C.

Beall, AHS Jayvees Clash Here Today

Junior varsity grid teams of Allegany High School and Beall High School will tangle in the final game of their home and home series today at Campobello.

AHS is undefeated and tied once and will be seeking to sweep the series with Coach Ralph Basilio's eleven today.

penalty and a 42-yard pass from Quarterback Charlie Conerly to Halfback Joe Scott, marched 73 yards in nine plays for its second touchdown, manufactured on a 29-yard aerial from Conerly to End Bob McChesney. It was at that point that Poole missed the big conversion. Score by periods:

Steelers Top Cards

CHICAGO, Oct. 28 (INS) — A three-touchdown rally by the Pittsburgh Steelers in the fourth quarter gave them a 28 to 14 victory today over the Chicago Cardinals in a National Football League game played before 14,773 fans at Comiskey Park.

The Steelers led at the half, 7 to 0, on a second quarter touchdown scored by Val Jansante after he took a pass from Joe Geri. The play covered 46 yards.

Jim Hardy replaced Charley Trippi as quarterback for the Cards in the second half and maneuvered to tie the score at 7 to 7 in the third quarter. His passes, particularly one to Billy Cross, pushed the ball to the Steelers one-yard mark. Cross hit the line for the tying score.

Hardy's passes also set up the second Chicago touchdown. Cross went over from the seven-yard line, giving the Cards a 14 to 7 lead which they carried into the fourth quarter.

Then the Steelers started to roll. They tied the score, 14 to 14 on a 49-yard touchdown pass, Lynn Chadnois to Joe Geri.

Ex-Michigan star Chuck Ortmann put Pittsburgh ahead, 21 to 14, with a touchdown toss to Elbie Nickel that covered 34 yards.

Joe Butler gave the Steelers their final tally when he ran 52 yards with an intercepted pass.

Score by periods:

Pittsburgh Steelers 0 7 0 21—28
Chicago Cardinals 0 0 14 0—14

Vols, Spartans

Southern Methodist and Rice in league encounters.

Tennessee, Michigan State and Georgia Tech, Nos. 1, 2 and 3 in the country, all came through as expected, but the Spartans and the Engineers had some anxious moments, though for different reasons.

Michigan State kept the slate clean with a 53-26 conquest of Pitt, although the Panthers held a 20-19 halftime margin.

Vols Win Easy One

Georgia Tech was stalled by the wretched weather, and barely nosed out Vanderbilt, 8-7. Tennessee, with 15 straight victories did a 68-0 job on Tennessee Tech. But things won't be that easy against North Carolina this Saturday.

Trojans Trim TCU

The Southern California Trojans, shooting for the Pacific Coast Conference crown and the automatic Rose Bowl bid that goes with it, had to tally two touchdowns in the final quarter to bat down Texas Christian, 28-26.

In other Pacific Coast action, California throttled Oregon State, 35-14. Stanford stayed in the running for the title by stopping Washington, 14-7. Now it looks as though the Southern Cal-Stanford game on Nov. 10 will decide the title. Washington State beat Oregon, 41-6, in a game that had no bearing on the race.

The Big Ten battle took a turn for the better as far as Illinois is concerned. The Illini polished off Indiana, 21-0, while Wisconsin was slaughtering previously unbeaten Northwestern, 41-0. Michigan steamrolled Minnesota, 54-27, and Ohio State defeated Iowa, 47-21, in other conference games. Both Michigan and Illinois still are unbeaten in the conference.

Army finally pulled down a victory and from an unexpected source. After going winless all season, the Cadets defeated Columbia, 14-9, so the Army-Navy game on Dec. 1 won't be between two teams that haven't won a game. Navy took another trimming, this one from Penn, 14-0.

In the Big Seven, Oklahoma, last year's national champion, pasted Colorado, 55-14, and in the process probably assured itself of another league championship. In other league games, Missouri defeated Nebraska, 35-19, and Kansas tripped Kansas State, 33-14.

Maryland Trips Tigers

Notre Dame halted Purdue, 30-9, and Babe Parilli hurled a pair of touchdown passes as Kentucky nipped Florida, 14-6. Maryland, the fifth-ranking team in the nation, overcame Louisiana State, 27-0, and Texas, No. 10, put the crusher on Rice, 14-6.

In other important games, Dartmouth defeated Harvard, 26-20; Iowa State shut out Drake, 13-0; Wake Forest battered North Carolina, 39-7; Alabama triumphed over Mississippi State, 7-0; Auburn stopped Tulane, 21-0; Yale rode over Colgate, 27-7; Virginia rammed Duke, 30-7; Villanova defeated Houston, 33-27; Santa Clara upset Arkansas, 21-12, and Holy Cross stopped Brown, 41-6.

Conference Called To Discuss Plan For Local Crosstown Bridge

Congressman Beall, City Solicitor Cobey Are Arranging Meet

As a forward step toward the ultimate elimination of downtown traffic and parking congestion in Cumberland, a conference has been called for 10 a. m. Friday morning in the City Hall auditorium between federal, state, city and railroad officials.

Rep. J. Glenn Beall, congressman from the Sixth Maryland District disclosed yesterday that Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin and representatives of the State Highway Commission will attend, along with a representative from the Federal Bureau of Roads. W. Earle Cobey, city solicitor, said he is contacting city officials and representatives of the Baltimore and Ohio and Western Maryland railroads.

Crosstown Bridge Seen

Rep. Beall conferred with City Solicitor Cobey on the traffic question over the weekend.

Last night, Rep. Beall said the most frequently recommended solution to Cumberland's traffic congestion is a crosstown viaduct or bridge over Wills Creek, both railroads and downtown parallel streets.

Commonly referred to as a crosstown bridge, this proposal first came into serious consideration, Rep. Beall recalled, in 1938 when he was a member of the State Roads Commission. At that time, the project had been fairly well agreed upon and planned, but it was delayed by the war and other projects were put ahead of it, such as the Savage River Dam and Cumberland-Ridgeley flood control.

Early Start Proposed

Rep. Beall noted that "with the Savage River Dam completed and flood control well underway, it seems a logical time to begin definite planning for a program of action on the crosstown bridge."

In 1949, the State Highway Commission recommended a crosstown route (including a viaduct) from a point near Greene and Johnson streets to Maryland Avenue near Emily Street. That survey also included a recommendation for a central to southwest route from Greene and Johnson streets to Route 220 south and a central to southeast route from downtown to Oldtown Road.

However, the conference here Friday is expected to deal largely with plans for the crosstown bridge, which will take traffic from Greene Street, McMullen Highway (Route 220) and the West Side, across the city to Route 40 (east), and of course, also in the opposite direction.

The plans call for approaches at Mechanic and Centre streets, so down town traffic could enter or leave the bridge. This would eliminate the Baltimore Street bottleneck, engineers claim, and still give shoppers an easy access to the city's downtown shopping area.

To Air Crossing Problem

City Solicitor Cobey said last night that he conferred with C. T. Williams, superintendent of the Cumberland Division, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad on proposals to close crossings and construct an overpass near Harrison Street. This idea may also come up at the conference Friday, Cobey noted, although the crosstown viaduct will probably be the major order of business.

Prime purpose of the conference, Cobey and Beall explained, is to get all interested officials properly informed on the problem, and if possible, to reach an early agreement on a solution. Beall is of the opinion that the federal government can bear part of the cost, part can probably be borne by the state, part by the railroads and the city's cost would not be prohibitive, under such an arrangement.

Millionth Traffic Victim Will Die Before January 1

By LYNN WALKER
(President, Western Maryland Safety Council)

Somewhere among the 150 million people in our nation today there is an individual marked with an invisible sign.

Sometime between now and January 1, 1952, that individual, man, woman or child, has a date with destiny. Driving or walking, night or day, the peculiar combination of circumstances will arise that cause just one more traffic accident and the wearer of the sign will be revealed as Victim "X".

Victim "X" will be the millionth victim claimed by automobiles in America since the beginning of the Century.*

The name of Victim "X" will not be inscribed on a plaque, no monument will be raised to his memory for the brutal truth is this: Because of the mass murder tactics we have accepted in the use of automobiles he will never be known by name. Our National average of 100 traffic deaths a day is our assurance that Victim "X" will be claimed sometime within the space of the next two months.

Greater Toll Than War

A parallel "X" has already kept his date, G. I. "X" fell in Korea sometime during the week of September 2, 1951. Traffic, in 50 years has killed as many humans as all the wars in which the United States has been engaged.

There is a tragic parallel in these two shadowy figures although they are 10,000 miles apart. Since the battle of Lexington on April 19, 1775 these men in uniform have paid with their lives that we might continue to live in a free land. Their deeds reflect credit to our nation and they fell in the name of freedom and independence.

Disgrace To Mankind

Since the turn of the century we have had a new kind of killer to contend with. This one takes its victims from civil and military ranks, it accepts women and children, old and young, rich and poor.

Engineers strive to give it more power, more speed, greater smoothness and it kills over 30,000 a year. Their deaths reflect nothing but disgrace on our civilization and they fell in the name of carelessness and thoughtlessness.

Maybe the total elimination of war as a national policy is too much to hope for at the present time, but we CAN do something about automobile deaths.

When you, as an individual driver, realize that you have a share in the responsibility for preventing accidents and start to use common sense in your every day driving, we will start to solve the problems that the automobile has brought to us.

State PTA Meeting Set

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 28 (AP) —The Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers will open a two-day convention here Thursday with the problems of children and young adults a main topic.

The 36th annual meeting will include panel discussions and a symposium.

Among the speakers will be Mrs. John E. Hayes, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Dr. Daniel A. Prescott of the Institute of Child Study in the College of Education at the University of Maryland.

Thursday afternoon there will be a panel discussion on "Young Adults in Troubled Times" and in the evening there will be a symposium on "Our Citadels of Security—Home, School, Church," the general convention theme.

The Weather

A dismal morning yesterday developed into a changeable afternoon. The sun broke through the clouds occasionally with the winds acting up now and then. High temperature as registered by the official weather station at Constitution Park was 67 degrees, low was 51 and at 8:30 p. m. mercury read 52 degrees. The amount of rainfall was .04 and humidity at 6 p. m. was 64 per cent. The housewife can look forward to a partly cloudy wash day which will be rather windy and cooler.

Local Couple Will Join Tour To Havana, Cuba

L. E. Randall, 519 Avirett Avenue, local International Harvester zone manager, and his wife have been awarded a 10-day, all-expenses-paid trip to Miami Beach and Havana, Cuba, starting November 5, for leading all other zone managers in the Parkersburg district in refrigeration sales in a company-wide sales contest that ended October 1.

Randall sold the highest percentage of his assigned quota during the 61 days of the August-September contest.

Mr. and Mrs. Randall are leaving here on Nov. 5 by plane, for Miami Beach, where on Monday, November 5, they will meet the other 500 members of the International Harvester party. Harvester has planned a busy program of social functions at the Roney-Plaza in Miami Beach. On Wednesday, November 7, they will sail from Miami on the chartered S. S. Florida for Havana, Cuba. The Nacional Hotel has been reserved as a home for the party in Havana and will be the focal point of a round of entertainment and sight seeing.

Paper Collection Today

Waste paper will be collected today beginning at 9 a. m. on West Side. Residents are reminded to securely bundle the paper.

Three Deeds Record Property Sales

Three property sales were recorded in deeds which have been filed in the office of the clerk of Circuit Court.

Dorsey A. Ensor and Mary A. Ensor have sold property at the southwest corner of Edgewood Drive and Holland Street to John J. Robinson and Laura W. Robinson for about $15,000.

Rudolph Nickel sold property on the northeast side of Frost Avenue in Frostburg to William J. McFarland and Mary T. McFarland for about $11,500. Kenneth L. Bobo, Sr., and Ethel I. Bobo transferred ownership of property on Cromer Street in Westernport to Harry V. Reeves, Sr., for about $5,000.

Washington Camp Marks Anniversary

Washington Camp No. 86, Patriotic Order Sons of America, of Ellerslie, recently observed its 40th anniversary and honored its 11 surviving charter members with a dinner at St. Mark's Evangelical Church, Ellerslie.

The principal speaker was Rev. Frederick D. Oberkirker. A musical program was presented by the Madden Brothers and Darlene Miller. There was a vocal solo by Rev. C. W. Roby.

County Farmers Urged To Sell Their Scrap

Form Letter Will Urge Cooperation

A form letter will be sent to virtually all of Allegany County's approximately 1,000 farmers this week urging them to cooperate in the farm scrap drive sponsored by the County Agricultural Mobilization Committee.

Special Demand

The letter will ask the farmers to cooperate in rounding up farm scrap this fall, preferably by November 15, and selling it to scrap dealers. The higher grade, heavier types of scrap found on farms are in special demand.

In part the letter will read:

"Scrap prices are comparatively good right now. Generally, farmers can count on getting higher prices than they received for scrap in World War II. Scrap prices are controlled by the Office of Price Stabilization.

Farmers To Gain

"In the long run, farmers stand to gain when scrap moves to mills in sufficient quantities. Scrap helps guarantee continued production of farm machinery and equipment.

"Iron and steel scrap is wanted especially. There has been no call for the lighter metals, such as aluminum, or for such other materials as scrap rubber or paper. A partial list of items to look for: plow points and shares, cultivator shovels and sweeps, other broken machine parts, horse-drawn equipment replaced by a tractor, old electrical wires and cable, worn-out storage batteries, windmill and watertank towers replaced by modern pressure systems. You can include wire and screening, too. This lighter scrap is in greater demand than it used to be since more steel products are made in lighter weights today."

Albert O'Neal is chairman of the Agricultural Mobilization Committee.

Grantsville Man Hurt In Accident

A Grantsville man was taken to Memorial Hospital last night in an unconscious condition, State Police reported, following a highway accident about 6 p. m. on Keyser's Ridge.

Police identified the automobile driver as George J. Fazenbaker, 46. He was reported to have sustained a possible fractured skull.

Cause of the accident is unknown, police said and Fazenbaker, alone at the time, ran off the road and upset the automobile near the intersection of Route 219 and 40. Investigating the accident is Trooper Glenn Folk. The automobile, police said, was damaged considerably.

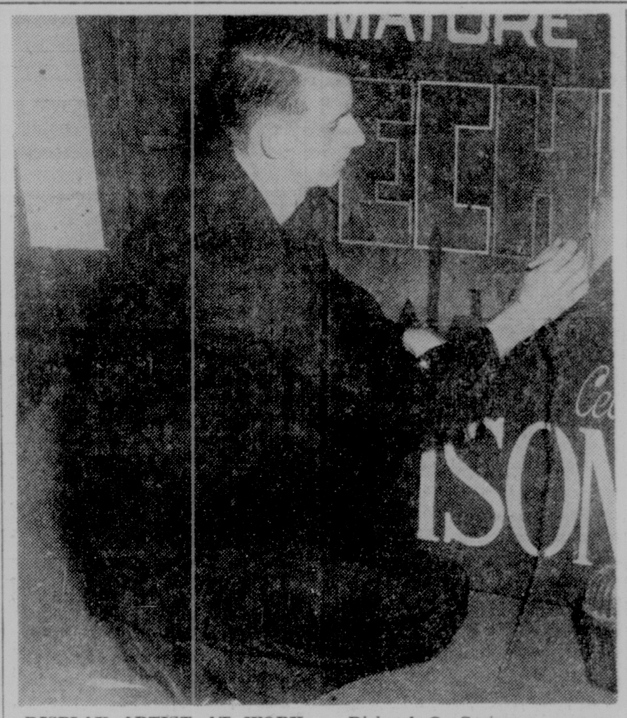
Briefs

Donald C. Brake, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Donald F. Brake, 203 Grand Avenue, was pledged by the Kappa Delta Rho fraternity in ceremonies taking place recently at Gettysburg (Pa.) College. Brake, a member of the freshman class, is majoring in history. He is a pre-ministerial student.

Hunting squirrels with his brother yesterday in the Barrelville section, Lee Robey, 336 Avirett Avenue, shot a gray fox, but no squirrels. His brother killed two squirrels.

Ivan C. Diehl of Frostburg, district Rotary governor, will address the Cumberland Rotary Club Tuesday at 12:15 p. m. at the Central YMCA. He will also conduct a club assembly at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club Tuesday following a 6 p. m. dinner.

Samuel H. James, 24, of Oldtown, has enlisted in the Air Force at the local recruiting station. He will be assigned to Sampson Air Force Base at Geneva, N. Y. for basic training.



DISPLAY ARTIST AT WORK — Richard O. Springer, seaman apprentice, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennie H. Springer, Bedford Road, is seen above putting some finishing touches on a display at Little Creek, Va. The young display artist and sign painter is the newly assigned staff artist for Commander, Amphibious Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet. While a civilian he did similar work and is a graduate of Fort Hill High School class of 1949. He was art editor of the school's newspaper "Sentinel" and artist for the classbook "Saber" for two years.

Today's Sermonette

For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God. I Corinthians 1:18.

By REV. MILTON M. ROBINSON

The Miracle Of The Cross

The most miraculous thing about this miracle we call Jesus is His cross. Nearly everything we know about Him is a miracle to us. It is a miracle that Jesus, God and Son of God should be born of a virgin, spend His childhood in the lowly carpenter's home, submit to human temptation, minister to the humble as well as the great, and choose obscure men such as Peter, a fisherman, or Levi, a tax collector, for His followers rather than rich men or great men. But the fact that fills us with the greatest awe is that Christ, the Son of God, should come to earth for the express purpose of dying the ignoble death of the cross. But then Christ does not do things the way the rest of humanity does.

The Christ of the cross is the distinctive feature of Christianity. You can take the personality of the founder out of any other religion and it will still exist inviolate. But take Christ out of Christianity and you will cut out its heart. Jesus Christ is Christianity. He is the sustainer of the human race. He is the incentive to righteous living. He is directly or indirectly the prime-mover behind every humanitarian cause since His death and resurrection. And yet the world doesn't realize it!

In thinking of the Christ of the cross we should ask ourselves certain questions. Why did Christ die like that? Why do we live as though Christ had not died? Why don't we take sin seriously? Who is capable of preaching the cross? Why has the cross, a symbol of shame, become the symbol of life?

The answers in part are: Christ died like that to save men from sin, to give them eternal life, to show God's loathing of sin and His love for men. We live as though Christ had not died because we don't take sin seriously. We're ungrateful and thoughtless. We're indifferent to the price Christ paid for our redemption. We don't want anything to interfere with our selfish pleasure, even if it is contrary to Christ's will. We live for the pleasure of the moment and care nothing for tomorrow. We fail to realize that tomorrow is eternity. No one is really capable of preaching the cross. It is too final. Its mystery is too great. It is too divisive. Our minds are too limited by our humanity to comprehend its greatness much less describe it. But because Christ has died upon it, the cross, which was formerly a symbol of degrading shame has become the symbol of life, hope, and of peace to the repentant.

There is only one way to heaven and one way to God and that is through the Christ of the cross. He has dignified and glorified the symbol of shame and you must accept it if you accept Him. There are two sides to the cross, the right side and the wrong side. On which side are you? Do you know Him as your Lord? Confess Him! Accept Him! He is the way to eternal life!

Tree Uprooted In Auto Mishap

An automobile traveling west on Braddock Road left the highway yesterday afternoon, turned over and caused considerable damage at the residence of Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of Allegany County School. None of the three occupants of the car was injured seriously, police noted.

James Victor Walker, 30, of Baltimore, driver of the car, was taken into custody by Lt. Edwin R. Lilya and Officer William Valentine and will be given a hearing today at 10:30 a. m. on charges of reckless driving and operating a vehicle without license, police said.

The two other occupants were Gerald D. Hare and Robert Hare. The automobile, according to police, went out of control, turned over and rolled into the front yard and driveway of the Kopp residence. A tree was uprooted and shrubbery and hedge torn out. The automobile was practically demolished, police added.

Walker told police an automobile coming from the opposite direction crowded him, causing the mishap.

Meeting Postponed

A meeting of Hyndman, Pa., residents called for last night to discuss an overhead bridge at the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad crossing there was postponed until the first of this week.

Harris Gives Mrs. Schurg Six Years

Declares Murder Verdict Warranted

Three prison sentences were meted out in Allegany County Circuit Court, one of them for six years to the 22-year-old Hoffman mother convicted of the manslaughter death of her husband.

Judge Morgan C. Harris on Saturday ordered Mrs. Shirley (Meek) Schurg sent to the Maryland Reformatory for Females. She had been convicted by a jury early last week.

Her husband died August 10 in Miners Hospital, Frostburg, of internal hemorrhages caused by a bullet wound inflicted by her four days earlier.

"The explanation that he stayed out late and you wanted to scare him does not seem enough reason to shoot him," Judge Harris declared in sentencing Mrs. Schurg.

He said he did not believe her defense that she backed into a chair and discharged the gun accidentally. He said the jury would have been justified in returning a verdict of first degree murder.

"There is an important undisclosed motive in this case and only you know what it is," Judge Harris told the defendant.

"I have come to the conclusion that since you are so emotionally unstable it might not be safe for the children to be in your custody."

He referred to the couple's two small daughters.

Judge Harris also sentenced two Eckhart men, George Bullett and Nachoma Bullett, to three years each in the House of Correction. They have been convicted of receiving stolen goods.

Judge Harris also imposed three year terms for each of the two other counts in the indictment to which the men had pleaded guilty. The sentences will run concurrently.

At Martinsburg, William L. Hudson, 26-year-old Shepherd College student from Antioch, W. Va., had a rape charge that had been filed against him dismissed at a hearing yesterday.

However, police then swore out a warrant against him on the larceny of a watch from the plaintiff in the rape case, Mrs. Elva Rollison, 30, of Hamilton, W. Va. Police testified they found her wrist watch in his possession when he was arrested Sunday. He was freed under $500 bail pending action of the February grand jury of Berkeley County Circuit Court.

Membership Is Urged By VFW Judge Advocate

Leaders Of Eastern States Attend Meeting

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (AP)—Two hundred eastern leaders of the Veterans of Foreign Wars were told today that in recent years the VFW has "lost more members out the back door than we have taken in the front."

The statement was made by Merton B. Tice, lawyer from Mitchell, S. D., and National Judge Advocate of the VFW.

He spoke at a meeting of leaders from five eastern states—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland—and the District of Columbia.

The meeting was held to plan a recruiting drive through which the VFW hopes to get 3,000 new members by next June.

Tice said the membership now is 1,200,000 and if it should drop below 1,000,000 "we will lose everything—revenue, prestige and the results of 52 years of hard work."

Saying that the VFW is "one of the strongest forces" against Communism in this country, Tice added:

"We have got to get the membership and, by heaven, we're going to get the membership."

Tice heads a four-man panel which plans to visit key cities, helping to organize the recruiting drive.

Safety Week Will Feature Many Events

Dinner Tuesday Set As Highlight

A Western Maryland Safety Council dinner meeting at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow at Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club has been arranged as one of the features of the third annual Allegany County Safety Week.

One of the highlights of the dinner meeting will be a demonstration of "Magic of Fire" by William Eathorne, Pittsburgh, Pa., who is with the United States Department of Interior's Bureau of Mines.

First In Area

This is the first time this program has been presented in this area and should be of much interest to the approximately 100 persons who will attend the affair.

Eathorne proves in a series of experiments that many of the common household items found in every kitchen and pantry will cause either fire or an explosion under certain favorable conditions.

Toastmaster at the dinner will be John J. Long, commissioner of the Police and Fire Departments. Rev. L. P. Landrigan, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church, will deliver the invocation.

Among the speakers will be C. T. Williams, superintendent of the Cumberland Division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and a member of the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission. He will speak on the activities of the commission.

Melvin L. Fine, chairman of the State Industrial Accident Commission, will address the group on industrial safety. Simon F. Reilly, commissioner, and Joseph A. Haller, director of safety, also will speak.

Members of the District Mine Rescue Team from Kitzmiller, national champions for 1951, will be special guests at the dinner. They will present a short demonstration of mine rescue equipment and methods. L. C. Hutson, University of Maryland instructor of mine safety engineering, and H. B. Buckley, district mine inspector, of Kitzmiller, will accompany the team.

Rescue Truck

The District Mine Rescue Truck will be located at Baltimore and Centre Streets from 10 a. m. until 2 p. m. Tuesday for public inspection.

Four downtown Cumberland window displays have been arranged for this Safety Week. There will be a traffic safety display in the C&A Gas Company window, a safety equipment display at 22 North Centre Street, a window display at the C&P Telephone Company and window posters at the Liberty Trust Company.

Special school and service club programs for Safety Week also will be conducted around the county.

The County Safety Week is sponsored by the State Industrial Accident Commission and the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission and is being directed by the Western Maryland Safety Council.

"Close The Book On Accidents" has been designated as the theme for the week ending Saturday.

Promotes Safety

The Western Maryland Safety Council is composed of representatives of the State Department, industry, City, County and State Police and Fire Departments, organ-
